THURSDAY EVENING, OCT., 90, 1884

A noteless stream the Birchbrook runs
Beneath its leaning trees;
That low, soft rippie is its own,
That dull roar is the sea's,

Of human signs it sees alone The distant church-spire's tip, and, ghost-like, on a blank of gray, The white sail of a ship.

No more a totler at the wheel, It wanders at its will; Nor dam nor pond is left to tell Where once was Birchbrook Mill

The timbers of that mill have led Long since a farmer's fires; His doorsteps are the stones that ground

Man trespasse | here ; but Nature lost No right of her domain : She waited, and she brought the old Wild beauty back again.

By day the suntight through the leaves Falls on its moist, green so !, And wakes the violent bloom of spring

And autumn's golden-rod. Its birches whisper to the wind, In the cool spray, and on its banks

The gray song sparrow sings.

From the Chicago Times. A novel and sensible deviation from the stereotyped forms of wedding customs was recently made by a couple near Troy, N. Y. It was a home wedding, the guests being only the relatives and intimate friends of the couple, but they were sufficient in number to fill tae house Each guest was met at the door of the drawing-room and welcomed by the bride, who was attired in simple and befitting costums. When all the guests had arrived and the bour fixed for the ceremony was reached, the groom, who was conversing with friends in another part of the room, stepped up to the bride's side. The lady quietly left the group of relatives with whom she was talking, the two took their places before the clergymen and in a few moments

A BEALTHFUL DICKETIC. BOUND BROOK, N. J.,

You advise placing Allcock's Porous Plasters, in dyspepsia on the pit of the stomach in ague case, on the spicen; in torpid liver over that organ; but I really think you should also recommend that one or two Plasters be put over the kidneys. They stimulate, strengthen and act as powerful i uretice thus casting out many poisonous acids and salts. I have had fever and ague. All remdies I took produced little or no effect until I put an Alleack's Porous Plaster over each kidney; their action being more than double the maiaria was quickly washed away. I have also had several attacks of rheumatism and two of gout and by applying the plasters over the local pain and also over the kidneys I again sound your plasters wenderfully effi Beware of imitations. "Alleock's" is the only genuine Porous Plaster.
