

THE SEASON OF RESTING.
The forest choir the farmer hears
At early dawn,
The emerald carpet reappears
Upon the lawn,
And April with her smiles and tears
Flies fast away,
And soon will come the month that cheers—
The laughing May,
The festive youth, the fall, the fall,
His slumber spouts;
The boys bring out the bat and ball,
With grateful shouts,
The summer comes and sweet content
Permeates the soul;
No more one's salary must be spent
In buying food,
Warriors of the grove rejoice,
Your time employ
In thrilling and useful ways to vote
The merry joy

SOMETHING ABOUT WOMEN'S NOSES.
The Harmonious Relation That This Organ Bears to Hair, Bonnets and Other Feminine Adornments.
Before deciding upon the arrangement of the hair, the nose should be carefully interrogated. If that feature be Roman, or what a learned author describes as "egotistic"—i. e., long and curved inwards towards the point—the hair should be somewhat pronounced in arrangement. If the nose be rather massive, or else the large nose will be a source of contrast, make the head look meagre. If the nose be Greek, an approach, carefully guarded from being too low, is the only one that may be ventured upon. The varieties of the Anglo-Saxon nose, some of them quite childish in their want of decision and firmness of outline, are too numerous to be specially commented upon but should be treated variously, according as they approach the aquiline, the Greek, or the sub-varieties. The necessary and the most judicious arrangement of the hair. Madonna bands assert badly with a snub nose. So does the Venetian. The hair, which has been such a favorite among our aesthetic grandmothers, "a little head sunning over with curls" best suits the snub- or tip-titled like a flower" and sensible woman who performs wear turning-up noses will carefully abstain from following the height and depth of fashionable coiffures, but remain faithful to the quasi simplicity that goes well with the infantile formation of their noses.
The silly young women who have of late gone about the world with their heads crumpled as close as those of boys will now regret the rashness that robbed them of their locks. For the catogan is coming in again. The hair is to be worn curled in front, then simply brushed back to the nape of the neck, where it is to be tied with a ribbon matching the trimming on the dress; hanging down the back in short ringlets, or, if preferred, arranged in a thick plait for the work-day hours. It is a style that has its advantages, more especially as displaying a good effect of plaiting and a neat, simple, and dignified present mode, with its tight little basket-plaits, rather curiously conceals. But the catogan needs a very special neatness to command it, and if again adopted as in the past, in Paris, it will be well for its patrons to bear in mind that when ruffled or disarranged, the queue will lose all resemblance to the exquisitely neat hair of the heroine of the name as worn by our ancestors.
It will have its effect upon the shape of the fashionable bonnet. It becomes general, and will necessitate a lowering of the crown at the back. This portion of the popular headgear has become of late years smaller and smaller, while in the meantime, contrary, there is sometimes an enormous preponderance of crown over brim. In the shape known as the "Tun O'Shanter" this is notably the case, and the hair is never, perhaps, in the whole history of the headgear, a form that more readily lends itself to the ridiculous than this when seen upon any save the youngest and freshest of faces. A middle-aged woman, with a hard set look in her cheeks, who should be so utterly blind to the fitness of things (and that have been such instances) as to don a Tun O'Shanter, is one of those phenomena which makes one desire the revival of sumptuary laws. If the style of hair dressing ought to be dependent in a great degree upon the shape of the nose, that of the forehead should, to be consistent, be so too. There is a very thin variety of the nasal organ, inclined to redness along the ridge, which looks sharp enough to carve with, that requires extremely delicate treatment in the matter of coiffure. The effect of the nose itself is partially masked, this is done by the use of a sort of amplitude in the arrangement of the locks and in the trimmings of the bonnet. But then, on the other hand, these must not be too ample, or they will produce a contrast so evident as to be practically a reproach to the nose for its thinness. The other extreme of a very fleshy nose commands a certain severity in the bonnet, but the curls of the latter must not be too tight, else they will throw into disagreeable prominence the inclination of the nose towards spreading and width. So far as regards form. With respect to color, it is another matter. It is one of the most difficult tasks of the clever milliner to deal with a nose that remains obstinately red despite all the waters and washes devised for such cases. It is a sad thing to see a bunch of poppies in a bonnet, and to note that their eye is precisely that of the most prominent feature in the face. Yet even this is less startling than it fully is, for the poppies are usually dark and unrelieved by color, so that the nose, especially on frosty days, lights up the gloom like a newly painted pillar-bone in a dingy street. But, fortunately, there are many remedies, a few such helpless noses as these, though one occasionally sees them and regards their owner with pity and perhaps mistrust. The ordinary English nose is white, though freed from the bloodless look of the French feature. The nostrils are daintily touched with pink, and yet no color spreads further than those, even when the rest of the complexion is sensitively subject to sudden change. Such as these relieve the modest of all difficulties, so far as color is concerned.

SPECIAL NOTICES.
Alternately Shaken and Seared.
By the paroxysms of chills and fever, the wretched sufferer for whom quinine has been prescribed, essays in vain to exterminate the dreadful disease with that hurtful palliative, which not only mitigates the violence of the fits, and eventually proves highly injurious to the system. In order to effect a thorough cure of malarial fever, whether intermittent or remittent, or to render the system impregnable to its attacks, Hooper's Stomach Bitters should be used daily. This medicine is a searching eradicator of diseases generated by miasma, and a reliable safeguard against them, is a fact so widely recognized in this and other countries that to address evidence in support of it is unnecessary. In his own case, the writer is able to do so, it may well be supposed that the testimony corroborative of its claims, which has been accumulating during the last twenty-five years and over, sufficient proofs might be gathered to convince the most incredulous skeptic.

"The Dead Line."
Many old soldiers remember "the dead line" at Andersonville. It was a mighty dangerous and a reliable safeguard against them, is a fact so widely recognized in this and other countries that to address evidence in support of it is unnecessary. In his own case, the writer is able to do so, it may well be supposed that the testimony corroborative of its claims, which has been accumulating during the last twenty-five years and over, sufficient proofs might be gathered to convince the most incredulous skeptic.

CAUTION.
No. 29 GRAND STREET, JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 25, 1885.
Two months ago I suffered with a very bad cough, which kept me awake all night. I was recommended to put on my chest two Alcock's porous plasters. Unfortunately, my druggist persuaded me to try some other porous plaster. I lost my money, for they were worthless, and not the slightest benefit. I then procured Alcock's Porous Plasters and they completely cured me.

DR. KENNEDY'S REMEDY.
$500,000 a Year.
Statement of the American, National and United States and Canada Export Companies, Troy, New York.
The strength of Rome was not in her multitude, nor in her grain, but in her discipline. These were elements of strength, but her never-failing resource lay in the self-control and discipline of Roman soldiers. Discipline—it is the very soul of all the wonderful conquering power of the "veteran." Mr. Kennedy, of Troy, is a veteran in the express business. "Thirty-three years," he says, "I have been in the express business. It is the discipline of years of experience which gives me the position I hold in the trade. We have a business of $500,000 a year, and we have a staff of 100 men. I have a month in all that time, although I must confess that many times I've worked here in suffering great pain, for I have been troubled all my life with biliousness and dyspepsia. My system has become so reduced and weak that I had no appetite, and my digestion wholly disordered. I have tried various remedies, but almost two years ago I began to use Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. After using only one bottle or so, I began to feel stronger in every way. The great difficulty has been with my digestion, but this seems to regulate it perfectly. I have, I believe, and feel stronger in every way. I have bought and given a great deal of it to my friends, and I feel that I will always keep FAVORITE REMEDY in the home. I do not mean to say that I have the blood in the market. Well, I must attend to this matter for the western part of the city. Say, you tell the Doctor I am coming down, without any cost to see him in August. I want to know him." I have bought and given a great deal of it to my friends, and I feel that I will always keep FAVORITE REMEDY in the home. I do not mean to say that I have the blood in the market. Well, I must attend to this matter for the western part of the city. Say, you tell the Doctor I am coming down, without any cost to see him in August. I want to know him." I have been troubled all my life with biliousness and dyspepsia. My system has become so reduced and weak that I had no appetite, and my digestion wholly disordered. I have tried various remedies, but almost two years ago I began to use Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. After using only one bottle or so, I began to feel stronger in every way. The great difficulty has been with my digestion, but this seems to regulate it perfectly. I have, I believe, and feel stronger in every way.
