STAINED GLASS WINDOWS
AT A VERY TRIFLING COST.
M'CAW, STEVENSON & ORR'S
Patent "Glacier" Window Decoration.
The Most Perfect Substitute for Stained Glass.
Manufactured at the LINENHALL WORKS, BELFAST, IRELAND.
This is a series of transparent design, from the simplest to the most elaborate and complex, enabling any person with a reasonable amount of taste and ingenuity to produce pictures on windows, having all the beauty of the real stained glass, at a very small cost. The advantage of this invention will be appreciated when it is considered that no man with any artistic taste or ability, who can see the beauty of the interior enhanced, while the labor of fixing the design is no more than a few minutes and exercise of skill in which ladies and children can take part. In cases where no disagreeable view exists, there may be portions of the house where there is an excess of light, and the covering of part of the glass with these designs will be found to be an improvement. Windows on stair landings are particularly good subjects for treatment by the "Glacier" decoration; and in whatever position will be improved in appearance by having a portion of the glass at top or sides covered with artistic designs. Unlike many things invented for the purpose of window decoration, this cannot be rubbed off the window or defaced by cleaning.

THE CASE OF PAT WOOD.
AN ASSAULT ON A CARPETBAGGER.
An Irishman Thrown into an American Jail on the Warrant of a Republican Member of the House of Representatives.

As throwing some light upon the justice of the claim which Mr. Blaine lays to being the special friend of the Irishman, we will reprint the following account of the case of Pat Wood, a Republican member of the House of Representatives, who was arrested on the 30th May, 1879, Charles H. Porter, one of the great political adventurers who represented the Southern Congress during the reign of carpetbagging, was soundly thrashed in the streets of Richmond by Patrick Wood, Porter had in a public speech asserted that the negroes were superior to the "dirty Irish and Dutch," and Pat Wood, a warm-hearted, honest Irishman, declared in consequence that he would whip Porter, and was as good as his word. Wood was promptly arrested by the local authorities of Richmond and held for court.

But this did not satisfy the outraged dignity of Porter. He hurried to Washington, and from the seat in a public Representatives to which he had no more right than the man in the moon he demanded the protection of that body. Instantaneously his demand was acceded to, and by direction of the Republican majority Wood was arrested on a writ of habeas corpus and spirited off to Washington. The poor man was handed over to the tender mercies of the judiciary committee, of which the late John H. Bingham, now a United States Senator, was the possessor of Mr. Surratt, and next to him Noah Davis, of New York, and Benjamin Butler, of Massachusetts. Wood did not even know that Porter was a member of the House of Representatives, and so informed the committee, and claimed in the most respectable manner any purpose to show contempt or disrespect to the House. After purging him self of the alleged contempt there could be no further detention of Wood, and he should have been permitted for the course of Virginia. But this did not suit the views of Speaker Blaine, Gen. Butler and the other prominent Republicans of the House. They were determined to keep the status of the offender making the arrest in refusing to obey the writ of habeas corpus issued by the Virginia courts, and who did not intend to let go of Wood.

Mr. Bingham grandly expressed his indignation at the proceedings, and said that he would see that the members of either house who are the members of either house.

At this time, when Gen. Butler is posing as the friend of the poor man and vaunting his services in protecting the negroes from the encroachments of power, and boasting upon absolute equality as between man and man, it is scarcely credible that at such a comparatively near period he was assuming for himself and other members of the House the position of a persecutor over their fellow citizens which has not for generations been claimed by the privileged classes in Great Britain. The majority of the judiciary committee, all publicists, reported a resolution that Porter be imprisoned in the jail of the District of Columbia, as other criminals are, for three months. But three months could not satisfy Gen. Butler and he insisted upon nine months or six months in the penitentiary.

Here are some of the precedents upon which General Butler and his party associate relied as a justification for the punishment of Wood:

In 1789 Lambert and Perry were fined $50 each and committed to Newgate for three months for a newspaper paragraph highly reflecting on the honor of the House.

Certain persons who had trespassed on the fisheries of Admiral Griffith, a member of the House, and who were taken to the court, and were afterwards discharged on being reimprisoned, on their knees.

"Every man must, at this peril, take notice who are the members of either house returned to the Commons sentenced one Floyd, who had spoken offensive words concerning the daughter of James I and her husband, the elector palatine, to pay a fine of £1,000, to stand twice in the pillory, and to ride backward on a horse with the horse's tail in his hand; he was whipped at the cart's tail, he fine £5,000 to the king, and be imprisoned in Newgate for life."

Gen. Butler resorted to every parliamentary means to increase the term of imprisonment, until he was ably seconded by other Republican members. The House took action on July 7, 1879, and on a motion of his to extend the term of imprisonment to March 4, 1871, Messrs. Dawes and Hoar, then members from Massachusetts, and Messrs. Chandler and Joseph H. Hawley, then members from Connecticut, now senator, voted with him. These three senators, just like Mr. Blaine, love the Irish very much now, and would like to have their votes for the Republican ticket in Massachusetts and Connecticut. General Butler was so disgusted at the failure of his attempt to prolong the incarceration of Wood that when the vote was finally reached on the original motion of three months he sat silently in his seat and would not vote at all. He considered that he was very lenient in his views, for he said in his speech: "You will remember that in this contempt of authority, contempt of power, has always been very severely punished. You will remember that an ally even within the precinct of the palace yard, as between two private persons, cost the affray his right hand." He evidently thought that Pat Wood should be grateful that he did not insist on cutting off his hand.

James G. Blaine, the special friend of Irishmen, sat in his chair as speaker of the House during all of these proceedings. He lent all the great power of his office to assist his associates on the floor in their scheme of vengeance against a poor, friendless Irishman, who had refused to be cowed in the only way known to him what he considered an insult to his race. All this time the small but courageous Democratic majority fought gallantly step by step for the defenseless prisoner, and gave relaxation to his efforts until every possible means of resistance was exhausted. Mr. Blaine, when speaker of the House of Representatives, was extremely fond, whenever a favorable opportunity was presented, of leaving the chair and coming down on the floor of the House in dramatic style to
