WEDNESDAY EVENING DEC. 10, 1884 THE MAN AT THE WHEEL.

The sun went down, out came the stare;
The steambeat Reptune held her way
In middle stream, between the bars,
Etraight down the river to the bay;
And as the engine toiled and panted
The deck hands loiled at ease and chanted
A quaint and curious roundelay.

Tem Simpson, in the engine room.
Was chatting with a grimy mate
Who watched the gauge, while, like a loos
The pistons moved at even rate,
Impelled as by a law appalling.
Forever rising—ever falling.
Unpausing as the hand of Fate.

When suddenly the pilot's bell Sounded a solitary stroke; It echoed like a funeral knell, So unexpectedly it broke Upon their talk, upon their laughter ; om said: "Now, what's the old man after Slow her down, Jim-or is't a joke ?"

"Joke or no joke, I'll slow her down," Answered the grimy engineer ; Just skip above and ask old Brown What alls him ; it is 'tarnal queer, On such a night, too, clear as crystal : I jumped as though I'd heard a pistol Affred off agen my ear."

Tom Simpson turned upon his heel And sought the pilot; Brown sat there, His wrinkled hands upon the wheel—
's he breeze blown through his suvered it " Hello ! old grand-dad, what's the matter Ye're makin' all this blasted clatter

* The mist! the mist !" the pilot cried, "The river's thick—leave off the steam."
What mist, old lunkhead !" Tom replied, "The night is clear, you do but dream : Wake up, old man." With sudden shiver The pilot pointed down the river-" The mist is heavy on the stream."

When everything is calm and fair ?"

" Now, dash my buttons ! here's a case," Tom growled; and then, in queer surpr He looked hard in the old man's face— And saw the mist there in his eyes. " Eh, what's this, mate? House up, old

The moon shone on him soft and mellow, Like some far gleam of Paradise.

Rouse up : I'll call the Cap'n, Brown ; You are not well ; hold up your head." Still ominously pointing down
The river; "See the mist?" he said. My God! be's dyin', " Tom low muttered

"The mist !"-'twas the last words he ut-The bell had rung-old Brown was dead. -Francis Howard Williams.

The Sheriff's Story. From the Chicago Herald.

"Talking about prisoners jumping through car windows to get away from their keepers," remarked an old sheriff, as he kept his eye on two men who were handcuffed together and occupied the seat in front of him." let me tell you a little story. About fifteen years ago I was taking a chap up to Joliet one night, and as I always thought myself good enough for any one man, and as he was a quiet one, anyhow, I took the clamps off him. I had had him in charge several months, and I thought him a big coward; so when he asked permission to go to the end of the car I let him go, feeling confident he would never jump with the train going forty miles an hour. He didn't come back directly, and then I got scared and looked for him. The window was wide open, and it was too plain he had made the jump. I stopped the train and we ran back, got out lanterns and looked for him. I expected to find him dead by the side of the track, but not a sign of him did I discover, except that I found his hat where he had.

The train went on and I stayed there, swore in a posse from among a lot of section hands, and offered a reward. But I never found him—not even a track nor a sign, save that hat. It was always one of the greatest mysteries to me how he got away. Ten years afterward I came across that man in the pen at Joliet, where he was a ten-year burglar. He told me how he got away and lanched so over how he got away, and laughed so over it that I'll bet the day he got a chance to tell me of his eleverness was the bright est one he had passed in many a year. He had simply climbed out of the window, reached up the ventilators with his hands, and pulled himself up to the top of the coach. There he lay and heard us talk about catching him. When the train went on with him and without me he was very happy. As soon as he got a chance at one of the stations he jumped upon a freight train, and from that out was nothing but a common tramp."

Southern Furnaces in Blast.

A Chattanooga (Tenn.) correspondent of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution writes: "The Constitution's correspondent has had an interview with one of the most promi-nent iron men in this section concerning the iron outlook. During the conversa-tion he said: 'Since November the 10th there has been a constant increase in the iron business throughout this section. Work has been resumed at five ore banks work has been resumed at five ore banks in North Alabama, and fully 300 coke ovens have been fired up owing to the increased demand from the furnaces. Ore has been advanced 10 per cent. within ten days.' The manager of the largest furnace in this neighborhood states he has orders to run the furnace four months. He has refused to construct to deliver rice tends. refused to contract to deliver pig-iron at present price after January 1. The Citico furnace is filling an order for 5,000 tons for a Philadelphia foundry."

BOOTS AND SHOES.

BOOTS AND SHORS.

BOOTS AND SHOES OR PALL AND WINTER.

We are well prepared with a full stock of Heavy and Medium Work for Cold Weather; also a full line of Eubbers. Notwithstanding the fact that all of the work exhibited at the late Fair in competition with ours, was selected in New York and else-where, our own manufacture of Boots and Shoes was awarded the TWO HIGHEST PREMIUMS.
