In the suit of Carter & Thompson vs. Joseph Umble and wife, judgment by consent was entered in favor of plaintiff for $250, with stay of execution for thirty days. The suit of Leonard Gieg vs. Aaron B. Fullerton was attached for trial this morning. This was an action of trover and conversion to recover the value of thirteen acres of wheat in the ground. The facts, as testified to by plaintiff's witnesses, were that in the spring of 1881 Margaret Fullerton purchased a tract of land in Fulton township and Henry Aultland became the tenant, with the understanding that he was to pay Mra. Fullerton the interest on the money she put in the farm. In the fall of that year execution was issued against Aultland for failure to comply with his contract and his personal property was sold by the sheriff. Leonard Geig became the purchaser of thirteen acres of wheat in the ground and when he went to harvest the same Aaron B. Fullerton, who was then in possession of the farm, refused to eting of Gen. under the following circumstances: William Peterman died in 1850, and was the owner of a house on North Mulberry street. Sometime after his death proceedings in partition were begun and Elizabeth Shute accepted the property at the valuation of $275, and gave a bond in the sum of $550 with Casper Weaver as surety for the payment of the purchase money. The plaintiffs in this suit alleged that she never paid the purchase money and they brought suit on the recognizance. The testimony, however, showed that Andrew W. Shute had compromised his claim and released Elizabeth Shute. The court ruled that Mary Peterman could not recover, as she had made no demand for over thirty years and the law presumed that the claim was paid. As to the claim of Barbara White it was shown that Elizabeth Shute had admitted that she was indebted to her for her share, and under the instructions of the court the jury found in favor of this plaintiff for $67.70.
