Listen, her great heart is beating, Once again you bear it warm and strong ; Through her veins of blue the waters seaward drawn, full-flooded, bound along.

fongues are in the brooks, and voices In the winds are set like fairy flutes; Trees and vines and herby are quickened; Life has long been stirring at the roots

In the branches climbs the life blood, Thrilling them to life's remotest tips; Nectar in the cells is waiting Hebe's cap and royal Juno's lips.

Now upon our mountain altars. Earlier comes and longer burns the flame: Sweet-voiced strangers throng the valleys, Putting all the poets' songs to shame. Far and wide o'er stream and woodland, Flings the showerits crystal treasures rare, s robed in light descending On her jeweled ladder in the air. Roll the silver constellations Through an ocean-world of milder blue; In the night aerial spirits Fill the new-made flower-cups with dew.

Mother Earth, I may not ask thee, All the mystery I seek to know, Listening upon thy bosom

To the Force that lives and works below But with this bright dome above me, These sweet sounds of life returning here, Well I know thy heart beats ever, Though mine feebler beats from year to year. -Samuel V. Cole in The Critic

John Howard Payne's Last Days.

From a Private Letter of Mr. Alfred Chapelie My recollections of poor Payne are still fresh in my memory. He was a small man with a fine intelligent face, but of a very serious and melancholy expression. He spoke slowly, with great dignity of manner. He was highly educated and very well informed. His conversation was extremely pleasant and interesting. Though rather cold and reserved in his manners he had a strong temserved in his manners he had a strong temper and will. The many ups and downs he had in his life had made him rather sceptical and given him a strong touch of misanthropy which increased in his last years. He never spoke of his theatrical life before me; politics were the ordinary topics of his conversation, as it is generally with United States Americans. He liked to talk about poetry too, although I do not think he cultivated it any more at that time—at least I have not heard he left any compositions of this period after him. He tald us one evening how he write: "Sweet." compositions of this period after him. He teld us one evening how he wrote "Sweet Home" at Paris while sitting on a bench in the Champs Elysees and under the influence of a strong spell of home-sickness. He said the music was Sicilian, but did not tell whother it was he who adapted the words whether it was he who adapted the words it. Payne had in the last year of his life become of very sedentary habits and very gloomy in his ideas. I remember to have seen him many times sitting in his arm-chair by a red hot stove drinking brandy and water and looking very sad. He seemed to have no ties left in this world. He saw very few persons here and did not seem to like new acquaintances. He was at last taken with a slow fever, which, neglected, took a bad turn and became dangerous. We saw to our great consternation that his constitution was giving way before it without the least resistance, and we soon found that our poor friend's days were numbered. Every care was taken of him but with no effectual result except show ing him that he was cared for and surrounded friends. He died after ten or twelve days' illness without suffering and like a lamp 'whose oil is exhausted. We buried him in his colone's uniform. We had him taken to our cometery and I took care of his tomb ever since—up to the day his dust was removed to America. The slab was put upon the grave by the care of my excellent friend W. P. Chandler, of Philadelphia, once Amer-ican consul here, who wrote the epitaph which is upon it. These are the few details I can give you upon our regretted friend. have been in a position to as crtain fully the precious qualities with which he was en-dowed, the loyalty of his manners, and the depth of his intelligence and information.

Letter from Assemblyman Hoag. STATE OF NEW YORK ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, ALBANY, April 13, 1883.

ALBANY, April 13, 1883.
During my temporary residence here the past winter I contracted a severe cold, which for a time confined me to my room and rendered me unfit to attend to my duties. I not only suffered all the inconveniences which usually attend a heavy cold, but was afflicted with a tightness in the chest, accompanied with a severe pain, which made breathing difficult and rest imposble. I tried the usual remedies—cough drops, cough cordials, &c., but received no substantial relief until I applied Allcock's Porous Plasters on my back and chest.

These I put on when retiring, and was delighted to find myself much better the next morning. In two days I was well. This, and the experience I have had with Allcock's Plasters in my family has convinced me that for coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, rheumatism and local pains, Allcock's Porous Plasters are the quickest and most effective remedy extant, JOHN HOAG.

Housed Up. For the fast three months a great many people have been housed up, because they have not felt able to withstand the stormy wintry weather that has prevailed. But unfortunately the con-finement and the close air of modern houses during the winter season, is very enervating, and the system needs help to enable all the organs to do their proper work. If these organs have been inactive the consequences are show-ing themselves in the billous condition of the system, or in constipation of the bowels, or in disorders of the kidneys, with all the aches and pains that accompany these complaints. If you are in this condition from any cause you should make a lathful trial of that well known remedy Kidney Wort. It acts at the same time on the kidneys, liver and bowels, and is therefore especially fitted to correct this torpid condition of the system.
