WHY HE IS EXEMPT PROM SICKNESS.

Topics That Require the Consideration of Agriculturists—now to Improve the Orenard and Poultry Yaro, From the Germantown Telegraph,

There is no class of people who are more exempt from sickness in a general sense than farmers. Though they are exposed to all sorts of weather, and are less careful than most people to clothe themselves to suit the different changes of the weather, the exercise constantly indulged in, affording the body perfect freedom in the various positions in which it is necessary to health that it should be placed, which would produce in others serious attacks of disease, in them tends to physical strength disease, in them tends to physical strength and established robustness. We have known of a number of persons who were sugaged at indoor trades and were threat-ened—indeed, had already suffered—with decided symptoms of the most dangerous illness, such as pulmonary consumption. illness, such as pulmonary consumption, who have been restored to entire health by changing their vocation to farming and other outdoor work, without regard to the weather. It is believed that these life-giving principles are evolved from the fresh turning-up of the soil, in addition to the general indulgence of labor in the open air, and living upon wholesome, well-cooked food, adapted to the consumption of those constantly exposed to the free, pure, circulating air.

There is no medicine, in our judgment, so therough a cure-all to the diseases caused by close confinement required by many of our trades as a change to constant outdoor work, especially on a farm. We repeat, that we think it would be shown as an incontrovertible fact that there are no people so universally exempt from sickness in the general sense as the farmer; and this would be proved were the medical statistics carefully collected and published. We are very confident that it would be shown that the doctors' bills of the general farmer sum up less per annum than that of any other class. This is a hint that should not be allowed to pass unheeded, especially by those whose sys-tems are beginning to exhibit symptoms of a disease that threatens to be of a chronic nature, which experience has proved to be beyond the reach of medical

IMPROVED NEWTOWN PIPPIN APPLE. For a number of years we have been eating from time to time an apple, which we called an improved Newtown pippin, aised in Albemarle county, Virginia, and freely join in any opinion that may be expressed in favor of its great excellence. The knowledge of its character having been spread abroad for some years, the vonder is why our leading pomologists, who are swift to light upon anything new and of first class quality, have not taken this superb apple in hand. Is it because t is only adapted, as certain Virginia ournals say that it is, to a particular region in that state—especially Albemarle and Nelson counties? We hardly think and Nelson counties? that this claim can be well founded. It is true that the Newtown pippin, which is admitted to be the original of the Albe-marle, is adapted only to certain soils, rather than to certain latitudes. And it may be the case with its offspring. Virginia authorities agree that the original scions or tices came from the North; but claim that the superior excel-ROUNT THE MOUNT OF THE COURT OF been greatly neglected, about four thousand dollars in apples have been obtained. The demand for the apple is steadly inereasing, and it is said not to be in the least affected by importations from the North, of the beautifully colored apples. which are always popular, but really at much lower prices, thus showing that quality has a much greater influence upon the palate than beauty upon the eye. The Albemarie pippin tooks very much like its progenitor, the Newton pippin, and is about the same form and size, but in point of excellence it excels every other apple with which we have just become familiar. If this apple cannot be grown here in the same abundance and perfection, let us hope that Virginia, or at least certain parts of that state, will grow enough for us all.

CHICKEN HINTS. From the Western Rural.

In feeding study the nature of your breeds. Brahmas and Cochins cannot be fattened during their first six months, as their food consumption is for the making of bone, muscle and feathers. They feather heavy, and having small combs, wattles, etc., winter well.

The Legherns are hardy, sometimes beginning to lay at twelve weeks. They are good market chickens, taking on fat till six months, then beginning to mature. They will not bear equal confinement of the heavier breeds, and must have large runs. With little confinement they can assimilate in proportion to size more corn or fat producing grains than any other breed for the first six months. The Plymouth Rocks are marketable to three months, being then under good management plump and fat; after that they begin to make muscle and bone. The Plymoth Rocks and Wyandottes will weigh two pounds at eight to ten weeks. The Lanshaus feather early, are very hardy and are among the best of early market fowls. The Plymouth Rocks are somewhat tender and require good and careful management when young. It is said the Wyandottes are marketable at any age and grow regularly.

I have known several to ascribe failure of success with incubators because the heat went below the orthodox 103 deg. That is nonsense, A hen will leave her nest every other day for an hour in search of food, etc., when the thermometer reg-isters not over 90 deg. I always believed 103 deg. was too high anyway. I never could get a thermometer to register that under a hen yet. But too much heat will kill quickly. Every poultry journal says to provide a dust box, but none say anything about refilling or cleaning it. Fine sand makes the best bath, and it ought to be heated up to 200 deg. or more frequently to dry it and kill the vermin.

The sexes should be separated at five to six months of age, and put together for treeding purposes in January.

The Dorking's eggs are much subject to infertility. A remedy I learn is having fewer-not over six-hens to a cock.

A noy's Flendish Act. A boy's riendish Act.

Information was received in Pittsburg Wednesday of a fiendish act committed near Dayton, Armstrong county. The fourteen year old son of David Houser, in the absence of his parents, removed nearly all the clothing from his younger sister and then placed her on the red hot stove and held her there until the child was horribly burned, the fiesh on the lower limbs being literally roasted. The young fiend finally released the girl, but not until she had been so badly injured that she will not live. No motive has been assigned for the crime and further particulars could not be obtained. particulars could not be obtained.
