M'CAW, STEVENSON & ORR'S

Patent "Glacier" Window Decoration. The Most Perfect Substitute for Stained Glass

MANUFACTURED AT THE LINENHALL WORKS, BELFAST, IRELAND. MANUFACTURED AT THE LINENHALL WORKS, DELFAST, IRELAND.

This is a series of transparent designs, from the simplest to the most elaborate and complex, enabling any per son with a reasonable amount of taste and ingenuity to produce patterns on windows, naving all the heatty of 'be real stained glass, at a very small cost. The advantage sof this invention will be appreciated when it is considered that so many win lows have a disagreeable outlook; which can now, by means of the Patent Decoration, be shutout from view, and the beauty of the interior enhanced while the labor of affixing the design is no use a than a pic same pastime and exercise of skill in with hisries and children can take part. In cases where no disagreeable view exists, there may be portions of the house where there is an a cess of light, and the covering of part of the glass with these design's will be found to be an improvement. Windows on stair landings are portionary good subjects for treatment by the "Glasser" Decoration; while almost all windows, in whatever position will be improved in appears or by having a portion of the glass at top or sides covered with suitable designs. Unlike many things invented for the purpose of window decoration, this cannot be rubbed off the window or defaced by cleaning.

"Peace hath higher test of manhood Than battle ever knew."

Therefore know all men, by these presents, of the midnight run of Paul Potter. It is the sweet privilege of this gentlemen to decorate with the witching was accepted and the money was deposited. The amount wagered has been variously stated at $8 to $11,002 37. The exact sum will probably never be known, but it is confidently asserted that Mr. Potter will not go to Canada.

the feat was 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. A silent, solemn assemblage gathered in front of Hudnut's at 1:30, and waited for the appearance of the runner. Two dark and dreary cabs and one piebeian wagon tarried in the gutter. The clock in the steeple of St. Paul's would have struck twice, if it had struck at all, when Mr. Potter emerged from the Herald building. He wore a large derby bat and a small jacket, brown-checked zourka dotted shirt a pair of tair, brown checked trousers, pale yellow tenuis shoes, and an expression of prophetic joy. The gentleman who had chartered the dark cabs welcomed him with expressions of subdued commis eration. One of them, who were a short coat, a tail hat, and a wide smile, had a suspicious package under his arm. The gentiemen entered their cabs. The crowd ooked sad. A few minutes were spent in silent prayer and an effort to reconcile a difference of opinion among several watches. Then Mr. Paul Potter poised himself on the curbstone a moment, white the referee hid his face behind the hands of his watch, and, in broken accents,

On he went, and the occasional tramp, sleeping in a doorway, raised his head and wondered what kind of a target excursion this was. Police men opened one eye and shut it quickly, fancying that perchance some rude fancying that percuauce some rude disturber of their peace had committed a burgiary and they might be called upon to act. Near Broome street one poince man was wide awake—he was talking to a belated servant lady-and he rushed forward to intercept the runner. Failing in that he made one pass at him with his slub, but Mr. Potter proved to be what Dr. Johnson would have called " a very unclubbable man." Anon another policeman rushed into the street to stop the cab from which the man in the tail coat, the wide hat, and the short smile was still pouring an unceasing stream of encouragement and fire balls, but the cab and its occupants laughed the policemen to scorn. Houston street loomed up and faint echoes of enticing merriment floated from the windows of Mr. Hill's sylvan retreat. Mr. Potter would have sighed, but he couldn't. He took off his derby and mopped his brow. Then he drew a lemon from his coat pocket and drew from it—the lemon, not the pocket—a refreshing draught. At Eighth street a stray maiden floated across the pavemen and looked upon the sturdy runner with pitying eyes. But he only murmured "Excelsior, Kiraliy brand" and kept peg-

They are untrue, of course?" "Of course; these indiculous rumors have reached my ears, although it has not been in my way to see much of the newspapers this summer, or to hear much of the current theatrical gossip which appears to be so popular in them. I wonder what kind friend invented the story that ascribes to me the intention to become a Carmelite nun. I have never entertained the intention of taking the veil. It is really difficult to understand why newspapers and persons should be so heedless as they often are in statements as to others. Two United States Officers in Alaska Die for a Woman. Sitka Correspondence San Francisco Chroni-

The captain and lieutenant of one of the companies stationed at Sitks in the first year of United States possession fell desperately in love with the same beautiful Russian. She was a most charming woman, with soft, mysterious eyes, a pale, delicate isce, and a slow, dreamy smile that set the two warriors wild. All the garrison knew of their fleroe rivales are garrison knew of their fleroe rivalry, so marveled not a little when their old friendship appeared to be restored, and the two suitors s arted off ou a hunting expedition together. One baggard man returned two been attacked and gored to death by an enraged buck in the forest. He was gloomy and strange in his manuer, and at nightfall went to the house of the Russian lady to break the news of his rival's

Mr. Potter ran with "swift, low trides" like the aristocratic here of one had died of friest and the other. was that some unknown and subtle poiso had been administered to him in a cup of tea, and the official report ascribed his death to heart disease. The body of the lost rival was found at the foot of a steep bank on the shore of Indian river, where a taugle of ferns, bushes and grasses shaded and almost covered the clear, stil pool in which he lay. His rifle lay near him, and a bullet hole in the heart told the sad truth his friends had suspected. His death was officially attributed to the accidental discharge of his own rifle while hunting, and under these two verdicts the real truths were concealed. The family of the Russian beauty disappeared from Sitka in a few months, and the story had been half forgotten until the recent opening of a path along Indian river recalled it to some of those who lived here at the time.

Many people do not enjoy their lives any more than oriso sers in Jail or extles in the mines of siberia it is because they have overworked themselves into nervousness or billousness or dyspensia. They can be happy if they will use Brown's from Bitters. This is a peculiar preparation of iron, which enters into the blood, driving out impurities, and giving earlemment for poverty, strength for weakness, and vigor for lassitude. Mr. Edward Care, of Jersey City, N. J., suffered from dyspepsia and loss of appetite. He used Brown's Iron Bitters and writes, "It made me lat and happy." To Enjoy Lite.

From the New York Times. Great deeds are sometimes done in the secret corners of the wide world and no historian stands by to herald them unto the nations. Therefore is this history written, like that of Herodotus, the father offspring of his wield faucy the columns of a morning newspaper, made famous in pedestrian annals ten years ago by the great walk of its owner from Thirty eighth street to Jerome park. In a moment of what Mr. Potter regards as emotional insanity he made a wager that he could go as he pleased from the thermometer in front of Hudnut's to the front door of Grace church in 12 minutes. The wager

The hour fixed for the performance of

Up to this time the proceedings had been tardy, not to say reluctant. But when Mr. Potter gathered himself together with all the grace of a Harism gazelle and bounded into space the cork was pulled out of the bottle and the pent up emotions of the assemblage effervesced. One man of the assemblage effervesced. One man with his eight, proceeded to paint the cir cumambient air a lurid, blood-red hue, walle the crowd secared Grace churen from afar off and shouted, "Ha, ha!" And Mr. Potter humped himself and mote the sidewalk with fluttering feet. The cab drivers whacked their horses with he energy of despair, and at Chambers street were quite abreast of the doughty rupper. Then the man in the white coat and the short hat and the tail smile previously mentioned leaned far out of the ging away.

And now the white, new spire of Grace church and 10,000 stars were wabbling before his very eyes. His knees were knocking and his feet were dead to the world, but he gritted his reliable teeth, went for the lemon, and towed himsel forward. A few more strokes of the quivering limbs, a few more mad beats of the bursting heart, and he stood in front of Grace church, asking faintly, "Am I all here?" And the map with the coat, hat, and smile unbuttoned the first, waved the second, and permitted the third to become a peal of laughter, while he illuminated the Vienna bakery with a "rare and radiant" light. Then the man who had made the bet came up and said : Dear Paul, it makes me sad to tell you that you got here just 15 seconds too late to get my money." Then they gathered the great runner up and bore him away in sections to a chop house of great repute, and embaimed him in Bass' beer. And
