LANCASTER, DECEMBER 30, 1884.

The Reading's Restive Creditors. The self appointed committee of so lled Reading railroad bondholders have filed a bill in the United States court which induces the suspicion that the com-mittee has no very definite idea of what it is driving at ; or that it is not driving at very much; or wants to be thought busy shout something whie doing nothing; in other words a tickling committee to make Reading security holders rest easy under the belief that heaven and earth are being moved in their behalf, while in fact they are left to drift with the winds and tor-

The committee only asks the court for an additional receiver.

He would be but cold comfort to the bondholders if they got him. They would have another big mouth to fill and another captain for deck parade.

The Reading wants no more captains. It could do with less. One receiver would be enough for it. Its president, Mr. Keim, can bring it through in time. All it needs is time. It has assets worth more than its liabilities intrinsically. With patience they will discharge all its debts. The Reading needs no committees; it needs cash. It needs to sell its coal as fast as it can, and therefore as low as it can. It does not want to enter into any combination. It needs to play a lone hand. It can sell coal at two dollars a ton at tide water at a profit, and ought to.

If the court will keep Reading firmly in its hands, now that it has been placed there, the very best possible thing will be done for the interests of creditors and owners. So long as the road earns its working expenses no injury is being done to the creditors in running it; and even if it was not earning these, the bondholders would hardly profit by taking possession of it, since they would hardly do better with

If they think that there is anything wrong in the management let them represent it to the court, and if they seem to be right, the necessary change will doubtless be ordered. But when they ask that a big salaried officer shall be created in their interest, they show a cloven foot. That sort of care given to the Reading property will not conserve it. The bondholders do not seem to want to conserve it. They want to skin it.

We have no idea that Judge Butler is in sympathy with them. The judge knows that the property is as safe in its present custody as it is likely to be made; its present custody being his own. He will be prudent enough to keep it there. If the bondholders want to foreclose their bonds we imagine that they will not thereby dispose of the receivership. All the interests of the road will not be sacrificed to satisfy a few. The long suffering stockholders will continue to be protected. There is value in the property for every dollar that has been invested in it, and it will come out of it in a little time. There is nothing rotten in the concern; no gangrene spots to be uncovered by investigation. The worst is on the surface; and that worst shows tens of tons of coal against every dollar of lia-

Plain Talk.

Some dull-witted but none the less nimbletongued gentlemen in this state who have been trumpeting their "influence" with the incoming federal administration, will find something of a set-back to their pretensions in the letter of Governor Cleveland which is published to-day. He most forcibly reminds these superserviceable exponents of their own folly, that he has not let out the work of distributing the public offices to those who would use them for their own personal aggrandizement, to build up party factions, to reward their particular friends and to punish those against whom they may cherish grudges.

Appointments under the next administration, it may be taken for granted, will depend less upon personal favor and more upon ascertained fitness than ever before. "Persistent importunity or self-solicited recommendations on behalf of candidates' will not avail much.

At the same time the Republicans, whose officeholders have so universally prostituted the service of which they have en a part, and with whom the wish has been father to the thought that Cleveland would "disappoint his party" by discriminating against its faithful adherents in his appointments, will find cold comfort in his letter. He leaves it to be unmistakably understood that his administration is to be Democratic; and while just civil service reform considerations are to guide it, there are, he recognizes many now in position who " have forfeited all just claim to retention, because they have used their places for party purposes in disregard of their duty to the people, and because, instead of ng decent public servants, they have proved themselves offensive partisans and unscrupulous manipulators of local party magement."

The Republican party must go. Turn the rascals out.

Cleveland upon Appointments. Mr. Cleveland has written a very charteristic letter upon the subject of apntments in the civil service. It is a markably frank statement of his policy om a man about to be inaugurated into the presidency. Its frankies is declaration lie; and ro is its boldness; its declaration of good officers, sidency. Its frankness is characterisas those who have taken note of Governor Cleveland's tendencies would expect him to write; and what he writes they will expect him to perform. He is getting to be very well known to the nation; and before he is many months in office he will be better understood than any president we have lately had. When you once get his bearings you will always know where to find him, for it is his nature to sail straight and to follow his compass. And it is his disposition to disclose the direction he is steering, and to let everybody know all that is going on. There will not be many secret treaties during his presidency. Mysteries will be scarce. The Washington correspondents' vocation will be gone. There will be nothing to nose out: all the news will flow forth as readily as water flows down hill. There will be no pompous secretaries pretending to know a great deal more than the rest of the world, and resting happily on their possession of power and their distribution of the offices.

They will be appointed to work, and their work will not be the doling out of the offices. A new method of distribution is to be inaugurated. The man who solicits an office is to be assumed to be unfit for it; and the reproach of solicitation must be removed from his garments before he can stand a chance of joining the elect. The character and qualifications of those who are appointed to office are to be inquired into and approved by persons specially designated for this duty. It is a very good plan, but will require an executive of iron will and steadiness to carry it out. These needed qualities for his functions seem to bristle all over the president-elect, and we think that we will see a very successful exhibition of practical civil service reform illuminate his administration.

RANDALL should shy a protectionist snowball at Harry of the hot-head ere he leaves

THE pretty slate filled with promises for the New Year will soon be broken.

SINCE the snow has fallen blood-curdling bear stories have given place to tales of ghosts who carry heads in their hands.

THERE is a blacksmith named Forreyson in Carson, Nevada, who has evolved an invention for lightening the laborers of the horse. It is a new kind of road eart and is intended to give the horse a chance occasionally to ride in the cart as the driver. The cart has four high wheels and the place between them arched, so that the horse is hitched under the wagon between the wheels, his head projecting a little beyond the front wheels and his tail barely clearing the hind wheels. The driver sits just over the horse's neck and the others in the wagon face outward on each side. The horse is so fastened that the pulling is distributed over his body and does not all come on his neck and shoulders. In this position he is greatly protected from the sun and storm and hereby enabled to make long journeys with less fatigue. But this is not all. There is a bellyband that lifts the horse up on making the descent of a hill and he rides down, a series of brakes controlling the momentum of the vehicle. When the horse attemps to run away the crank is turned and he is lifted off his feet till he becomes submissive. This stupendous myth traveled all the way from

THE Long Island deacon who left his own wife and ran off with a neighbor's, having returned with his paramour, has been "denounced "in village meeting and treated to a tin pan serenade by the boys. Such atrocious punishment for adultery will excite the admiration of Salt Lake City

THE spirits of the whisky men will be much raised if a recent opinion given by Attorney General Brewster is acted upon by Secretary McCulloch. The internal revenue tax on 27,132,707 gallons of distilled spirits in bond, amounting to over $24,000,000, will become due in the next six months. The whisky men have been avoiding payment on large quantities of spirits by exporting it for storage and sale abroad. But at present the foreign market 's glutted, and it is desirable to await a better demand. They now ask exemption from tax on spirits in this country in bond where declaration has been made of an intention to export it. Brewster tells Me-Culloch that it is in his power to make such regulation. It is easy to foresee the result of such action. There will be more lying done about spirits than the make-up of Cleveland's

THOSE who have given Cleveland credit for an unusual amount of sagacity have not gone far wrong in their estimates. Since his election he has been much annoyed by present-givers, and having early determined on the non-acceptance of gitts, he has been put to much trouble in the returning of the presents to his well-wishers with a letter of explanation. He has hit upon an ingenious plan to rid himself of this annoyance. All gifts now on hand and all that arrive in the future will be handed over to Albany charities. Clarets, wines or liquors of any description will probably be sent to the hospitals, while many rare and peculiar articles will decorate the tables at some church fairs during the winter. Albany expressmen will not hereafter have so many packages to carry to the executive mansion.

HERE AND THERE.

The McGibenys gave a concert in one of the rural villages where the audience was not so emotional as to express its approbation with the marked demonstrations that are characteristic of urban audiences. But a strapping big fellow in the rear of the room was not to be suppressed by the prevailing coldness of the calmiy critical listeners. He had listened to one of the pieces with unusual deasure and, when it was finished, manifested his desire for an encore by jumping up from his seat, cracking his heels together and shouting " By gosh, do that agin,"

A scientific small farmer in one of the agricultural districts hauled out upon a corn field last spring the sifted ashes from the debris of a burned tobacco warehouse, in which several hundred cases of leaf tobacco had been destroyed. The effect was to pro duce an enormous and almost unexampled vield of corn. Which sets one to wondering what fertilizing power there is-wasted-in the ashes of the hundreds of millions of cigars that are made and smoked every year in this country. Smoking seems to become more universal every year. A ragged ten year old boy stopped me on East King street the other day and asked me for a match. I fancied he might want it to light the fire on a cold hearth at home. But he frankly said that he wanted to light his cigar.

As I stopped on the edge of Christian street to let a richly clad gentleman drive out, with a pair of thousand dollar horses hitched to a handsome sleigh, I saw that across the narrow street, looking with admiration at the same team, was a rather poorly dressed man of about the same age as the driver and owner of the sleighing rig. These two men were boys together in the same Lancaster county town thirty years ago. But the man on foot to-day was the son of a rich father, in whose home the other was a hireling, and he often blacked the boots of the lad. Now their fortunes have changed; the poor boy is in the prime of life, an independently rich man, and the other is hunting a job at a dollar a

I happen to have met ten of the present governors of the States-including Scales of North Carolina who is about going in and Waller of Connecticut who is just coming out-and have a reasonably good acquaintance with most of them. Gov. Pattison is the coungest of them and the most austere. Gov. Cameron, of Virginia is the most convivial, but I should judge not the least intel lectual. He has never recovered from the social disfavor visited upon him by his association with Mahone; he tried to unbuckle the collar of that syrannical little boss when it fretted him, but it was too late. Gov. J. height of his ambition when he got into the executive chair of his state and he may be expected to retire from it to private life when his term is ended. Knott has a fine artistic taste and when a boy developed some genius for sculpture. Gov. McDaniel, of Georgia, is an industrious ainstaking man, with a good reputation as a awyer, though he has an impediment in his peech that must have interfered with his uccess as an advocate. Gov. McLane, of Maryand, is the worthy son of an illustrious sire he has seen a great deal of public life and talks like a book—a very interesting book at that. Gov. Hoadley, of Ohio, is the ablest lawyer of the lot; a singularly clear headed and able man, positive and yet practical, determined but courteous and genial. Gov. Abbett, of New Jersey, is a born—fighter; an aggressive untiring man, who generally car ries his point; there is no executive man-sion in Trenton and the governor does not have to live at the state capital. He keeps his house in Jersey City and his law practice there and across the ferry; like his predeces-sor in office, Gov. McClellan, Abbett was born in Philadelphia. Gov. Waller started life as a newsboy; he got along; he has a smooth face, long bushy dark hair and wears gold eye glasses; he talks finently and agreeably and is said to resemble Stephen A. agreeably and is said to resemble Stephen A.
Douglas in personal appearance. Like Abbett he is a fighter and has strong personal preferences and dislikes but he never hits below the belt. During his term a soreheaded politician, who had been boring him for official favors, one day threatened that if some letters that he thought would compro-mise him. Waller didn't go down on his knees to the blackmailer. He called his private secretary and had him kick the fellow out of the front door. I saw and met for the first time Gov. Cleveland at the reception of the Manhattan ciub, soon after his election. He was a comparatively unknown man, and was then making the acquaintance of many of the New York politicians for the first time. His dignified, quiet manner, his speech and the way he delivered it impressed them favorably. He wasn't awkward about it, as though somebody else had written it for him; nor did he deliver it with a monotonous explosiveness, as though he didn't understand the sense of it. He talked like a man who "meant business" and he seems to have been one of the few public men of the country who has not made any mistakes in his public utterances. I said then, viewing the possibility of the future, with re-lation to what the political tidal waves of the year had brought ashore, that he seemed to have no "bee in his bonnet," and all his subsequent movements showed that if he was really desirous of the Presidency it never swerved him from the path of duty.

I know of one man, who, months before public sentiment took that turn, predicted the nomination of Cieveland, and Hendricks; and I know another who at the most critica moment of Cleveland's political fortunes at Chicago did the one thing essential to them. Neither of these individuals has been "mentioned" for a cabinet office; neither of A Belle Who Has Had a Fancy For Jail Birds. Miss Catharine Clubb, of Reading-that is Miss Clubb that was-is the only daughter of a retired merchant of that city, who has been successful in business and is reputed to be worth over $156,000. The family live in impretentious style. The daughter has been the head of the household since the death of the mother, several years ago. She is a fine looking brunette, twenty-two years old, and had many admirers and refused them all. She is remembered in connection with an adventure by which her father lost $6,000 several year ago. He discovered that nonregistered bonds, which were negotiable at any place, were missing from his safe. He was under the impression that he had been robbed and offered a reward for the thieves, It came out that Miss Clubb had lent them to an acquaintance, in whom she had the utmost confidence, to pledge for a small loan that he needed. This friend proved recreant to his trust and decamped with the entire amount. All further proceedings were dropped. Her friend died in the Joliet, Illinois, penitentiary shortly afterwards. His name was John Miller.

Reading seciety is now agog over her recent marriage—with Franklin Herdyman, of New York. He had formerly lived in Reading, but was away from there for several years. He is about the same age as his bride. Twelve years ago he was accused of assaulting the late Daniel S. Francis, afterwards editor of the daily Spirit of Berks, for which offense he served five years in jail. After his release he disappeared.

He went to New York, where, his friends ay,he has been leading a straightforward and say, to has been leading a straightforward and upright life. Several weeks ago he suddenly appeared in Reading after a prolonged absence. Miss Chubb was an old acquaintance of his, and they corresponded while they were separated. Last Friday evening they were driven, in a closed cab, through the snow storm to the parsonage of Rev. Dr. McCauley, who made them man and wife, Their marriage was made nothly on Monday Their marriage was made public on Monday and has caused quite a flutter among those who knew them years ago.

Herdyman says that he will take his wife to New York in a few days.

STRICKEN DOWN.

Sudden Death of Chief Engineer Lorenz, of the Philadelphia & Reading Bailroad.

While seated at the dinner table in his home at Chestnut Hill, about 1:30 o'clock, Monday afternoon, William Lorenz, chief engineer of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad company, died suddenly of heart disease, aged 58 years. Though he had been troubled more or less for several years with an affection of the Mr. Lorenz made a tour abroad about a year since, and on his return seemed somewhat benefited. Last fall he had an-other severe attack which it was feared would prove fatal, though he rallied and was able to attend to the duties of his office until the latter part of last week.

Mr. Lorenz was a native of Germany, and equired a thorough knowledge of civil engineering in one of the leading universitie of that country. He came to America about 30 years ago, and a year later entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad company in a subordinate position. Appreciating his talents, skill and energy, the company promoted Mr. Lorenz until he was made resident engineer of the Lebanon Valley branch, with headquarters at Lebanon. In 1871, on the death of the late Charles E. Byers, Mr. Lorenz succeeded him as chief engineer of the road, and he was transferred to Pottstown. Subsequently the office of chief engineer which Mr. Lorenz retained until his death, was removed to the of that country. He came to America about tained until his death, was removed to the company's building, on Fourth street, Phila-delphia.

All the arrangement, design, execution and developments of the engineering system of the Reading's main line and divisions were in charge of Mr. Lorenz, and his competency to discharge the onerous daties was admitted. He leaves a widow and one son.
