

Lancaster Intelligencer.

THURSDAY EVENING NOV. 20, 1894.

A Happy Family.

Notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, the officers of the Republican national committee seem to have been a happy family. They gave each other first class certificates of character. Mr. Steve Elkins pronounces Mr. Jones a model chairman. Some people have barely intimated that he did not spend much of his own money; but it is croaked that he and Elkins put their hands in their pockets to clear the committee of debt. They say it was poor; that it never got anything from the Delmonico dinner, and only $10,000 from all their federal officeholders. In view of this amount of funds, which of course we believe, we are of opinion that Mr. Jones did remarkably well, and should live in history as an illustrious chairman. It is wrong to test his quality by his success. A change of a thousand votes would have given him this and made him a worshipped idol. He would not be derided as a Pittsburgh puddler. The brilliant executive talent lurking in the brains of the successful iron manufacturer would everywhere have been noted, and that class of our fellow-citizens would have been lively in the future to have had the heaviest responsibilities of government cast upon them. It is very bad for the iron men, as the peddlars of our institutions, that Jones failed, because Burchard was a goose and Blaine lost his head; or because there was not money in the treasury to buy off St. John; or because Elkins and Davenport bought just a thousand too few Democratic ballots; or because of any of the other accidents of the campaign which lost New York by so narrow a miss. Jones was within an ace of greatness, and has our sympathy.

THE SEA OF POLITICS.

MR. BLAINE NOT A NEGRO IODE.

Important testimony from a prominent colored man in the District of Columbia, who has been a witness to the shooting of Mr. Blaine, is published in the Chronicle. The shooting took place in the business office of the Chronicle. The first shot was fired in the left arm a little above the elbow, and the second in the right shoulder. The shot was the outcome of an article published in the Chronicle last Sunday morning respecting the affairs of the Hawaiian commercial sugar company. The article was written and signed by the editor and surviving partner of Charles D. Young, who was shot and killed a few days ago by a son of Isaac S. Kalkoff, then mayor of San Francisco, because of publications regarding the elder Kalkoff. That shooting took place in a place in the business office of the Chronicle.

THE SEA OF POLITICS.

MR. BLAINE NOT A NEGRO IODE.

There was much comment in Washington in political and official circles regarding Blaine's last act of firing the alarm bell in the night. Even his followers are puzzled to account for his last Augusta episode. The more intelligent colored people of the District of Columbia view his theatrical posing as the friend of the negroes of the South. They have never looked upon Blaine with favor. Henry C. Atwood, United States consul to San Domingo, who has been a prominent colored leader in the District of Columbia, referring to Blaine's speech, he says: "It's all a bluff. The statement that a colored people in the South were not allowed to vote is not true. There is some limitation in the country districts in the South, but not in the cities. Blaine certainly has no cause to complain. In the Third Louisiana district he got 5,000 majority, while Kellogg was defeated for Congress. The colored people vote as they please. Look at Blaine's district in Florida, for instance. He was a Republican, but he was defeated by colored votes. No; the South was not made solid by the Democrats this time. Blaine lost every Southern state because the colored people are Stalwarts and friends of Cook, Grant and Hayes. The shooting of Folger hurt Blaine as much in the South as it did in New York."

THE SEA OF POLITICS.

MR. BLAINE NOT A NEGRO IODE.

It is really almost time that the cheer full idiots who have been editing the Press for a few months past be displaced, and that some of the men of sense yet remaining in the establishment mount the tripod. The close of twenty four years of Republican administration and uninterrupted control of the tariff found two-thirds of the furnaces of the country out of blast, and about the same proportion of its woolen and cotton mills either idle or running on short time. Worse results than these no economic policy and no political administration could show. There is no change for evil since the election, and the editorial economist who ascribes conditions resulting under the tariff to a change in the tariff has never occurred—it is a strain on politeness to call him an idiot.

THE SEA OF POLITICS.

MR. BLAINE NOT A NEGRO IODE.

THE Philadelphia Record makes an excellent point against Mr. Blaine's complaint that the senators from the states of the late Confederacy all "with out a single exception," participated in the rebellion against the national government. The Record quietly asks him whether any of these senators were more active participants in the rebellion than Malone and Riddleberger, with whom Mr. Blaine, his aids and agents, have just been cheek by jowl. And, when this conundrum has been answered, the admirers of Mr. Blaine's speech and those who march under his bloody shirt banner, may explain what moral or material interest has suffered from the displacement of the Spencers, Dorseys, Kelloggs and Claytons, with the Hamptons, Lamars, Vances and Garlands.

THE SEA OF POLITICS.

MR. BLAINE NOT A NEGRO IODE.

THE scheme of taking down the old Liberty bell in Independence hall and of transporting it to the New Orleans cotton exposition is no doubt inspired by patriotic sentiment, but it is not very sensible nor practicable. It should stay where it is.

CARING FOR THE YOUNG.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS MEET.

Organization of "The American Church Sunday School Association," of the state of Pennsylvania, Lancaster Division. About sixty Sunday school teachers, clergy and others interested in Sunday school work organized a society in this city this morning with the above name. The opening exercises consisted of morning prayers in St. James' church, the service being conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. F. Knight, D. D., assisted by Rev. Francis J. C. Moran, of Columbia. At the close of the service those present proceeded to the third story room of B. Frank Eshleman's law building, where the meeting was called to order and opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Knight. Dr. Knight in a brief address outlined the object of the Sunday school institute, and spoke of the great work which had been done by similar organizations in England. No work is of more importance to the cause of religion than that of keeping the children together in the Sunday school, and the greatest work to be done is to teach the teachers how to manage. There is no lack of zeal on their part, but what they need is a proper training so that the Sunday school work may be systematized. Rev. Dr. Hulsion, assistant bishop of the diocese, was introduced as president of the meeting, and on taking the chair spoke at some length. He had always taken great interest in the Sunday school as the source from which the church is to be recruited, and although there are many defects in the methods of many school work, there can be no valid objection urged against the schools themselves. They may be better systematized; might be called church schools; and the work done in them might be extended to other days than Sunday. In the Wednesday evening meetings it might perhaps be well to introduce catechetical lessons. Properly conducted Sunday schools he believed, were doing more than the colleges to enlighten the people. What they need is to be graded and systematized, as in the day schools; and they should be made sufficiently attractive to keep the young folks in them. We all know that when boys and girls become of a certain age, and are introduced to the world, it is difficult to keep them in the school. We should endeavor to find out the causes of this evil and apply the remedy. He had noticed one lady teacher who was wonderfully successful in keeping her class of boys together, and he inquired of her how she succeeded. She possessed the faculty of making her work attractive to her pupils; and she not only looked after them on Sunday but also on week days. With proper training other teachers can do as well as she.

Curious Election Wagers.

Since the campaign has ended it is somewhat diverting to both victors and vanquished to read of the curious election wagers that were depending on the result. The man who promised in the event of his presidential favorite's defeat, to march in the parade of his political opponent has been conspicuously numerous, and the wheelbarrow feud has been industriously working since the result was determined. Some of the wheelbarrow wagers struck out from the old rut in the attachment to them that whenever the beaten stopped wheeling the beater, a general treat of all hands was to follow. In the neighboring borough of York the vanquished bound himself to eat a crow, and when it was settled that Cleveland was elected, the unavary bird was consumed on toast by the Blaine adherent. If this practical method of eating crow were carried into the editorial sanctums of the country, there might be fewer political contradictions posing as influential journalists.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE Illinois Democracy can do better than to elect Carter Harrison to the United States Senate—much better.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE upper rail of the political fence has just won a very sharp edge.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. BLAINE takes great pride in Pennsylvania; he hovers lustily about the suppression of a free ballot South. But in the city of Philadelphia, which gave Blaine 80,000 plurality, an old man who ventured to shout for Cleveland, was murdered in cold blood, and the Republican administrators of the law there have made no effort to bring the Republican murderer to judgment and justice.

Curious Election Wagers.

IT may not be asserted that the increasing depression in industrial interests bear any consequential relation to the election of a Democratic president.

Curious Election Wagers.

OH, yes! it may be asserted—in the Press. Anything may be asserted in that journal, without incurring any risk of contradiction or any danger of it being believed.

Curious Election Wagers.

MORE stringent sanitary measures are engaging the attention of the Eastern cities of the United States. This alarm is principally caused by the invitation of the filthiness of crowded cities gives to epidemic. The worst to be feared is cholera, though smallpox is at present raging on the continent. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, but their work will not be an easy task.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE prince of humbugs, P. T. Barnum, announced before the election that if Blaine were defeated he would sell all his property at three-fourths its value, as a Democratic House may grant pay for slaves and pension for rebel soldiers. Now that the election is over Hamburg Barnum hedges and announces that it will not be so much of a shower after all. Blaine seems to be the only humbug who persists in being a bigger humbug after the election than before.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE suggestion that Arthur will out-Hard Hard and go beyond Morrison in the way of favoring "a tariff for revenue only" in the next executive message excites no surprise. When the president picked out Hugh McCulloch for Folger's place he knew what he was doing. The next secretary of the treasury is an out and out revenue reformer, and the next executive will have no objection to Congress on financial and tax questions may be expected to present the thin end of a wedge to the Republican party.

Curious Election Wagers.

A YOUNG Woman Accidentally Shot. Miss Barbara Waterbauer, a lady twenty five years of age, who lives at 8 Carrollton road, Baltimore, was accidentally shot by a son of her friend, Charles Leopold, Tuesday night. Leopold, company with a friend, was spending the evening at the lady's house. About ten o'clock, as the visitors were about leaving, Leopold took his revolver, and on entering the house they found the three dead bodies weltering in a deep pool of blood.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE next secretary of the treasury is an out and out revenue reformer, and the next executive will have no objection to Congress on financial and tax questions may be expected to present the thin end of a wedge to the Republican party.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE next secretary of the treasury is an out and out revenue reformer, and the next executive will have no objection to Congress on financial and tax questions may be expected to present the thin end of a wedge to the Republican party.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE next secretary of the treasury is an out and out revenue reformer, and the next executive will have no objection to Congress on financial and tax questions may be expected to present the thin end of a wedge to the Republican party.

Curious Election Wagers.

THE next secretary of the treasury is an out and out revenue reformer, and the next executive will have no objection to Congress on financial and tax questions may be expected to present the thin end of a wedge to the Republican party.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.

Curious Election Wagers.

MR. JONES of the Republican national committee, has reached his Pittsburgh home and reports that Blaine is defeated. Mr. Elkins makes the same admission in New York. We presume that it may be taken as a conceded fact, and that the R-republican flags that are still out may be taken in. Our local contemporary, the New Era, has been waiting for Mr. Jones' official proclamation of defeat, recalling his proclamations of victory. But Mr. Jones is done with proclamations. He has paid all his bills and wound up his business. Mr. Blaine admits a miss fire and picks his dirt for a tussle with the South.