The wheat trop This Fear-The Absorptive Power of Milk-Great Graid Re-gions to Be Opened Soon. It has puzzled speculators greatly this year to get up something to depreciate the wheat crop, and cause the price to rise and give the gamblers in the crop some chance to fill their pockets. The principal drawback, in the absence of freedom by injury from the fly, rust, winter killing, etc., has been—what? The frivolous one of the wheat being thrown down, more or less, in some sections by the storms, so less, in some sections by the storms, so that the reapers and binders could not operate freely, and it requiring four horses instead of two to run the machines. Say what they will, there has seldom been a year in which a fuller crop of wheat, or one of more perfect grain, has been realized in the United States, than the present; and this should be borne in mind, in order that the gamblers may not be successful in getting up a "corner" and forcing upon the community, especially the poor man, an increased price of bread, perhaps fifty per cent, beyond that which the state of the crop truly warrants. Or all frauds perpetrated upon the workingmen of the country, there is not one that deserves the condemnation of the people more thoroughly than this one of forcing up the price of flour, and necessarily of bread, through the machinations of vile, heartless syndicates. It is true their operations ometimes work their own overthrow and bankruptcy, yet in the majority of case they succeed in accomplishing their rascally purposes. But, we repeat, there ere no grounds to use the crop of the pre-lowever plausible the reasons adduced may be. The crop is full and good, and safely housed; while the other sustaining crops of rye, corn, cats, ect., are a full average, and leaving no room for the gambling speculators to carry on their perations at the expense of the laboring men of the country. Milk as an Absorbent The following synopsis, by the Sant tarian, or a paper by Dr. Dougail, of Gias view of discovering the absorptive power of milk on various volatile subnances, will be of interest:

Dr. Dougall inclosed in a jar a portion of certain substances giving off emations together with a uniform quantity of milk or a period of eight hours. At the end of that time a sample of milk was drawn by means of a pipette from the lower stratum of the vessel exposed in the jar and we find that the following were re

It thus became obvious that the milk had absorbed the emanations of all the sub-stances to which it had been exposed, and t further transpired that all the specimens examined retained their distinctive odors for as long as fourteen hours after their removal from the glass jar in which they had been exposed.

Cream, according to Dr. Dougan, and the occasion of the party was to be. Incommended as acting in much the same the occasion of the party was to be. Incommended as milk; indeed, although it compeople who were invited were also not informed of the true character of the informed of the true character of the fact that the Oberts were Cream, according to Dr. Dougall, may gave her no hint, however, as to what perhaps make it even more liable to reain offensive and dangerous emanations than the parent fluid itself. Abundant evidence has, however, been given to show that far more care is needed in connec-tion with the storage of milk than has heretofore been regarded as necessary, nd this especially where milk or cream is kept in apartments or wards occupied by sick persons. If the emanations to which the milk is exposed are of a diseased and daugerous quality, it is all but impossible that the sample can remain free from offensive and dangerous properties; and it should become an invariable rule to keep as little milk as possible in sick rooms, and never to allow a supply which has been thus exposed to unwholesome emanations to be used for food.

Under these circumstances it has been lately held desirable to boil all milk which is open to suspicion before using it. In the course of several epidemics in which milk has acted as the vehicle of infection, it has been noticed that persons who had only consumed it after it had been boiled escaped all ill results, whereas other mem pers of the same family or community, who had not taken that precaution, had been attacked with disease. Opering of the Great Grain Regions.

Russia has resolved to develop her system of railway communication on an enormous scale, and for this purpos just contracted a loan of $75 000,000, to be expended during the next few years. India has already built lines of railway penetrating the farthest provinces. Aus tralia has also made long strides in the same direction. Next in order is the Argentine Confederation in South America, which is building four additional trunk lines of railroad at a cost $28,000,000 to connect Buenos Ayres, her principal seaport, with the vast granaries opening up in the pampas of the interior. In every case the ultimate purpose is to overcome all impediments in reaching the central grain markets of Europe, And, in spite of all this, says the British Trade Journal American grain speculators continue their efforts to artificially maintain the price of wheat, as though there were a great deficiency in the supply of the world, and the nations would eventually have to come to them begging the privilege of being allowed to purchase some of their Eggs in Winter.

From the Poultry Monthly,

During the process of moulting few fowls lay any eggs because the production of feathers is a drain on the system. Fowls moult later as they get older, and little may be expected in the way of egg production from old hens. To obtain eggs in winter you must procure the right breed for layers. The early pullets batched in March or beginning of April, with good food and care, will begin to lay in No-vember or December, if warmly housed, but if you depend on pullets not fully ma-tured before oold weather sets in you will certain'y be disappointed. No pullet or 'en will lay many eges in winter if the proper conditions are not observed to fit her for this duty. These conditions are warmth, with proper ventilation in their houses, exercise, cleanliness, varied diet of grain, vegetables and scraps of meat cells, in a neighboring room, furnishes the electricity for warming the spiral, the current passing through a lever regulator. As the temperature should be kept constant, a small thermometer is inserted, with the bulb in the nest, and a fine platinum wire soldered into the tube. When the temperature becomes too high the meroury touches the wire, forming a contact which throws the apparatus out of circuit. When it cools again the circuit is circuit. When it cools again the circuit is restored and the temperature raised. This is not the same process as that used at the Exhibition, where electricity only reguliates the heat from another source. Way free Planting is Necessary H. C. Egglestoo, in Penusyvania S. Journal.

History shows that the inhabited world has been characteristically a tree world—a world peopled by trees as well as men; and science teaches us that the world is habitable by man only as man and the trees hold it in joint occupancy. The trees preceded man on the earth, as a pre-requisite of his existence here and a preparative for it. It was their office to eliminate from the atmosphere of the early world the delecterious gases which made it irrespirable by man, and it is their office now to maintain that balance between its constituent elements upon which man's health and vigor depend. Chemists and physiologists show us that plants are continually absorbing carbonic acid gas and pouring out oxygen, or vital air as it was formerly called, because it was regarded as having an indispensable connection with life.

It has been the conclusion of scientific investigation also that, from one fourth to one-third of the earth's surface needs to be appropriated to tree or plant life, in order to maintain the best conditions of human existence. Such an amount of wooded surface, while it would preserve the atmosphere in the best state for man's use as a iving creature, would also secure to him the amplest returns from the cultivation of the soil, and the largest rewards of his varied industries. In proportion as this balance of natural force is preserved, agriculture, commerce, and manufactures all flourish best. A due measure of forest not only maintains the atmosphere in the condition to be breathed by man, but by its continual growth, if that growth is wisely husbanded and protected, is able to supply him perpetually with fuel and the material upon which the larger part of the arts and industries of life depend.

UNNATURAL PARESTS.

Fring to Barter Their Daughter For Pennsylvania Farm, A wealthy middle-aged widower, named Dominick Mines' owns a farm on the border of Wayne and Luzerne counties, Pa It is occupied by a farmer named Obert, and Mines boarded there with his family. Obert's daughter Lena is a pretty girl of 18 years Both Obert and his wife are noted for being extremely close fisted, and for an almost insane desire to be rich. A month or so ago Mines offered to make a deed of a farm near the one on which he lived if he would give him his daughter in marriage. Although the daughter was entirely ignorant of the fact that the widower Mines desired to marry her, her parents eagerly accepted the offer. They said nothing to the girl about their intentions toward her, and Mines never alluded to the subject in his daily conver-sations with her. The Oberts at once began to prepare for the wedding, which was set down for the evening of October 1. Week before last Mrs. Obert greatly as tonished her daughter by telling her that she intended to give a large party. She to give a party created great surprise in known before to extend the slightest hospi tality to any one. A new dress was ordered for Lena, and it was brought home from Scranton by her father on the afternoon of the girl laughingly said to her mother that if she wore them people would think she was to be a bride. Her mother thereupon told her all, and that the neighbors had been invited to witness her marriage to Dominick Mines. A neighbor's girl, who had been engaged to help in the house or that day and evening, says that upon bearing the truth about the party Lona stood for some time staring at her mother pale and speechless. Then she seized the wedding garments and, tearing them into shreds, scattered them about the room. After denouncing both her father and mother for their unnatural conduct she left the house. She walked all the way to Scranton, where she had friends, with whom she is still. The true situation at Oberts' was explained to the guests as the arrived for the party, and all of them left the house filled with indignation at the parents of the girl and with feelings of
