foreman returned it: "Not guilty, with defendant to pay costs."

The jurymen had agreed not to give the outside public any information as to how they stood, but a representative of the INTELLIGENCER has learned quite directly that they had very serious difficulty in reaching a conclusion. When they went out they took a ballot and stood seven for conviction to five for a verdict of not guilty. They maintained that position for a long time, but a compromise was finally effected, the majority yielding their views of conviction and the minority assenting to put the costs on defendant. After the verdict was announced a great many of Alderman Spurrier's friends crowded around and congratulated him.

After a number of verdicts in old cases had been taken with the Spurrier jury, they were discharged and court adjourned to Monday morning. to Monday morning.

USING THE TELEPHUNE.

An Instrument That Is Worked For All I Some time ago a telephone was put up in the prothonotary's office. It has proved a great convenience, but its beauties are never appreciated except on busy days. This was one of that kind.

As everyone knows, there was a jury our in a very important case, and the public was waiting for the verdict. This morning all hands in the prothonotary's office were hard at work entering judgments, slander suits, court minutes, &c., in fact doing enough work to warrant the prothonotary in receiving a large salary, when there was a ring at the telephone. A clerk answered promptly to the bell and heard this conundrum: "Has the jury agreed yet." The clerk replied politely, "No, they have just eaten breakfast."

Five minutes elaps d and still the clerks were busy. Another click of the telephone brought a clerk to his feet to hear : you think the jury will agree to-day?"
This easily answered conundrum came from Strasburg, and the smiable clerk had not left the wire two minutes when a man not left the wire two minutes when a man from the upper end of North Queen street startled the clerks by shouting: "Have you any idea how the jury stands?" The next question came from a well known restaurant and was: "How long has that jury been out now?"

This string of inquiries were kept up all forenoon, and just before our reporter left a man called up the office; one clerk answered but the inquirer said: "You won't do; I want Mr. —..." When the gentleman inquired after, who was very gentleman inquired after, who was very busy went to the instrument he was refreshed by hearing, "Any news from the jury yet?" The clerk turned around to a tobacco begging lawyer and said: "Blank, tobacco begging lawyer and said: "Blank, blank these people. Do they think we have nothing to do but answer that thing. We receive nothing for this work and we are thinking of applying to the new auditors and commissioners for an extra man to do it."

When the newspaper man was leaving the telephone clerk was just replying to an inquirer like this: "No, they have ed ; we are not court rep but will buy you an evening paper and let you read the news, if you will just give us one more chance for our lives."

Caning the Publishers. Editor J. M. W. Geist, of the New Bra is 60 years old to-day, and this morning he was treated to a genuine surprise. While he was down in the business office the employes of the establishment were gathered together in the editorial room. When he came up he was informed by When he came up he was informed by way of a joke that the men had gone on a strike. He soon found out differently, however, when Mr. Warfel stepped out and in a short speech presented him with a beautiful gold-headed cane on behalf of the employes. Mr. Geist made a short speech of thanks and at the finish Walter Kieffer produced another cane of the same kind and presented it to Mr. Warfel. The latter gentleman was astonished at this, as he had been kept entirely in the dark. He found words to thank the typos kindly, good coffee, tea and cakes, and a good sum realized for the benefit of the church.
