BEDAY EVENING, SEPT., 16, 1884 OUR VILLAGE BELLE.

She was our village belle.
Hear me tell
How she fitted with the teacher
And the single village preacher
And the swell. She said she was eighteen.

Was I green? Sev'ral siender streaks of gray That through her hair did stray Could be seen. And to the church she often went Most intent On all the preacher said. And at his prayers her head

Then she'd giance across the aisle At the style

That the viliage swell would fling,
And she'd think to win a ring

And his pile. And then behind her fan She would scan, And the teacher's jealous look,

As his face rose over his book, Thin and wan. But she wed none of these three. Woe is to me! For my father wooed another,

It is she!

A Story of Arctic Explorers. From the London Budget. From the London Budget.

Now that so much discussion has been raised on the subject of the alleged cannibalism in the Greely expedition, some interest may be felt in another dreadful story of privation and danger, where a similar temptation was heroically resisted as told by James McIntosh, sole survivor from one of the boats of the whaler Chieftain. On May 26 last the Chieftain sent out four boots in chase of a whale, two of which, one commanded by Alexander Bain, the harpooner, lost the ship, and failing to find her, shaped their course for Iceland. Some days later two of Bain's crew died, and McIntosh then came into Bain's boat from the other to act as steersman. The only other occupants of the boat then were Bain and a seaman named McGregor. On the following day Bain thought he saw land, and they altered their course to steer to it, but found it to be only the reflection of a cloud. By so doing they lost their consort, which did not follow them. Next day McGregor died, and his body was committed to the deep. The same day a storm arose, which lasted three days, during all of which time McIntosh remained at his post as steersman while Bain lay helpless and despairing in the bows. At last the storm abated, and the undaunted steersman addressed some cheering words to his comrade but without rousing him from his lethargy, which undaunted steersman addressed some cheering words to his comrade but without rousing him from his lethargy, which continued to long that McIntosh at last grew anxious, and though hardly able to move, his legs being benumbed with cold, managed to crawl along on his hands and knees to the bow of the boat, and found Bain quite dead. A terrible sense of utter loneliness came over him, mingled with the foar that in his desperate condition (he had not tasted food of any kind for several days) he might yield to the temptation of supporting himself on the awful means of nourishment within his reach. Determined to avoid this danger at all events, he with a great effort, ger at all events, he with a great effort, weak as he was, succeeded in heaving his dead comrade's body overboard. On the fourteenth day he perceived a small schooner and made a desparate effort to schooner and made a desperate effort to wave his cap to attract attention. He was seen and picked up by the ship, but it was found necessary to amputate both legs, mortification having set in. He finally arrived at Dundee on Friday week. This gallant fellow, who is married and has one child, is now in a perfectly destitute condition, as the loss of his legs precludes his returning to his former seafaring occupation, and he has never learned any other trade.

any other trade. Mand had a fine figure, good face and pretty name. One should see her at a distance. When she began to talk, you realized that she never used SOZODONT. Her breath was unlike the breezes of Aral y the blest. #16-1wdeod&w

A c'ertect medicine Chest.

SING SING, N. Y., POSTOFFICE, March 19, 1883. One week ago, while engaged in my duties as assistant postmater, I was taken with a violent pain or kink in my back; it was so painful I could hardly breathe, and I ached all over my body. I immediately sent for an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER and applied it over the seat of pain; in twenty minutes I was enthe seat of pain ; in twenty minutes I was entirely relieved and cared. I have used All-cock's Plasters in my family for ever twenty years, and have found them wonderfully effective in curing coughs, colds and pulmonar difficulties. They are a perfect medicine chest they cure without the slightest pain or incor lence, never leaving a mark on the skin

President of Village of Sing Sing, N. Y. When purchasing a porous plaster, be sure to set * Allcock's.* All other so called Porous Plasters are imitations.
