A DIAMOND RING.

THE PRETTY ROMANCE OF ITS LOSS AND FINDING.

on a Fair Hand Lost it New York Hotel Boom Introduced Cupid to Two Young and Loving Hearts-The Story in Detail.

From the New York Times.
"There was a bridal couple put up here a few nights age," said the proprietor of an up-town hotel last evening, "who owe their first meeting to an incident, or rather a series of incidents, which occurred in the very room where they slept last night. It's a very pretty story, all told, and will lay away over any ordinary feat of the imagination. Through pure luck and active reasoning faculties a young fellow has won the prettiest little sweetheart one could wish. He is him self smart and handsome, and holds a respon-sible position as agent for a large hardware firm in the West. He has stopped at my

"The first act in the romance I am telling you occurred about a year ago, and the scene was laid in room No. 26, second floor, front. A bell boy came to me on the evening in question and said the gentleman in No. 26 wished to see me at my convenience. I went up stairs and found Jimmy—we always alled him by the found of the second stairs and found Jimmy—we always alled him by the first area. diamond ring, which flashed in the gaslight like an electric spark. It was a lady's ring and must needs have had a very slender little finger to fit it. It occurred to me that the ring was for his intended, and that he was going to tell me all about it. It is quite natural, you see, for an enthusiastic young natural, you see, for an enthusiastic young lover to make a confidante of a friend. It lover to make a confidente of a friend. It somehow boils over in 'em and will out. Why, I had a man old enough—but never mind that. I'll finish the first story before I begin another.

"I smiled, first at the ring and then at Jinny, 'Ah!' said I, 'Allow me to congratulate you,' and was about to ask who the fortunate young lady might be. He laughed pleasantly, said he was cut out for a batchelor, just as all young fellows do. Then he went on to explain about the ring. It seemed he had dropped some loose change on the sofa and it had slid down into the lining. In feeling around for if he had fished out the ring. We examined it for some mark of identification, but found nething except a simple letter 'S' engraved on the inner side. That was certainly rather a small clue to the owner, but we used it for all it was worth We searched our register for over a your back, taking every name opposite room No. back, taking every name opposite room No. 26 which began with an S. We had about a and other names to the number of 30 or more. We wrote to each to know if they had lost a valuable ring, and asking them to write and describe it if they had. Only about half a dozen answered, and none of them had lost a ing.

"Jimmy went from here to Philadelphia "Jimmy went from here to Philadelphia and then to Washington. It was about three weeks before he showed up at the hotel here again. Of course he inquired about the ring the first thing. 'If ever we discover the fair owner,' he said, as he started for room No 26, preceded by a bell boy with his sachel and pitcher of ice water—if ever we discover the fair owner of that ring I shall claim. the fair owner of that ring I shall claim the privilege of personally presenting it 40 'Twenty-six,' said the clerk to a boy who had stepped up in response to an electric call from one of the rooms. It was after 11 o'clock and I was smoking my customary good-night cigar in the office. The boy came back down stairs a minute later two steps at a time. He said 26 acted a little wild and wanted ine come up right away. Before I could start Jimmy came running down himself.

"Have you got your register for 1882? he asked nervously. I said that I had.

"Then we'll soon know who that ring belongs to,' he added.

"We got the 1882 register and he turned to June 3, running his eye hurriedly up and down the numbers of rooms. James Shep-ard, wife and daughter' was scribbled op-posite rooms Nos. 25 and 26, with the address in full, a large manufacturing town in one of ard,' shouted Jimmy, hilariously.

"You see, before going to bed that evenoperation reflected the light of a gas jet on either side. Plainly cut in one corner of the glass he caught sight of the inscription, June 3, 1882. From the inscription to a dia-mond was an easy step in a train of thought, and from a diamond to the jeweled ring found in the same room was another. It was but a natural conclusion that the diamond in the ring was the same that had cut the glass, and still more natural that the date on the glass was the date of the cut. It then became almost a certainty that the person who occupied room No 26 on June 3, 1882, and the owner of the ring were the same.

"Well, Jimmy started East the next day and took the ring with him. I got a letter from him a few days later saying that Miss Shepard was the owner of the ring and of a Shepard was the owner of the ring and of a pretty face, and most charming manners as well. Her parents, he wrote, were very grateful for the return of the ring, and had invited him to call again when in town. I hadn't heard from the boy since till he stopped here on his wedding trip last week. Its charming young wife wore that diamond ring on the daintiest of little white fingers. As said at the outset, they would have none but room No. 26. On the mirror, just beneath the June 3, 1882,' they left 'February 3, 1885,'—their wedding day.''
