SIR MOSES MONTEFIORE

STORY OF A PHILANTHROPIST'S LIFE, Three Quarters of a Century Devoted to Noble Deens-What the Greatest of Living Hebrews tiss Bone,

On the 24th of October, 1884, Sir Moses Monteflore was one hundred years old. On the 26th and 27th of the same month services will be hald in synagogues all over Europe in honor of his centenary. In this country, too, the interesting event indica-ted will be appropriately celebrated by persons of the same race is the distin guished centenarian. Sir Mosea Monte-flore was born October 24, 1784. He is very infirm, and the arrangements made for the celebration of his birthday pro-cluded the personal reception of friends A year ago, on a similar occasion, he was able to converse with many who called to present their congratulations. Notwith-standing his advanced years, he conforms to the ascetic observances of his faith. Recently he kept a fast eighteen hours, and broke it only at the argent plea of his doctors, one of whom said : "The Al mighty does not want us to kill ourselves." The physician who is now with him constantly telegraphs that the baronet is in excellent health.

The long life of Sir Mosos Monteflor has been crowded with deeds of the grand est generosity. He began at an early age to interest himself in ameliorating the condition of the Jews, and has never for a moment relaxed his efforts. The obstacle of distance was nothing to him; money be distributed with a lavish hand; h made personal appeals to crowned theads whom other men would have trembled to meet, and even when long past the age allotted to man he was as active, as earnest, as brave and as indomitably persover-ing as though endowed with the blessing of eternal youth.

HIS EARLY LIFE. His father was Joseph Elias Montefiore, a merchant, whose family appeared first in England shortly after the readmission of the Jews by the protector—the time from which England dates her commercial supremacy. Every avenue to hon-orable livelihood, save that of trade, having been closed to the Israelites, they mede themselves a power in the commer cial world, and when, in later years, bigotry and fanaticism began to fade open, the Jews achieved distinction at the bar, and in art and science and statesman hip showed that they were by no mean inferior to men whose opportunities had been far more favorable. Members of the Monteflore family became distinguished in science and literature, as well as in commerce, but in all walks of life they bore the proud title of brave, honest, kind hearted men.

Moses Monteflore, trained as a merchent by his father in Landen, b come a member of the stock exchange. At about the time our war of 1812 opened he married Judith Cohen. Two years after his marriage he was elected treasurer of the Portuguese synagogue, and subse-quently founded the Alliance insurance office, of which he has been president for more than sixty years.

· Moses Monteflore's wife was a noble woman. She was deeply interested in all her husband's numerous philanthropi plans, particularly those relating to the bettering the condition of the Jews of Palestine, and not only sympathized with him, but aided him by her personal pres-ence and labor. In 1837 she went with him to the Holy Land, and her assistance lent largely to the gratifying success of that mission of charity. Ten years when the plague was completing in Byric the horrible work done by the carthquakes the year before, Mrs. Monteflore again accompanied her husband to help him carry comfort and hope to the sufferior eurvivors. Food, clothing, mediane, an money were dealt out with a bounty tha the whole world was glad afterward to ap-plaud; and through the timely services of the great hearted Jew and his wife, thou sands of men, wemen and children were saved from a horrible death that few had hoped to escape HONORED FOR HIS HUMANE SERVICES. It is no wonder that on his return to England he should be received with home When the proposal was made to circuit Moses Monteflore to a position such as would fitly mark the appreciation of the public the freeholders made him sheri of London and Middlesex, and on Queen Victoria's first visit to the city she con conferred upon him the honor of knight-

In 1840 a remarkable meeting was held at the Mansion house in London, which under ordinary circumstances, would have resulted in a war. The presence of S: Moses, and his thoughful method of ment ing the difficulty and of solving it. the means of keeping peace betwee the unhappy Jews somewhat endurable more than one land cursed with the rule of ignorant superstition.

The meeting was to give expression to a strong popular feeling in London against the cruel persecution of the Jews is Damascus and elsewhere. A Catholi priest, Friar Thomas, and his servant had mysteriously disappeared at Damascus The cry was at once raised among the enemies of the Jews that the Israelites had murdered the priest and his servant is order to use their blood in making the passover cakes. The people in the Jewish quarter were attacked, their houses were pulled down and pillaged, men and women were tortured, false confessions were extorted, and the prospect for the children of Israel was pittable. The news spread through Europe, and great sympathy was aroused. At the Mansion house meeting, where talk of severe measures had not been infrequent, Sir Moses Monteflore offered to go to Damascus and use personal effort to bring the persecution to an end. A subscription was started, and with £7,000, nearly half of which was his own contri-bution, Sir Moses set out for the East, ac-companied by his wife and M. Cremicux, the celebrated lawyer, who represented the Jews in France. Sir Moses had a personal interview with the pasha of Egypt, and so impressed was Mehemet All with the justice of the appeal made to him that he a once ordered the release of the imprisoned Jews, and gave full and free permission for the exiles to return. The mission was in every sense a success. The pasha be-came much attached to his visitor, and his successors have continued the friend ship. Some years ago, when Said Pasha wished to have Prince Toussoon educated in England, he placed him under the care of Sir Moses Montefiore.

On his way to England, Sir Mossa stopped at Constantinople and induced the sultan not only to proclaim the innocence of the Jews, but to guarantee them, under the great seal, their rights to all privileges enjoyed by other people on the soil of Turkey. When he reached home Christians and Jews united in manifesting their appreciation of his services to human ity. A deputation presented him, at his residence in Park Lane, a solid silver testi monial weighing nearly 2,000 ounces, and representing in emblematic form, the purpose and success of Sir Moses' labors. This work of art is a minature menument three and a half feet high. It is one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most costly specimens of artistic work ever designed as a token of regard. It is dedesigned as a token of regard. It is de-posited in one of the cabinets of the Ra-b nical college at Ramsgate, an institution founded and endowed by Sir Moses, AIDING THE DISEASE STRICKEN.

In 1842 disease was making sad havon among the poor dwellers in and around the filthy city of Jerusalem. There was no hospital in the place, and the people were suffering terribly. Sir Moses Monte-fiore heard their cry, and without a moment's delay, and aided only by his good wife, he sent out a physician with quanti-ties of needed supplies and established at Jerusalem a well equipped dispensary, free to all who needed its aid. This he sup-ported notil a regular hospital was es. tablished.

The Jews in Russia were at this time under great duress. The forms of persecution under which they suffered were many, but among the worst was that which forced them from their homes, at the will of the czar, to take up their abode among strangers even more barbarous then the records when they left have ous than the people whom they left be-hind. By one of the czar's decrees thou sands of Jewish families were ordered to Sir Moses and his wife knew what suffering would follow if nothing were prevent the execution of the ukase. The winter of 1846-an unusually hard one-was upon the people and death stared thousands in the face. The good old Jew and his noble wife lost no time, but set out for St. Petersburg to intercede with the czar. Nicholas received them cordially, and after a long interview he made promises that were at once faithfully kept. With carriages and escort, fur-nished by Nicholas himself, Sir Moses and Lady Judith traveled hundreds of miles among the unfortunate people of their and scattering broadcast the means of pro viding against the rigors of the cruel winter. In his lengthened tour Sir Moses made strenuous efforts to teach the Jews of Poland the benefit of adopting cleanly habits, and it was through his labors the thousands of them agree to relinquish trade and apply themselves to the culture of the soil for a livelihood. After a long and successful sejourn in Russia, during which he gave away thousands of pounds with his own hand, he returned to England where the tidings of his noble work had preceded him. He had scarcely reached ils residence when he was made a baronet, THE MORTARA CASE. In 1858 the whole world became intersted in what is now known as "the Mor tara case." Four years before Sir Moses had taken £20,000 to the Holy Land to mitigate the horrors of a famine and to establish almshouses. When the world was talking about using force to bring about compliance with its demand in regard to Edgar Mortara, Sir Moses paid a visit to Rome and appealed to the pope in

Although he did not succeed in ac complishing his object, he had the satisfaction of knowing that the boy Mortars would be "set free to follow his own judgment" so soon as he should reach the proper age.

Lady Judith died in September, 1862. The Jews of England built, in memory of this great bearted woman, a convalescent ome in South Norwood. A few months after his wife's death Sir loses went to Syria to aid in rescuing the Christians from the bands of the murder-as Druses. He started a fund to which ople of all denominations contributed, the services he rendered in that year's fairs held at Doylestown, history. In 1863 he paid another visit to Constan nople to secure confirmation of the rman granted by the sultan's predeces. in the same of the Jews in Moroc so. On his way he stopped to plead with Louis Napoleon and the second Isabella, and in the city of Morocco, after baving been received with all honor, the sultan and carrying back with him assurances Sar Meses was now over 80 On his return to London he was received by the suthorities and the populace with honors such as have seldom greeted a citizen. A ittle later be went to Roumania to interseds with Prince Charles for the lighten ng of the Jews' labors and trials in tha country, and again visited Russia to help his people. Subsequently he paid a visit to the Holy Land, then suffering from locusts, drought and cholera. In this the Eastern sage merely cipated the practice of the best physicians of to day. What life itself is, nobody knew these nobody knows now. But we have learned something of the reasons why the mysterious tide ries and falls. Provided the great organs of the body are not irreparably destroyed, medical science can always releve, and often save. Yet no reputable physician now atheres to the barbarous and stopic processes of depletion, such as bleeding, by which it was attempted to cure disease by reducing the patient's ability to lesist it. Nowadays we do not tear down the for to help the garrison-we strengthen it. In this intelligent and beneficent work, it is conceded that raths, each stopic lesis is conceded that raths, each stopic lesis in the intelligent and beneficent work, it is conceded that raths, each stopic lesis in the intelligent and beneficent work, it is conceded that raths, each stopic lesis in the intelligent and beneficent work, it is conceded that raths, each stopic lesis and other medianes. As an invigorant it acts immediately and powerfully upon the circulation and the organs of digestion, thus giving Nature the assistance she calls for. It is low that all alimants of the stomach, kidneys and liver are at once relieved or cure!. No other preparation smobolites the same qualities or produces similar results, it is delicious to use, and the bast known anti-intoxicant. Price, boc. and ill Hisgox & Co., New York.
