TURBDAY EVENING, NOV., 1, 1884,

FORWARD. Let me stand still upon the height of life; Much has been won, though much there i to win : to win;

1 am a little weary of the strife,

Let me stand still awhile, nor count it sin
To cool my hot brow, ease the travel pain,
And then address me to the road again.

Long was the way and steep and hard the Sore are my limbs and fain I am to yest ; Behind me He long, sandy tracts of time. Before me rises the steep mountain crest : Let me stand still ; the journey is half done,

And when less weary I shall travel on. There is no standing still ! Even as I pause The steep path shifts and I slip back space Movement was safety; by the journey laws No help is given, no safe abiding place.

No felling in the pathway hard and slow ; I must go forward, or must backward go ! I will go up, then, though the limbs may tire, And though the path be doubtful and unseen ; Better with the last effort to expire Than lose the toll and struggle that have

And have the morning strength, and upwar distance conquered, in the end made Ah, blessed law ! for rest is tempting sweet,

And we would all its down it so we might And few would strangle on with bleeding And low would ever gain the higher height

Except for the storn law which pics us know We must go forward or must backward go. -Susan Coolidge in the Independent. Arter Flection, Wiscom. From the Detroit Free Press.

The man who didn't bet on the election is the most sorrowful chap in the country He firmly realized three months ago just how it would turn out, and he meant to put up at least a hundred dollars in money, six bats, four canes, five boxes of cigars and gloves enough to last him ten years. For some reason he didn't doit. He knew that delays were dangerous, but he kept letting go to get a better hold, and the ballot boxes closed without his having made a wager. There was still time Tuesday evening before the returns be-gan to show up. He knew exactly how every state had gone and he could figure the general result to a dot, but when men shook greenbacks under his nose and tenderly advised him to put up or shut up he didn't go down into his pocket. He felt sorry for 'em. All the weather prophets predict a hard winter, and he didn't want to feel that his winning a wager would take the shoes off of children's feet and bread out of their

And thus it came about that the far seeing sons of seventh sons chaps, who could have told any of us four weeks ago how to win a Jersey cow or a trotting horse are about the only men in this country who won't win or lose a cent's They might as well have made cool bundred thousand apiece, but they couldn't bring themselves to do it.
