IN THE ARCTICS.

LIEUT. LOCKWOOD'S PATHETIC DIARY —CHRISTMAS AT CAPE SABINE.

How a Starving Party of Explorers Observed Christmas Among the Ice Fields of the Frozen Zone.—A Comparison With Yesterday's Christmas Dinner at Lancaster.

The National Republican of Washington, D. C., extracts from the Diary of Lieut. Lockwood, of the Greely Artic colony, describing the manner in which the starving party spent last Christmas at Cape Sabine, in the Artic region. Lieut. Lockwood kept a diary in short-hand, which has been transcribed by a member of his family, and he appears to have made a full record of everything of importance which happened in the daily life of the party.

The extracts relate how, as Christmas drew near, officers and men joined in talk of home and planned grand feasts for the time when they should reach the civilized world; and how they made preparation for a feast on the approaching Christmas, by setting apart small portions of their daily ration.

On December 21 Lockwood writes: "By a great effort was able to save one ounce of butter for Christmas. I shall make a vigorous effort to abstain from it before then." He adds that he "put it in charge of Birderbeck as an additional safeguard."

On December 22 he writes: "We look forward to to-morrow and Christmas," and "I offered to give any one a roast turkey, on reaching home, for a single dog biscuit now, but found no takers." He says on the next day: "I saved nearly all my hard bread for Christmas, though I needed it sorely," and that to make the Christmas dinner grander" he made a tremendous effort and went without his rum, "in order to have it for Christmas" to add to the punch."

On Christmas eve he added to his scanty savings for the next day's feast half of his bread and his piece of lemon, and he wrote in his book, "To-night is Christmas eve, and my thoughts are turned toward home. God preserve me to see this day next year and enjoy it home with those I love. To-morrow it is to be pretty much a repetition of Thanksgiving. I have saved up my rum and bread. I think of the children at home, the Christmas tree to-night, and the toys, etc. But my fingers are too cold to write more. * * * I picture to myself my dear father and mother, sisters, Harry, my niece and brothers-in-law all sitting around the table to-morrow. Turkeys and mince pies are strewn on the table. Many thoughts are turned toward me and where I am at this moment."

The entry for Christmas day is as follows: "December 25—Barometer, 29.95; thermometer, 25.50. Christmas. We have all been talking and waiting anxiously for the hour, and now it is here, and (5 p. m.) nearly gone. Breakfast consisted of thin soup of peas and carrots, with a little blubber and some spoonfuls of potatoes. This we had at six o'clock. Cloudberries served out (two can's to each mess.)"

"At 1 p. m. Long lighted up for the event of the day—dinner. Dinner consisted of a fine rich stew of seal meat, with onions, a little blubber, potatoes and bread crumbs. After this we had, in the course of an hour or so, a fine stew, with raisins and a little blubber and milk.

"These were pretty much the same as Thanksgiving, but the cooks made a great deal on that day, and the meals seemed better. The cooks are now preparing some fine chocolate, and that will be followed by a punch of one gill of rum to each man.

"After dinner we had songs in all languages, including French, German, Danish, and Innuit. The punch was extremely fine. Chocolate about 7 o'clock, and by this time most of us were too full for utterance, and the conversation gradually slackened off, and with the songs the day ended."

On the day after Christmas he writes: "Our talk this morning was of our home and our families. I have extended a general invitation to all the members of the expedition to visit my father's house. I spoke this morning of the reunions of my family, and how enjoyable they are. My remarks about my father brought tears—the first time I have shed tears since I have been in this country."

A PRETTY CHRISTMAS STORY.

Bill Arp's Wife Receives the Album She Lost Twenty Years Ago.

During the war Mr. E. A. Wilson, of Franklin, Pa., while a soldier in the Federal army, was a member of a raiding party which sacked the city of Rome. Among the articles captured Mr. Wilson came into possession of a lady's autograph album, which he sent to a lady friend in Ohio. A few days ago, the recipient wrote to Mr. Wilson at his home suggesting that the return of this relic to its owner, if she be found, would be a pleasing Christmas present, and, in accordance with this suggestion, Mr. Wilson sent the album to the postmaster at Lawrence, Ga., who finds from inscriptions that it belonged to Miss Mary O. Hutchins. That lady is now the wife of "Bill Arp," the famous Southern humorist, and to her the album was sent.

The album contains verses written to her by her sailor, now her husband, who married her in 1848.

In a letter to Mr. Wilson, Bill Arp writes: "Thirty-five years ago I wedded the owner of the album, and she still lives to bless and comfort me and our numerous lovely offspring—six sons, four daughters and nine grand children. We have survived the shock of the war and are living in peace with all mankind."

The Problem of the Christmas Present.

From the Detroit Free Press.

"Something for your husband, eh?" replied the clerk as he forced his face to a smile again.

"How would you like a smoking set?"

"Got him one last year."

"Take a meerschaum pipe or a cigar case."

"He's got both."

"Here's a nice blacking box. You would be sur—"

"He never uses one."

"Anything in gloves or mittens?"

"He's got plenty."

"Take a shaving set."

"No use, he goes to the barbers."

"Would'nt he be pleased with a gold pen and fancy inkstand?"

"I got those last year."

"Let's see! Is he fond of jewelry?"

"Never wears a bit."

"Does he like pictures?"

"Got a house full."

"How would a set of Dickens do?"

"No good."

"And I suppose he has neckties, cuff buttons, slippers, dressing gowns, hair brushes, toothpicks, spectacles, writing desk, pen wipers, and so on?"

"Yes,—everything."

"Madam, I don't believe we can help you any, unless you want a gold-headed cane."

"He's got one."

The clerk scratched his head and looked up and down the store for a long minute, and then remarked:

"Must you make him a Christmas present?"

"Yes, I positively must."

"Well, we've only one other article, and if that does'nt suit I'll have to give up. It is a crutch for invalids or injured persons. If he happens to get hurt it will come handy."

"Well, I dunno," she said, as she critically examined the crutch, "It lays between this and a life-preserver, which I found at a second hand store. I'll think it over to-night, and by to-morrow I must reach some conclusion. Meanwhile, if I telephone you that he has taken another roll down the back stairs, you can count on the cash for two crutches, a quart of arnica, and at least six porous plasters."

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

A Consumptive and Larcenous Clerk Sentenced for Three Years.

Herman Bruggeman, formerly a clerk in the office of the third assistant postmaster general, Washington, was, on Tuesday, found guilty of larceny and sentenced to imprisonment, with hard labor, in the Albany penitentiary for three years. He had the handling of the partially damaged sheets of stamps, from which he stole $1,000 worth of good ones, which he sold to a newsdealer. He had always been a church member, had an interesting family and bore a good reputation. He is now in a decline from consumption.

In court there was an effecting scene after the jury brought in their verdict in his case, when he was asked what he had to say why sentence should not be passed on him, he replied: "Your Honor, what can a man say when he has been convicted? Cursed by an outraged law, I must go hide my shame in a living tomb from my invalid wife and innocent child." He broke down completely and fell back in his chair, his eyes filled with tears. After sentence he had to be assisted out of the court room to his cell.

A Cheerful View.

The New York World quotes Mr. Henry Clews as saying: "We shall soon enter upon the new year 1885, and under quite favorable auspices, produced by cheap food, cheap clothing, cheap money, cheap stocks, cheap passenger fares, cheap freights, cheaper coal, cheaper labor, and with the prospects of cheaper rents and cheaper real estate, all of which united constitute a legitimate and genuine basis for real prosperity in a country abounding in inexhaustible national resources as does America. Hence hope should now begin to take the place of the heretofore existing doubt, and by a united effort on the part of the world-wide recognized enterprise of the people of this country, we will soon get out of the present gloomy rut, and prosperity will again reign from one end of the nation to the other and be enduring in its character."
