Thomas Francis Bayard was born in Wilmington, Del., on the 29th of October, 1828. In 1851 he was admitted to the bar. His progress was rapid, and President Pierce in due course made him United States district attorney. He was always a Democrat. Del aware was a slave state when the war broke out and the leaders of the secession movemen naturally expected the co-operation of Delanaturally expected the co-operation of Dela-ware. A public meeting was called at Dover and the question was discussed by citizens of all parties. Mr. Bayard's influence, as well as that of his family, was strongly against secession. His friends claim that his action kept Delaware in the Union, Mr. Bayard's public life began after the war. He was elected to the United States Senate on March 4, 1869, succeeding his father and has was elected to the United States Senate on March 4, 1869, succeeding his father, and has remained there ever since. He now wears the senatorial robes which have rested with the senatorial robes which have rested with distinction upon the shoulders of his great grandfather, grandfather, uncle and father. Senator Bayard is comparatively a poor man. He had a comfortable patrimony, but it has dwindled under the calls of public life and a large family. He has eight or nine children and no superfluous income. He lives like a gentleman, but very simply. He can't afford to indulge in grand intertainments or swell turnouts. One of his sons teaches school in Maryland and all the others that are old enough to work are at it.

Daniel My. aring was once an errand boy in the office of the Albany attas, now the Ar-gus. He blecame a compositor, worked at the case with energy and was promoted to fore-man. His ambition was not satisfied with this. He went into journalism and was made reporter on the paper, with which he had been connected from his childhood, and subsequently became president of the Argus

In 3882 Mr. Manning was chosen chairman of the state committee. How energetically he worked for Mr. Cleveland at the convention is worked for Mr. Cleveland at the convention is well known. His zeal and his skill are mat-ters of public knowledge. He celebrated the election of Mr. Cleveland by contracting a a second marriage. He has been a successful mah, but his advancement was owing en-tirely to his own ability. From nothing he has worked his way up to a cabinet position, and he is proud of the history of his struggle. He is about fifty years of acc.

One son is managing editor of the Albany Argus, another is the agent of the Argus; one daughter is the wife of the assistant district attorney at Albany and the other is still a school girl. He eats one meal early in the morning and another late at night, and takes only an apple or banana between times. He a said to be worth $500,000.

As scholar, orator and statesman, Senator Lucius Quintus Curtius Lamar is justly honored in the South. He was born in Georgia in 1825. He was a professor of mathematics in Oxford University, Georgia, and in 1850 began to practice law in Covington. Going into politics he was elected to the state legislature in 1853 and to Congress in 1857. He was a pro-slavery man and a secessionist and he fought in the Confederate army. He went to England and Russia to influence public feeling in behalf of the Southern states. He remained steadfast to the "lost cause" until the surrender of Lee and the imprisonment of Jefterson Davis. He then retired to the University of Mississippi, where he held a professorship.

He sat in the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Congress, and was elected by Mississippi to the United States Senate in 1856. His speech on the life of Charles Summer is memorable for its elequence and for its sentiments. ored in the South. He was born in Georgia

William C. Whitney is a Massachusetts nate of Yale and a lawyer by profession. He has been actively engaged in politics, aiding very largely in the transfer of the old time power of Tammany to the york. As a lawyer and corporation attorney he was noted for his energetic action, and the ability and speed with which he disposed of the public business. He has been very successful in his profession. He has been a devoted adherent of Mr. Tilden.

William C. Endicott is an ex-judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts, born in that state, and fifty years of age. He is a Harvard graduate, went to the practice of the law, was on the supreme bench for nine years when injured health caused him to resign. He, like Senator Garland, was an old line Whig, and like him was on the Bell-Everett electoral ticket in 1850. In later years he has affiliated with the Democrats and was their canidate for governor of Massachusetts last year. He is a learned lawyer, able jurist, and a man of high reputation. man of high reputation.

DR. GOERSEN HANGED.

A Letter He Wrote Read by the Clergyman on the Scaffold Wherein the Culprit Protests His Innocence.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 5,-Dr. Goersen was hanged in the county prison at 10:20 this morning. Dr. Goersen met his death with remarkable firmness. He refused to go to bed last night and sat up writing letters until 5:30 this morning, when, after taking his morning bath, he lay and slept for over an hour. He ate sparingly of breakfast, and spent the remainder of his time in prayer with his spiritual advisers. On the scaffold the clergyman read a paper signed by Goersen in which the latter solemnly protested before God and his conscience that he was entirely

God and his conscience that he was entirely innocent of the charge for which he was about to suffer death and professing a belief that "He who bringeth to light the hidden things of darkness" will eventually and surely "bring forth judgment unto truth."

During the reading Goersen maintained his calm demeanor, his thoughts being apportently bent on subjects other than of the world. He was then pinioned, the black calm demeanor has face, and after a short is vocation the drop fell. He was dead in eight minutes, his death appearing to be very cary.
