THREE VALENTINES

was five, this love of mine, I sent to her a valentine—
A frail and fair lace-paper sheet,
Which bore the legend short and sweet;
"With golden bair and eyes of blue;
The pretitest girl I know is you."
She fiked the poem, and, to show it,
She kissed the blushing little poet.

At fifteen, this dear love of mine,
I sent another valentine—
A casket, whose slik-covered lid
A nest of dainty bon-bons bid,
Where lay a card this to repeat,
The hard-worked line: "Sweets to the Sweet;
And I her gratitude could see
When she gave equal shares to me.

To twenty grown, this love of mine, I sent her one more valentine—A box whose cushinoned surface might. Throw out a jowel's starry light.
"This dear, to you, and you to me," A scrap of paper read; and she, To thank me for the sparkling thing. Gave me the band that wore the ring.

A Story About Jay Gould.

Alligerville is the name of a small hamlet on the Delaware and Hudson canal, in Ulster county, N. Y. A shoe cobbler there has a story to tell of Jay Gould and of a claim that he still holds against him. When Mr. Gould was in his teens he jeft his father's farm in Delaware county, and tried his hand at various pursuits but made no money. On a bright Sunday morn-ing, Jay, or Jason—for that was the way he signed his name before he attained his was at his wits' end in the effort to earn a dollar to supply pressing necessities, that the idea of making a map of Uister coun-ty came into his head. He was then walking along the tow path, and was very much "down in the mouth." He remembered that he had a casual aequaintance with a young man, Oli-ver J. Tillson, now a leading citizen of the town Lloyd, and one of the richest and most extensive fruit growers along the Hudson river, who then lived with his father in Rosen-dale. Mr. Gould had an interview with Tillson at once, and before sundown the arrangements at once, and before simdown the arrangements for making a new map were perfected. Tillson furnished the necessary money and work began the next day. For two months or more Gould and his companion tramped over the hills and mountains of Ulster, working industriously on the map. It was when Jay Gould was without a cent, though rich in expectation, that he contracted his Alligerville debt, and it was for soling and heeling the only pair of shoes he had. The amount was debt, and it was for soming and heening the only pair of shoes he had. The amount was less than $1, and the cobbler thought that if he did not get cash, he would at least geta map, but he says he has received neither to this day. He says he still hopes that the millionaire will liquidate his indebtedness with compound interest.

Dick Short Released on Bail. Richard Short, who stabbed Captain Phelan in O'Donovan Rossa's office, in New York, about 4 weeks ago, was released on $3,000 bail on Monday, after efforts had been made to have the amount reduced to $2,000. Dennis Corbett, a west Thirty-ninth street liquor dealer, became his bondsman. John Roche, George Smith in Bondsman. John John Roche, George Smith, "Rocky Mountain" O'Brien and a dozen other members of the Fenian Brotherhood, accompanied Short across the street from the tombs to Counselor Oliver's office, where an informal reception took place. Short received a letter from Cork informing him of the death of his wife on the 19th culture. on the 19th ultimo.

Not a Model Lot.

From "Gleanings" in Examiner.

If I may be permitted to tell tales out of school, I must remind "Sindbad," that the boys he mentions—"Pud" Sloan, Will Latta, Chester Wilson and Bob Risk, were not a model lot, so far as study or propriety was concerned. What we learned we stole and what the books had to give us we learned by being "kept in." None of us remember the Greek alphabet—but we have no harsh words for the boy of the day who spends his nickels in dime novels. YOUNG MEN !-READ THIS.

Popular! Popular! Popular! Popular!
Of course. The word comes from every direction. Any political candidate who has done as much good as Brown's Iron Bitters has, will be so popular that he will be sure to run in with an immense majority. Dr. H. L. Battle, of Wadley. Ga., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is very popular in this section." Nobody finds this valuable tonic anything short of crowning success. It cures dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, etc.

A clear, bright open face somehow looks honest. A horse thief or burglar seldoms carries such a face, Rurdock Blood Bitters give the skin a peculiarly fine texture and clearness. They strengthen and enrich the circulation and so eradicate all cruption or blemish. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street, Lancaster, Pa.
