HAGER & BRUTHER.

PARTIMORE'S SUCIAL SERSATION.

The Joung and Freely Wite of an Oli Special or Klopes win a Car-Driver.

With other cities, Baltimore has a sensation in the shape of of an elopement. The man concerned, however, is not a coachman, but a good-looking car driver about twenty-five years of age. The other party immediataly concerned is the young and pretty wife of Mr. James Rhodes, an oil-speculator of considerable means. Both parties are tied by the bonds of matrimony, but have no children to bless their homer. In order to reach the central part of the city Mrs. Rhodes uses the Monumental our line, and in travelling in the cars she filtred and became acquainted with John P. Cage, the driver. The acquaintance riponed into love and clandestine meetings were successfully effected. Before the naughty couple could make definite arrangements for their future happiness an incident occurred which compelled them to hurry matters. Mrs. Cage, hearing of her husband's conduct, strenuously denied the story, but secretly waited quietly for developments. Her chief idea was in searching regularly her husband's clothes for letters. For some time all went well and her confidence in her husband returned, but on Thursday last the long looked for bit of paper was found in her husband's coat pocket. It ran as follows:

DEAR JOHN: Please meet me at the

DEAR JOHN: Please meet me at the same place as soon as you finish work. I will be faithful to you no matter what may happen. Yours lovingly.

All the confidence Mrs. Cage had in her husband vanished, and her love turned to hate. She made her way to the residence of Mrs. Rhodes and demanded an explanation, but she was refused admittance to the house. Returning to her home she brooded over her misfortunes and waited anxiously for her husband's return. That anxiously for her husband's return. That night Mr. Cage and Mrs. Rhodes disappeared and have not since been heard of. It is rumored that they took the boat for Boston. Mr. Rhodes refuses to be inter-

The Over-Enting Cold.

Experienced physicians count with entire confidence upon a great run of calls imme-diately after the feast of Thanksgiving day And the frank and communicative among them say to their patients, as they come coughing and blowing into their offices, or are found shivering and burning offices, or are found shivering and burning in their homes: "Oh! I know all about it without any examination. It's the regular turkey and mince pie 'cold." And such it commonly is—the protest of the stomach against abuse, and the sympathetic and resultant rebellion of other organs or functions. "I never take cold," said a little lady, very watchful of her physical condition, "except when my stomach gets upset." It is a common experience, although few are thoughtful or intelligent enough to take notice of cause and effect enough to take notice of cause and effect in these matters. "Big dinners" and intemperate eating generally are responsible for more of the sicknesses that start with so called "colds" than all the sweet, cool airs of heaven, blow they never so fiercely.

Heine's Folk-Lore. From the December Century,

Heine made peculiarly his own the rich and lovely realm of German tradition and folk-lore; he was undisputed master over the elves, kobolds, undines, and fairies, the willis, wizards, enchantresses, and dwarfs that people the woods and springs of his fatherland. He created anew the Lorelei of the Rhine and the Venus of the Wartburg; he was the lover and beloved of all the exquisite creatures that inhabit the groves and water ways, and in many a poem he has described how the nymphs or the mermaids come forth at twilight from their secret haunts to caress and entice the melancholy poet. Even in his own day he was accepted as a folk singer, and his rhymes found their way to the hearts of the people and the lips of the peasantry, side by side with the bird like refrains of the mediaval ministrels. No surer proof than this could be offered of his thorough identification with the Teutonic spirit and genius. But it was the graft of a foreign tree that gave him his rich and spicy aroma, his glowing color, his flavor of the Orient. His was a seed sprung from the golden branch that flourished in Hebrew Spain between the years 1000 and 1200. Whoever looks into the poetry of the mediaval Spanish Jews that Heine, the modern, cynical German-Parisian, owns a place among these devout and ardent mystics who preceded him by fully eight centuries.

OF GREAT VALUE TO VOCALISTS. UNIONVILLE, WESTCHESTER Co., N. Y., August 20, 1882.

1 had carelessly exposed myself and sus tained a very severe and tight cold on my chest and in my throat. I procured Allcock's Porous Plasters and applied one on the chest, well up on the throat, and relief came readily the screness of my chest was removed, and my vocal organs were kept clear the entire past winter, enabling me to fulfill public engage ments in different parts of this country. No more may be said than that Allcock' Porous Plasters, if applied by afficted vocal-ists, will greatly assist their vocal rendition in public.
