

THE DAILY INTELLIGENCER PUBLISHED EVERY EVENING IN THE YEAR (SUNDAY EXCEPTED) BY STEINMAN & HENSEL. INTELLIGENCER BUILDING 8 W. CORNER CENTRE SQUARE. LANCASTER, PA.

THE LANCASTER INTELLIGENCER LANCASTER, FEBRUARY 7, 1885.

The Interior Department. In the popular make-up of the cabinet the positions of secretary of the treasury and secretary of state seem to be ranked as of the highest importance; the attorney general and postmaster general are ranked to second place; and the bureau of war, of the navy and of the interior are assigned to the third rank.

It is very certain that at present, and in the upbuilding of a new administration and the development of its policy, no man is too big for any one of these places. The best order of talent can distinguish itself in remodeling any of the departments; and in shaping its work for the better government of the country. It is very certain, however, that the department of the interior has mostly increased its importance of late years; and that the duties commended under its scope call for the highest administrative ability.

Why the department of pensions should be hitched on to the interior office it is difficult to say. This distribution of functions was probably made during the war, when the duties of the war department transcended all others. Now that they have shrunk and become mostly routine it seems that it would be the proper thing to make them include the pension business, which properly belongs to them and must be closely associated therewith.

Imposition Does Not Pay. The Brunswick hotel, of New York, which has long enjoyed great celebrity for its table, is numbered among the lately announced business failures, to the great surprise of those who know its extravagant rates of charges and the large business it seemed to do. The Brunswick's business came chiefly from its charges; for neither its viands nor cooking were very good. At least they would not be so considered outside of New York. It is very difficult to understand the New York gullet.

Not as It Should Be. The Philadelphians are cackling over the coming election of a score or more of police magistrates; thanks to the constitution both Democrats and Republicans will be chosen; and thanks to the inborn and ineradicable impulse of party conventions, a number of the candidates selected are not fit to be elected.

A committee of the Bar association has selected seven out of the whole lot of candidates, as fit for the place. A committee of Independents has found eight fit men. Full tickets have been nominated in opposition to the party tickets. There can be no doubt that they present fit men to be magistrates, and they ought to be elected. There is a little doubt that they will not be. They cannot be, because they have nothing to get them votes but their fitness for the office. And that is not enough. Fitness does not elect, except in theory. It is the exception when fit men are elected, especially to judicial positions.

This would be a blessed country if it had good magistrates and judges. It never will have them under popular election. The voters are not sufficiently independent and discriminating to select good judges. They do not know them sufficiently to determine their quality; and when they do know them, their leaders run them away in the party traces for the fellows who bear the party banner.

delphia will vote for an unfit man to be a magistrate because he is the nominee of his party. The party had no business to nominate him. The result of the election will show that the good citizens of Philadelphia are scarce; as the party candidates will all be chosen.

Not Afraid of a Superstition. The president elect sat down at a private dinner the other evening in New York with the fatal number of thirteen at the table. There had been covers laid for fourteen, and one gentleman who had been expected was unable to come.

There had been covers laid for fourteen, and one gentleman who had been expected was unable to come. But the company did not send out for another guest nor did any of them feel it necessary for him to leave, so as to bring the number of diners up to fourteen or down to twelve, and to avoid what many superstitious people conceive to be a dangerous number to meet at a table.

A LONDON newspaper, the Pall Mall Gazette, recently offered a prize of ten guineas for the list of the ten greatest living Englishmen divided into ten classes. It is not stated what combination, if any, won the prize. It will be seen that the possibilities of guessing aright were very small. Fifteen hundred persons sent in their judgments. Irving led the list with 1,337 votes. Wolsey as the greatest general had 1,000 votes. George Augustus Saxe, as journalist, and Millais, as painter, each received between 800 and 900, while Ruskin, a writer, obtained 500 votes.

Let the Democracy of the city see that their best men are placed on the tickets at the primaries to fight.

A New York photographer announces the invention of a "pistolograph" to be used by policemen for the photographing of suspicious characters on their beats. For the barrel of the pistol is substituted a little half-inch objective or portrait combination lens with a focus of an inch. A spring worked with a trigger instantaneously opens or shuts the lens and small plate-holders containing sensitive plates may be carried in the pocket for use when necessary. The utility of an invention of this kind is apparent at a glance. The "thrust pistol force in the world" might enjoy their otium cum dignitate with the pistolograph, as they might photograph instead of clubbing all whom they desired to arrest, making their captures at their own sweet leisure. It is said there is also a "photographic hat" for the benefit of those who wish to obtain pictures on the sly of scenes which for one reason or another it is desired to have with accuracy. A lens that might be taken for a ventilator is fitted on the top of the hat and it may be called into requisition at any time. It is even darkly hinted that a kiss may be photographed. The possibilities of this art are becoming so dangerous that legislative interference for its restriction may some day be necessary.

EL MARI shows himself harder to solve than the Fifteen puzzle. OCCASIONALLY there drifts into newspapers or poetic collections some verses of rare merit the authorship of which cannot be ascertained. It is said there is also a "photographic hat" for the benefit of those who wish to obtain pictures on the sly of scenes which for one reason or another it is desired to have with accuracy.

THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia make a vigorous protest against the bill now pending in the legislature restricting vivisection. They object to the prevailing fashion of permitting those who don't know to govern those who do know, and declare that the medical interests of Pennsylvania will be imperilled by hasty legislation on this subject. The special attention that the New York and Baltimore medical colleges are giving vivisection make it important that Pennsylvania should not fall behind. Yet it is right that the practice should be strictly limited to experiments that are deemed necessary, and the suggestion that a league be formed composed of two representatives from each of the medical colleges of Philadelphia who shall have power to make regulations as to vivisection, is one that should be acted upon. Vivisection as a sport, or a relief for the eternal of amateurs, cannot be too severely condemned.

A Woman Beaten to Death. A report comes from Moor Hill, Randolph county, N. C., that Mrs. Elizabeth Hancock went to the house of another woman, who owed her small debt, and applied for the money. She was attacked by the other woman but several friends and beaten to death.

A Little Boy Kills Himself with a Knife. Friday morning while playing with a knife laid, five years old, named Rouse, of Centre township, Greene county, met with an accident that will cost him his life. The blade of the knife slipped among his side near the heart. He cannot recover.

BRAWLERS IN PARADISE.

HOW THE SALVATION ARMY TRIED TO REAT ST. PETER. Sudden Appearance of a Motley Crowd Who Proceeded to Inaugurate a Reign of Disorder—Their Disgrace at the Salvation of the Meek and Lowly.

In one of Max O'Rell's books on England he scorns the noisy and disorderly "Salvation Army" with much vigor; and thus describes an imaginary scene in Paradise, wherein they figure as disturbers of the peace: "In fact, a blare of trumpets, of drums, of cornets, or accordions—a frightful discord—was heard, and the restless crowd hurried towards the door to investigate the cause of the strange noises, so unusual in this kingdom of repose and harmony. In the midst of these noises came an excited lady brandishing a stick, and shouting, shouting, shouting, appearing overcome with indignation. Saint Peter went through the excited crowd to meet her. 'SAINT PETER—Be quiet, my children! I beg of you. And you, madam, enter quietly; we do not allow such a bustle here. What do you wish?' Mrs. BELL—Ah, indeed! You seem to take a very high hand with me. Who are you here, you, to speak to me in that style? 'ST. PETER—I am St. Peter, And you—who are you?' Mrs. BELL—Oh, indeed! You seem to take a very high hand with me. Who are you here, you, to speak to me in that style? 'ST. PETER—I am St. Peter, And you—who are you?'

ST. PETER—Will you listen to me? Mrs. BELL—I am an editor-in-chief of the "Free Press," the official organ of the city. I have been printing every week three hundred thousand pounds income. ST. PETER—Have you a moment to spare that I may see you? Mrs. BELL—Baracks throughout all England—alms for every part of the world. ST. PETER—Who am I? Mrs. BELL—Who am I? I am the American draughtman. I have won the prize of ten guineas for the list of the ten greatest living Englishmen divided into ten classes. It is not stated what combination, if any, won the prize. It will be seen that the possibilities of guessing aright were very small. Fifteen hundred persons sent in their judgments. Irving led the list with 1,337 votes. Wolsey as the greatest general had 1,000 votes. George Augustus Saxe, as journalist, and Millais, as painter, each received between 800 and 900, while Ruskin, a writer, obtained 500 votes.

ST. PETER—But, madam! Mrs. BELL—Wait a minute. I will present my staff to you. You are a gentleman, I am. SALLIE, speak to the gentleman. ST. PETER—But I am busy. I have not the time to see you. HARRY SALLIE—I am the American draughtman. I have won the prize of ten guineas for the list of the ten greatest living Englishmen divided into ten classes. It is not stated what combination, if any, won the prize. It will be seen that the possibilities of guessing aright were very small. Fifteen hundred persons sent in their judgments. Irving led the list with 1,337 votes. Wolsey as the greatest general had 1,000 votes. George Augustus Saxe, as journalist, and Millais, as painter, each received between 800 and 900, while Ruskin, a writer, obtained 500 votes.

ST. PETER—Do not know you. ST. PETER—Goodness! This is going to come again. Go to the devil, hail soldiers of fire and brimstone, march! hail soldiers of fire and brimstone, march! you are crazy. Once more, now, will you clear out? You can see that you block the way.
