The Most Perfect Substitute for Stained Glass

MANUFACTURED AT THE LINENHALL WORKS, BELFAST, IRELAND. This is a series of transparent design, from the simplest to the most elaborate and complex, enabling any person with a reasonable amount of mane and ingenuity to produce patterns on window, taylog all the beauty of the real stained glass, at a very small cost. The alvanings a of this invention will be appreciated when it is conditioned that so many win own have a disagreeable outlook; which can now by meet sof the Pater. Decoration, be faut out from view, and the beauty of the interior enhanced while the labor of afflating the cestign is no more than a pie sant pastime and exercise of skill in while his less and exhibiten can take part. In cases where no disagreeable view exists, there may be puttions of the house where there is an a case of light, and the covering of part of the glass with these deels s will be found to be an improvement. Whadows on stair landings are princularly good subjects for the alternative by the "Glacter" Decoration; while almost all windows, in whatever position, will be improved in appears or by having a pertion of the glass at top or sides covered with suitable designs. Unlike many things invented for the purpose of window decoration, this cannot be rubbed off the window or defaced by cleaning.

A FULL LINE UF PIPES AT PAULES that defy competition at HANTMAN'S TALLOW FRONT CHEAR

We shall begin our examination by bringing ourselves directly in front of the three great classes of opinions which are entertained by the thoughtful people of this community. We can then look the problem squarely in the face.

First consider those who hold to the extreme conservative view. They claim that women are by nature and construction the physical and intellectual inferiors of men, physical and intellectual inferiors of men, although they possess certain peculiar powers which fit them especially for the peculiar duties of womanhood which they are called upon to perform. They assert that marriage and the bearing and rearing of children consumes the major part of woman's energies, and is and should be the most important and for the beat set of the most important, and for the best part of her most important, and for the best part of her life the single, interest of her being. That she is not fit for general work, and her en-gagement in any business competition is bound to prove a failure and invariably to put in peril the happiness of the home, and the health of herself and her children. That since marriage is the supposable and proper future of all young women, it is wrong for their lives to be built or their characters to be shaped in any way which will undit them in any degree for leading happy and healthy married lives, bearing strong children, and educating them to the age of manhood or womanhood. They assert that it is foolish to be led astray in assert that it is foolish to be led astray in this matter by dwelling on the compara-tively small contingent of women who do not marry, or to amend the great natural laws for them which will injuriously affect laws for them which will injuriously affect the mass of mankind. That the real strongth of women lies in the personal in-fluence which a simple and innocent life possesses over rude and wicked men, and that their development should proceed in this direction. That there is no more beautiful ambition for a woman, after that of bringing up useful and moral citizens, than the especial privilege she has of brightening the home and alleviating the cares and sorrows of life for her husband, brother, father, or as the case may be. That the sum of the new philosophy is to isplace women from the pedestal on which a long chain of civilizing influences has placed them, and to expose them again to placed them, and to expose them again to the rade struggle with the hardships of the world for which they are un-fitted and from which they will issue as before, haggard and worn in health, and little and despised and dishonored before men. The general conclusion is that all the modern tendencies toward granting women the best advantages of education, admitting them to industrial pur

and that it is opposed to the welfare of women and the society whose health and happiness is so largely dependent on the health and happiness of its wives and No Real Inequality Between the Sexes. The extreme wing of the new philosophy holds to exactly opposite propositions, They contend that the apparent inequality between men and women results entirel from education and inheritance. their intellectual and physical possibilities are in every respect equal, and that time will soon demonstrate this truth, after a few decades of natural life and sound mental training. That the apparent physical limitations on woman's life are the result of a long neglect of the simple laws of health, and that the bearing of children and other natural processes need not in a bealthystate of the constitution cause eithe danger or inconvenience. That women will probably lose some share of their physical beauty from a contact with the things of the world, and perhaps most of their pretty and childish ways, but that the loss will be more than made up to them in the sound sense and general in-formation which they will be forced to acquire. That material independence is essential to the full development of character, and that personal responsibility in the matter of time and talents is impossible with most people without steady occupa-tion. That marriage is after all only a happy accident, as the preponderance of women over men tends to prove, and that marriage should be treated as a collateral and not a first aim with women. That women at present utterly neglect the development of personal character in their chase of husbands, and that it is a shame-ful state of affairs which so often requires women to marry as a means of support, which is now their necessity in the majority of cases. That unless women engage in lucrative occupations they must either starve, depend upon charity, or marry. They prefer marriage. That the present employments of women are unfitted for them and are highly unremunerative, and that they should be granted access to the best opportunities for self support. The general conclusion is that the present tendency is a thoroughly healthy one and that the end of the development will be erasure of all social distinctions between The middle View of the Question. The third class of opinion takes a middle ground. It includes men and women who are too fair-minded to be blind to the great encumbrances which are now placed upon the development of the female character, and who admit that it is lowering to women to be forced to depend entirely on men for their pecuniary support, and that it gives men a power over them which is hurtful to all the best interests of so that it gives men a power over them which is hurtful to all the best interests of so ciety. They frankly admit that women would gain wisdom, practical habits of work, and conscience in the matter of time and talents by engaging in steady pursuits. They admit that the capacity of the minds of women to receive the highest form of intellectual training is no longer open to discussion, and that in all possible cases women should be granted the best oppor tunities of education. They say that the fact that their lives will be happier for it, and the smallest duties of their homes better performed for it, is sufficient warrant for this opinion. They are by no means persuaded that a very high degree of mental training is beyond her physical powers of endurance. They cheerfully recognize the fact that women are often called upon to earn their own living by force of circumstances, some being withwithout opportunity for marriage, and that it is a cruel hardship that so many hindrances should be placed in their way.

But, on the other hand, they arge that it is quite absurd to say that the difference between the sexes will ever be obliterated, or that it is only the result of an unbealthy development, or that such distinctions as do now exist will ever be explained away as the result of artificial couditions of the sexes among the lower animals. That it is impossible to avoid the rel issue that the vast majority of women do marry at about twenty years of age, and that by marriage they are to a certain extent reduced to a dependent

THE WOMAN QUESTION.

THE PEOBLEM.

All Ridge of an Important Social study Presented—Are Women Saturally the industrial value, and there is no possible hope of its ever being otherwise; leaving out of account the very scrious consideration as to whether their constitutional structure even before marriage does not impose certain restrictions and limitations of the three great classes of opinions which are entertained by the thoughtful people of this community. We can then look the problem squarely in the face.

First consider those who hold to the extreme apparentiate view. There also when the force it is proper that the mother that therefore it is proper that the mother than the face in competition is often the loss of health, and that therefore it is proper that the mother should be spared as far as possible the labor and excitement of industrial compe-tition. In general the important rules of society concerning women should conform to the established fact that the office of bearing and rearing children is the fair share of women in the distribution of the world's economy. Recentment of the platner Washington Letter to the Philadelphia Time It is well known in Washington among those well acquainted with the present secretary of state and his family and Mr. Blaine and his, that the latter have never felt kindly towards the former since Mr. Frelinghuysen succeeded Mr. Blaine as secretary of state. Neither Mr. or Mrs. Blaine have ever, as the writer knows, taken the slightest pains to conceal this ill feeling. Mrs. Blaine is always expensed. taken the slightest pains to conceal this ill feeling. Mrs. Blaine is always especially frank in mentioning openly her dislike of any one. More than one person who was at a dinner gives in January, 1882, by President Arthur to members of his cabinet and a few others has told me how openly both Mr. and Mrs. Blaine, who were present, showed that they felt agwith Mr. Blaine's successor as head of the department of state. The dinner oc-curred not long after the succession had been effected. Mr. Blaine sat opposite the president, and the latter, with an evident desire to make himself agreeable to Mr. Blaine, addressed him several times across the table as "Mr. Secretary." The first time he did it, Mr. Blaine, as my informant, who was present, said, looked annoyed, and, when it was repeated, said to the lady next him: "If he calls me that again I'll take him up." "Oh, don't," pleaded the lady; "don't notice it." But, deaf to her wise counsel, Mr. Blaine, the next time the president called him, "Mr. Secretary," electrified the whole table by exclaiming with acrimony, "How can you call me by that title of which you have deprived me?" With consumate tact, the president answered: "Oh, I thought once a secretary, always a secretary—like once a general, always a general, once a governor, always a governor." But even president, and the latter, with an evident governor, always a general, 'once a governor, always a governor.' But even this diplomatic reply did not dissipate the unpleasant feeling, and more than one who was present has said to the writer: "It was the most uncomfortable dinner I ever attended, owing to Mr. and Mrs. Blaine's evident desire to make it so."

suits, and encouraging them to industrial pur-suits, and encouraging them to the pur-suit of aims and personal ambitious colla-teral to marriage is falsely, fatally, and wickedly against nature, and, while pre-tending to seek their material elevation, will certainly result in their degradation; No Water for Fleven Days. The shipwrecked crew of the British Bark Benefactiess were adriit in an open boat, supporting lite on some bits of dry bread and a few sppies. This was slim fare, and refluent income to a state of great feebleneners. But Br wa's iron Bitters brings enteculed folks up rapidly, even from such depths as this. It enriches the blood, tones the system, and gives heatthful strength. Mr. Wm. Hardee, of knnis, Tevas, writes that he had dyspeps'a in its worst form, but was restored by Brown's fron bitters.
