irrepressible. The writer continues:

In strolling around that night I fell in with two other notables, viz: Hon. Joseph Segar and Hon. Thad. Stevens. They were two of a party engaged in a social game of draw poker, table stakes.

"Hallco, young man, where did you spring from?" was Mr. Segar's greeting.

"Just from Baltimore."

"Baltimore, eh? Been to see the show? A pretty kettle of fish you Democrats have got over there. What do you think about it?"

"As you say, Mr. Segar, a pretty kettle of fish."

"Any chance of patching things up?"

"None earthly."

"D——d glad to hear it," growled Old Thad.

"Amen, with all my heart," said Mr. Segar.

The old sinners! In the adder blindness of party feeling they could not see that what was to them cause of rejoicing was destined to be to the nation "the direful spring of woes unnumbered."

The Principal of a Seminary Shot And Killed by an Angry Husband.

There is much excitement throughout Canajoharie, N. Y., over the brutal murder of Professor C. S. Smith, principal of Fairfield seminary, who was shot and killed by by Dr. Richter at Middlefield late Saturday afternoon. The circumstances attending the tragedy are as follows:—

Some time ago Dr. Richter separated from his wife. The latter has frequently requested a division of personal property, but the doctor persistently refused to give her anything. She determined to recover a share by means of legal proceedings, and to this end she obtained a writ of replevin. Professor Smith was acting for Mrs. Richter in the case, he being married to her niece.

About four o'clock Professor Smith, accompanied by an officer, went to Richter's residence. They searched through the house, Smith pointing out to the officer the goods which Mrs. Richter claimed. Richter then became exasperated and, having procured a pistol, came behind Smith and shot him in the back. The wounded man was only able to reach the street and tell some passers by how he had been shot when he expired. The murderer left the house and proceeded to a hotel where he was soon informed of the death of his victim.

Smith was a very popular gentleman, and public excitement after the shooting was intense, threats of lynching were heard on all sides. It is feared that a desperate attempt will be made to carry out these threats. Dr. Richter was arrested and lodged in the Schoharie county jail, where Mrs. Druse and her son and daughter are also awaiting trial on charges of murder.
