What a Mangkerchief Was Instrumental Brieging to Light—Another Elope-ment from a Massachusetts Town. Briegieg to Light—Another Elopament from a massechusetts Town.

A story in the family life of a wealthy manufacturer of Lynn, Mass., was told Saturday, which not only astonishes his friends but which is the talk of all the Boston club rooms. The gentleman referred to, while a poor book-keeper nineteen years ago, married his present wife. While away on their wedding tour a daughter was born. The fact was kept from the knowledge of friends and relatives and the infant was, by an agent, placed in the care of a thrifty Irish woman for a year or two. The child's expenses were paid by its parants. After that no more mosey was received, and the woman having charge of the little one was unable to ret any trace of its parents or relatives. The only one she had was a handkerellef among the child's clothes bearing some initials. In the kindness of her heart she brought up the girl at her own expense and she is now a very prepossessing young lady. Not long ago she became afflicted with an affection of the eye resembling a cataract. Her guardian finally took her to an occulist. The physician was much interested in the case and said that the only case he had ever seen like it was that of Mrs. Blank of Lynn. The Irishwoman interested in the case and said that the only case he had over seen like it was that of Mrs. Blank, of Lynn. The Irishwoman instantly noticed the coincidence of initials, they being the same as those upon the treasured handkerchief. An investigation was begun. It was found that the poor book-keeper had become the Lynn manufacturer, worth almost a million. When the facts were presented to him privately he admitted them and paid $7,000 for his daughter's bringing up and agreed to allow her $1,500 annually hereafter. The couple have other children after. The couple have other children and they do not know they have an elder sister. In the belief, therefore, that this whole story could be kept quiet, this disowned child is still unacknowledged.

Another Elopement.

Since the McIntyre-Hutchinson elopement in Chelsea, Mass., they have been counting noses in that scandalized little city, and find that another escapade of the same sort has recently occurred in society circles there. James P. Tilden, son of the senior member of the firm of Tilden & Taylor, ship huilders, and Japanla F. Dil. Taylor, ship builders, and Isabella F. Dillingham, daughter of Freeman Dillingham, a wealthy Boston paper dealer, living in Chelsea, are the principals in the affair. Tilden has been married several years, and his wife is now with her recreant husband's people. The runaways seemed to have formed an intimacy while laboring in the temperance cause. The Chelsea Reform club has been instrumental in sustaining a coffee room for reformed drunkards and Mr. Tilden and Miss Dillingham have both been active workers in the project. Miss Dillingham raised a large subscription for the rooms by a personal canvass in Chelsea and her pleasing address and engaging manners, added to the fact that she was well known and moved in the best society, aided her in obtaining a good sum of money. She is a very proper looking young woman, only twenty one years old. Tilden is thirty five. They left town without a hint of their intentions four weeks ago. The first heard of them was a week later, when a postal card from Ports-mouth, N. H., notified the Dillinghams that their daughter was there with a gen-man and that she was going "over the line." There have been letters from her line." There have been letters from since to her parents, but they will nothing to secure her return.

negro, giving the name of Joshua Smith, entered the rouidence of Christian Schurr, entered the residence of Christian Schurr, in Limerick township, Montgomery county, while the family were engaged with their household duties in the rear portion of the house. He proceeded up stairs and secured $101 in money and a gold watch, and was about to depart with his plunder when Mr. Schurr entered the room. The negro, when confronted, presented a revolver at Mr. Schurr's head, who, to escape being shot, jumped to one side. volver at Mr. Schurr's head, who, to escape being shot, jumped to one side, when the negro rushed by him and down stairs. At the foot of the stairs he encountered Miss Kate Schurr, a daughter of the house, aged 22, at whom he fired two shots, but without effect, and darted from the house. The alarm was sounded and in a short time the neighboring farmers, mounted on horseback and armed with shot gans, were in hot pursuit. After money, with the exception of $3, were recovered. R. Smogglers Detected. Information was received at the New York custom house some days ago that James Graves and his wife, who had made extensive purchases of diamonds and other precious stones in Europe, would be passengers on board the national line steamship America, which arrived on Thursday. While Graves was making his entry, Special Agent Brackett, spotting him, invited him to an adjoining room. him, invited him to an adjoining room. In the meantime two lady inspectresses escorted Mrs. Graves to the examination room used for female inspection. On Graves' person were found, in a pocket-book, a single, diamond, a diamond scarf pin and a diamond shirt stud. He were a diamond set in a gold ring on his finger. In a hand satchel, which he carried, was sewed in a pocket handkerchief a package of diamonds, and in the lining of a jacket were found a number more of precious stones. Mrs. Graves was found to have two diamonds set in a lace pin, and in her pocketbook an amethyst and pearl brooch.

At Whitly, Ontario, on Saturday, Richard Kniver brought suit against the Phonix Lodge of Odd Fellows, for damages for injuries received during the ceremony of initiation in November last. His medical attendant testified that Kniver's spine was injured, and that probably paralysis or imbecility will result. The defence was that Kniver was not healthy at the time of the initiation as required by the constitution and by-laws of the lodge. Judgment was reserved. was reserved.

A terrible accident occurred at Snedburg near Mifflin, a small station on the Lebanon Tremont branch of the Reading road, by which James Fox met a fearful death. Fox was the owner of a portable sawmill at Suedburg and Saturday evening was making an examination of the machinery, when the lever broke, hurling the saw, which was running at a high rate of speed, against Mr. Fox. He was not instantly killed, but his body was frightfully lacerated. He was removed to his home near the mill and this morning died of lockjaw.

Herbert W. Jones, aged seventeen, was instantly killed by the cars at Williamsport Saturday afternoon. With several other boys he was engaged playing ball near the railroad track. The ball bounded on the track and Jones ran to recover it. A shifting engine was backing down a number of cars to make a coupling with others standing on the track. Just as Jones rose up with the ball in his hand the cars came upon him and he was caught between the bumpers about the breast and crushed to death. His father, Wilson A. Jones, was attending a funeral and serving as a pall bearer. On his way home from the cemetery he was informed of the death of his son.
