THE SOULT L. JONES' SEVERE STRICTURES.

D L. JONES' SEVERE STRICTURES. or feature of the case is the style in themond L. Jones, esq., a leading r of the Reading bar and counsel for in error in the case, bastes Judge a, who decided against his client in low. In his history of the case paper book, Mr. Jones said :

Cons Vanderslice died'in January 1884, cons his papers were found two bonds o R. Lash for $1,000 each, both bonds smoon his papers were found two bonds has nearly thirty years past due; also a bill gis for $500, fourteen years past due. On a papers were endorsements of payments interest, from time to time, up to 1882, all the handwriting of Thomas Vanderslice, decedent. Suits were brought by the ministrator of Vanderslice and copies of instruments filed. Affidavits of defense to fled setting fouth that all these obligans had been fully paid and satisfied, a roles were taken for judgment. The savers all argued together on Monday will 7, 1884, and counsel for the defendabled the attention of the court to the fact the maturity of the bonds, the salignment is an interest to payment had arisen that all the wore than twenty years having elapsed to the maturity of the bonds, the saligned the burden to the plaintiff and addeed affidavits of defense unnecessary, a stated that they were only filed as a cauand amdavits of defense unnecessary, the defense unnecessary, the defense unnecessary, measure to prevent judgment from the control of the second property of th His honor, Judge Sassaman, said, howthere, that, in his opinion, the endorsements of payments of interest, atthough in the handwriting of the obligge, rebutted the presumption of payment and that the affidavits were too general in terms. Counsel for defendant then stated that although, as he understood the law, 'the credits are not part of the instrument and will not take the case out of the statute or rebut the presumption of payment, unless proved,' and that he had drawn up the affidavits of defense in that conviction—stilk, as his client had actually paid all these obligations, he did not desire to imperil his rights and property upon any view of the law, and that with the permission of the court, he would file suprile mental affidavits, as and circumstances of the payment of all three of these obligations. His honor then said, 'if you hand me the supplemental affidavits at any time before I dispose of these cases, I will consider them along with the original affidavits, 'mand then adjourned the court in the following Saturday, April 12th.
Counsel for defendant at once wrote to his client to come in and make the supplemental affidavits, and on the 12th of April, five days therefore, they were duly filed, and then counsel discovered to his utter amazement, that this honorable judge in breach of faith with counsel, had in the meantime quietly filed in the prothonotury's office, opinions making the rules absolute and entering judgment in all the cases for want of sufficient affidavits of defence. Upon the petition of counsel, reciting the express permission of the court to file supplemental affidavits and asking that the judgments be stricken off, rules were granted, which the judges subsequently discharged for the reason that the cales were granted, which the judges subsequently discharged for the reason that the judgments having been entered the burden is now entirely upon the defendant, and he being incompetent as a witness by reason of the death of Vanderslice can make no defence

Vanderslice can make no defence at all."

In his argument Jones, severely criticises the conduct of Judge Sassaman for brezch of faith in entering the judgments in the manner he did. In one part of the argument he says that, "through the particulars of the defines were stated to judge at the argument, and he granted leave to file a supplemental affidavit, he rought to deprive the defendant of its benefit by a breach of faith with counsel so discreditable to the court and to the profession as to compel me to characterize it as it deserves."

reason as to compel me to characterize it as if deserves."

At another point he rapped the learned judge over the knuckles in this wise: "The usual time allowed for filing supplemental andayits is ten days, and no time having been specified in the order in this case, a reasonable time—which would mean the usual time—was clearly implied. The extension of time to the presumptive disposal of the cases by the learned judge, was very indefinite, as the record of the court shows that his honor usually disposes of such cases in from three months to three years, and that in a recent case his tardy action had to be quickened by a writ of mandamus from the supreme court after a delay of about eighteen months."

In speaking of the powers of the court in such matters he said: "A judge has no power under the law to pronounce judgment, except in open court, and as the judgments in these cases were handed into the prothonotary's office on April 10, 1884, when the court was not in ression, they are irregular and void and should be stricken off."

The supreme court adopted this view of be case; decided that the judgments were in properly and imprudently entered and re-recod the lower court, before which the case will now have to be tried on its merits.

A report telegraphed to and published in the Philadelphia Press, Record and possibly other papers of to-day, to the effect that H. H. Heise, hardware merchant had failed, is false; and Mr. Heise will take steps to discover the malicious author of it. He has retained H. M. North, esq., to sue the publishers for libel.

Building Operations in the Borough, Numerous repairs are being made to Columbia, dozens of which are being repainted and otherwise beautified. A score or more of new buildings are being or will be erected, and the happiest men in the borough are contractors, painters and paper hangers. The season, however, will not be as brisk as last year, but this is to be expected; business of no kind is as good as last year. Town Notes.

The Shawnee engine and hose house on fourth street, is being torn down. Our new chief burgess, Newton Jackson, has taken the oath of office.

The Howorth's Comedy company, which appear in the opera house this evening, give an excellent performance, and spoken highly of by the press throughout the United States and Canada. The prices are low.

Henry Rinehart, of Steelton, while drunk yesterday afternoon, stoned a number of young boys who had been teasing him; was arrested by Officers Wittick and Gilbert, and committed to jail by 'Squire Evans for 5 days. He was taken down this morning.

The shad fishing season is very late this year, owing to the batteries being submerged. At the rate the river is now falling—4 inches per day—they will hardly be fit for use before two weeks. Th fishermen are making all preparations, however, and expect the season to be much more profitable than last year.

Another "Rev J. E. Smith."

In these columns a few weeks ago it was stated that Rev. Joseph E. Smith, "formerly pastor of the Duke street M. E. church," had pastor of the Duke street M. E. church," had become a Swedenborgian. That gentleman writes from Wheeling W. Va., to deny the report. He is now pastor of a very flourishing Methodist church in that city and has no idea of leaving the Methodist fellowship. It was another man of the same name, and as Mr. Smith, like his namesake, was formerly of the Wilmington conference the mistake was a natural one; particularly as the Swedenborgian is a very respectable denomination for which Mr. Smith has no little admiration.

Our genial contemporary, Joshua L. Lyte, esq., of the Examiner, happening to be in New York early in the week, while wading through the muddy streets, was met by Puck, who mistook him for Mayor Grace and tool him to account for the condition of the mefrom to account for the condition of the me-tropolitan highways and by-ways. Mr. Lyte protested that he wasn't the mayor, but even his candid face did not convince the doughty little pictorial journalist; and so he put Josh in his paper this week, blue coat, red striped trowsers, Arthur hat and all.

Returned to Court. Lewis Hossler, late an employe of Casper Kohler, entered suit before Alderman Ford-Roller, entered suit before Alderman Ford-ney yesterday aftermoon for felonious assault. The allegation is that Kohler threw a beer glass at Hossler. Noon to-day was the time appointed for the hearing and Mr. Kohler failed to appear. The alderman however heard the testimony of the commonwealth's witnesses and returned the case to court.

An Opossum Caught.
This morning about three o'clock "Jack," a terrier dog, owned by John H. Ridenour, of the City hotel, caught a very fine large opossum on North Queen street, near Orange. The animal was not injured a great deal and he is now at the hotel. It is supposed that he was brought to town by some market people, from whom he escaped.
