Prophesying a nevere Wisses.

Dandellom, violets, and daises are pineited almost daily in the Connecticut fields, and petunias, dahlins, paneites and germinms are still in blossom in open air flower beds. Lovely white and red roses are frequently seen among the glossy green leaves of shrifty elimbing briers. Blossoms were taken from fruit trees outside Norwish, Conn., two or three days ago, and ou Wednesday of last week the ripened second crop of apples was gathered by a gardener in Norwish. Notwithstanding the phenomenally late season, an old Connecticut weather prophet maintains that the coming winter will be remarkably severs. He bases his prediction on the preparations which he says, have been made by wild animals about their winter homes. Equirrels and mice, he says, have homes. Equirrels and mice, he says, have made their nests unusually thick and strong, and the squirrels have buried their supply of nuts at an unusual depth. Core husks are notably thick and tight and the gum on horse chestnut buds is especially shundant. He thinks that snow will fall within a few days, and that it will lie unmelted until spring.

A Regro Story.

An old negro, of Little Rock, Ark., entered a doctor's office the other day. He held a large turtle under his coat, while the turtle held one of his fingure. "Boss," he said to the physician, "Ise come in ter see ef yer kaint'snade die turkle ter turn loose. Be'n on dar eber seuse this morain.' Caught him down in the swamp an' he coteh me 'bout de same time." "Why didnt you kill him?" aske' the doctor. "Would er done it, sah, but de prescher whut libs on our place he says it was bad luck, so thought I'd come ter resse'l. Dat's right, thankee sah. Uh, hur! finger dun gone. Whut'll yer gin me fur de turkle, boss?"

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBR ATED

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a fine blood depurent, a rational cathartic, and a supero anti-bilious specific. It rallies the failing enanti-bilious specific. It railies the falling energies of the debilitated, and checks premature decay. Fever and ague, bilious, remittent, dyspepsia and bowel complaints are among the evils which it entirely removes. In tropical countries, where the liver and bowels are organs most uninvorsably affected by the combined influence of climate, diet and water, it is a very necessary safeguard.
