A MINISTER'S SUICIDE.

Advanced But Mone to show That He Was Insane,

Rev. Henry S. Williamson, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church in Trenton, N. J., did not appear at breakfast at Mrs. Murphy's West End boarding house, where he took his meals, Thursday morning; but little was thought of his absence, although he was seen several times Wednesday evening walking along State street at a fast gait and swinging his arms. About half past 10 Thursday morning two boys walked down the lane between the residence of William Henry Rawle and General Dickinson, near the railroad, off West State street, where they saw a man lying on the ground near a tree. When they drew near they discovered the man was dead and covered with blood. They at once ran for help. The body was found to be that of Mr. Williamson.

He was lying on the ground, with a to be that of Mr. Williamson.

He was lying on the ground, with a bullet wound on the right frontal bone, from which brains and blood had oozed out and coagulated. He wore a pair of spectacles and they were bespattered with blood. His eyes were congested, blood had been cozing from the nose and one of his cuffs was sprinkled with blood. By his side on the ground was a brand new ivory-handled Smith & Wesson revolver. Only one chamber was emptied, showing that but one shot had been fired. The pistol bad evidently been held close to the forehead, as there was blood on the muzzle and barrel and down towards the hammer. The deceased was dressed in dark mer. The deceased was dressed in dark clothes and wore a dark diagonal overcoat. He tad on a high cut clerical vest and a high, Roman collar. On his vest was a Delta Phi pin, which he had worn ever since he graduated from Princeton college, in 1879. In one of the pockets were found two sealed letters. The one was addressed to John Tattersall, treasurer of St. Paul's church, and was marked "strictly private" in the corner. The other letter was directed to James C. Taylor, undertaker, and was marked "private" in capital let-ters. On his table in his room at Mrs. Jay's, at the corner of Willow and West State streets, were found a number of notes directed to various friends. They were all open and unsealed with one exception. A new box of cartridges was also found on the table. The cover was off the box and just five cartridges had been removed. Everything else about the room seemed to have been left in order. Mr. Williamson was a young man, about twenty six years old. He is a son of ex-

Chancellor Williamson, of Elizabeth, and a nephew of Chief Justice Beasley, of Trenton. He came to Trenton about two years ago, just after his admission to the Episcopal ministry. He was made assistant rector of St. Michael's church under Dr. Neilsen and conducted the services in the chapel connected with the parish, on Clinton avenue. Last spring be took charge of St. Paul's church, near the corner of Centre and Federal streets, He was popular in his parish and in society. No cause has been discovered for the act. Mr. Williamson was very jovial and generally very talkative. He had a habit, however, of coming to the table occasionally and refraining entirely from ing his friends on the street without rec-ognizing them. He had been in particularly good spirits of late, as he was very much elated over Cleveland's election. He was heard in his room at Mrs. Jay's about e'even o'clock Wednesday night. Thursday morning early the chambermaid knocked at his door. The door was ajar. Looking in and seeing the blinds down she supposed Mr. Williamson was still asicep. About ten o'clock she went again to the door. The blinds were still down and Mr. Williamson was not in. The bed showed signs of an occupant, but it was impossi-conversation. He also had a habit of pass-

There were no financial troubles that could have affected Mr. Williamson. He made a deposit only Wednesday in the Michanics' bank. It is not known that there was any love affair that could have led to the deed. In fact, as yet the suicide is a deep mystery. When the body was found it was still warm, indicating that death had converted only a few hours. was found it was still warm, indicating that death had occurred only a few hours before. Mr. Williamson probably left the house early Thursday morning and committed suicide about seven o'clock. The letter on the body directed to Mr. Taylor, the undertaker, requested that gentleman to take charge of the funeral. In the letter Mr. Williamson said he would like to be buried as soon as possible. He desired a lot to be procured in Greenwood cemetery, in that city. He Greenwood cemetery, in that city. He would like to be buried in the remote southeast corner of the cometery, or as near there as possible. He desired the coffin to be very plain. The words 'very plain' were underscored. He simply desired his initials "H. S. W." and " Died November 13, 1884," placed on the coffin. He made provision in the letter for any expenses Mr. Taylor might incur. He requested that no words whatever be said at his funeral.

In his letter to Treasurer Tattersall, Williamson gives a minute statement of the affairs of St. Paul's church. He had charge of the funds along with Mr. Tattersall. He rendered a statement and drew the balance. He tells the treasurer that he will find the surplus deposited in the Mechanics' bank and authorizes him to draw it out. He made a deposit in the bank Wednesday. He also told Tattersail that there was some salary due him from the church. If the check he gave Taylor and the money that would be found in his clothes were not sufficient to pay his funeral expenses, the balance was to be paid Taylor out of his salary. In his clothes were found fifteen dollars. The body still remains in the morgue. No inquest will be held, as Chief Justice Beasley requested there should be none and the county physician said it was not necessary. That he had a right to do, under a statute passed by a recent Legisla-

No word has yet been received from ex-Chancellor Williamson, although he had been telegraphed to repeatedly. It is be-lieved the ex-chancellor went from Eliza-beth to Freehold to attend the Monmouth battle celebration, but a message sept to Freehold has met with no response. Chief PLANING MILL

TO
Preehold has met with he response. Chief Justice Beasley says that despite the strong desire of the deceased to be buried by the undertaker in a cemetery here, the family will probably take the remains to Elizabeth. All sorts of theories are current respecting the cause of the suicide, but none of them are reliable. The most general accepted theory is that young Williamson did not like his profes sion. He had said a number of times that the ministry was distasteful to him. Some of his friends say he was not orthodox of late and was depressed because he preached what he did not believe.

There is good authority for the statement that Williamson entered the ministry at his father's request and almost command. He opposed the idea for some time and it is said that the dislike to his profession.

has caused coldness between father and son, so that they have not spoken for some time. It is also stated that ou Wednesday Williamson received a letter from his father that agitated him considerably. That the suicide was premediated is evident. Williamson was with some friends until after 10 o'clook on Wednesday night. Then he went to his room. He undoubtedly spent most of the night writing the letters, which were written in a plain hand and betrayed no particular agitation. The minute character of his directions The minute character of his directions show a clear mind and a steady nerve The city has not been so excited over any local event for years. Many of Mr. Williamson's friends of both sexes have visited

Captain John Morrow's Wife and Her Friend Brutally Treated. A daring robbery was perpetrated at the residence of Captain John Morrow, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Mansfield, Allegheny county, Thursday night, about ten o'clock, by three masked men. Captain Morrow, who is eighty-six years of age, has been an invalid for over a year, being bedfast. Last night his wife and Mrs. McCoy, a friend, were sitting up with him, and at the hour men tioned the robbers entered the house and commanded Mrs. Morrow to hand over what money was in the house. Both what money was in the house. Both screaming. The villians caught hold of them and with ropes which they brought with them securely bound and gagged them, after which they ransacked the house, securing about $500 in money and other valuables. Mr. Morrow was unable to move or make an outery. After unable to move or make an outory. After the intruders had gotten all the money they could find they left the house, leav-ing Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. McCoy helpless on the floor. During the night Mrs. McCoy managed to loosen the rope that bound her and she freed Mrs. Morrow. There is no clue as to the robbers, as their disguises entirely concealed their identity.
The ladies' arms and limbs are terribly swollen from the effects of their offorts to free themselves. The police were given as good a description of the men as possible and are now working up the case. It is thought the guilty parties reside in the vicinity, as they seemed perfectly familiar with the premises.

Taking Measures Against the Cholera. The terrible ravages of the cholera is Paris have again aroused the national board of health, at Washington which body took such prompt precautions against the introduction of the plague into America immediately after its appearance at Mar seilles. It now issues a circular to the governors of every state of the Unio directing their attention to the rapid westward progress of the contagion and requesting them to call the attention of their respective Legislatures to the danger of its introduction into the country and ask them to make provision for the co-operation of state and local boards of health to take measure to prevent the spread of the disease in case of its appear-
