nains will be interred in the German Catholic cemetery, to-morrow at 9 a. m., from the Cherry street German Catholic church. Although this is the third time Miss Lillie Hilton has appeared in Columbia, this sea-son, she will be greeted by large audiences, for she is Columbia's favorite actress—her winning and lady-like manner and superb acting has made her so. She plays under the management of Gen. Welsh Post, and this evening will appear in "Led Astray," one of her strongest pieces.

DEATH OF JOHN W. JACKSON. The Extended and Useful Life of a Prominent

John W. Jackson, an old and respected resident of this city, died at his rooms No. 30 North Queen street at half past twelve o'clock this afternoon, aged about 70 years. He was a native of Maryland, but came to Lancaster with his mother when a mere child, and when he was only seven years old he was put to work in the "old factory" on the Conestoga, at the foot of Rockland Some years later he was em ployed as errand boy in the dry-goods store of Mr. Hoffmeier, on North Queen street, where B. Z. Shreiner's music stor now stands. He was advanced to a clerkship, ad remained with Mr. Hoffmeier until about 180, when he became a salesman in the then arried on in the building now occupied as a jovelry store by H. M. Shreiner.

ESTEES THE JEWELRY BUSINESS. He continued to act as clerk and salesman for Mr. Shaffner until 1845, when he and the ate Michael Zahm bought out Mr. Shaffner's ablishment. Mr. Zahm being a practijeweler and watchmaker those at les were added to the comb and riety trade previously carried on and riety trade previously carried for many new firm did a thriving business less, which was not given up until and it. Me business was sold out to Chas. Brother. Thereiner, trading as Shreiner & their goods excegentlemen disposed of all verware, which biewelry, was hes and silcontinued until the ples of trade have been On the dissolution orent.

Jackson, Mr. Jackson act firm of Zahm & the office of Hon, Tied a position in rowes, then secretary of 38 H. Burwealth at Harrisburg, where a commonfor a year or two.

IN FINANCE. About 1865 he became contected with the Inland Deposit and Insuranc company with the was cashier of that instituton for so, and years. It was during his cornection with the bank in this capacity that it and its eventful experience with Elijah Pugt and met with serious losses thereby. Nigh, who was well-known in financial circles as a speculator and "kiter." overdrew flis accounts very heavily and having aided to make good the overdrafts, Mr. Jacksos was censured for negligence and his cashighip terminated. Long after the transaction and after the litigation of the bank with Pugh, suit was brought against Mr. Jackson by the representatives of the institution and they recovered judgment, though popular sympathy was largely on his side, and, we believe, nothing was realized on the judgment. Mr. Jackson had also been city treasurer in 1857.

IN PRIVATE LIFE. quitting the Inland Insurance compary Mr. Jackson lived retired. About six or seven years ago he was affected with a stroke of paralysis, and had at intervals sevstroke of paralysis, and had at intervals several subsequent strokes, which badly lamed him and impaired his speech. Two months ago as he was descending the stairs from his bed-room to Shreiner's jeweiry store, he fell and broke the thigh bone of his paralyzed leg. From this accident he never recovered. He suffered greatly both from the accident and his long confinement, and his naturally robust constitution finally gave way, he became physically exhausted and died as above stated, it being supposed that he suffered a final stroke of paralysis just before he died.

Mr. Jackson was a man of fair education and of great mental vigor. He had but poor opportunities for educating himself in his youth, and feeling keenly what he had missed for want of the free school system and devoted namy years of his life to the cause of popular education. He was alcoted a member of the school board on the 3d of August, 1843, to fill the unexpired term of Rev. M. Bahnsen, and remained a member of the board continuously until November 1, 1882, a period of more than thirty-three years—a longer term than any other member of the past active and effectual members, but one of the most active and effectual members.

that body ever had. He served on all the important committees, and was for a great portion of his term of service chairman of the superintending and finance committees, and from 1873 to 1875, he was president of the board. An inspection of the minutes of the board shows that Mr. Jackson's voice and vote were always on the side of more and better schools.

Mr. Jackson was a politician who wielded a very considerable influence. He was an

and better schools.

Mr. Jackson was a politician who wielded a very considerable influence. He was an ardent Democrat during his earlier manhood, and the "little back room" in rear of Zahm & Jackson's store was a favorite resort for the "best workers" in the years between 1840 and 1860. When the factional quarrels among the Democracy were so bitterly fought between the Buchanan and the anti-Buchanan men, Mr. Jackson was one of Buchanan's most bitter opponents; but when that gentleman was nominated for the presidency, he gave him a cordial support. When the war broke out, however, Mr. Jackson connected himself with the Republican party and generally voted that ticket thereafter, but was not regarded as a strict party man. He served as a member of city party man. He served as a member of city councils for a few years, but never aspired to any other office except those above men-

Socially, Mr. Jackson was a pleasant, intel-Socially, Mr. Jackson was a picusant, inter-ligent companion, as a business man he was upright and honorable, as a citizen incorrup-tible and patriotic. He was generous to a fault, and bestowed much of his substance in aid of the poor and in furtherance of charitable institutions. In religious matters he was liberal and tolerant, and we believe it was only a few weeks ago that he formally connected himself with the Moravian church. onnected himself with the Moravian church.

Mr. Jackson was a bachelor and it may be remarked as a singular incident that for at least forty years he occupied as a sleeping apartment the room in which he died, and for an equal length of time occupied the same seat in the dining room of Michael's hotel.

HER NEGRO HUSBAND.

The Unaccountable Choice That Was Made by a Young White Woman.

The people in the waiting-room of the New York & New Haven railroad, New York, especially the ladies, were shocked about two weeks ago to see a good-looking and well-dressed young woman, apparently about twenty-two years old, kiss and bid an affectionate adieu to a burly colored man about thirty-five years old. Some of the male passengers made an investigation and learned that the girl left the train at Harrison, and that that the girl left the train at Harrison, and that she was Libby Conyer, employed as a wait-ress in the family of the late William Mat-thews, where she was quite a favorite. About 1 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday the colored man left a train at the Harrison station. He was attired in a Prince Albert coat, a white vest and a pair of plaid trousers made in the latest fashion. He also wore a white cravat, a pair of patent-leather shoes, a brown Derby hat and a pair of yellow kid gloves. He at once went to the Matthews mansion. He was inwent to the Matthews mansion. He was in-troduced to the other employes by the girl as her husband, Titus Poole. She had recently hinted to some of the inmates that she had been married during a visit to New York, but she had carefully refrained from saying anything about his complexion or race.

Mr. and Mrs. Poole left the Matthews mansion and tripped along to the railway station They sent an expressman to the house for the bride's trunk, which after some delay, was obtained, all her late associates declining to aid the expressman in getting it down-Stairs.

The couple left Harrison about 5 p. m., for Mount Vernon from which point they proceeded by stage to Yonkers, where it is understood they intend to reside.

The Condition of Henry Hartkins. Henry Hartkins, whose self-inflicted shooting in Douglassville, Berks county, on Wednesday morning, has been recorded, now lies in the Reading hospital, where is is said he may recover. He says he was in Reynold's brigade during the war, but described. He declared that he was predescribed. He declared that he was par-pared to die and told Clerk Knorr that he would willingly have some one send a bullet through his heart. He had been peda outet through his heart. He had been ped-dling four years and was tired of life. Had he not been in such a hurry, he said, he would certainly have shot himself dead yes-terday morning. He is about 60 years old and has a son in Philadelphia and two daughters in Baltimore. He has no desire to get well. This is evidently not his firs attempt at self-destruction, as his arms are gashed in several places as if he had tried to bleed himself to death.

It was supposed at the time of the death of Wendell Phillips that his estate was worth fully $200,000. The report of the appraisers under the will, made to the probate court is Boston, shows that the total value of his property is only $8,362.05, of which $4,338.22 is in real estate and $1.002 so in is in real estate and $4,023.80 in personal property. Among his assets were 45,000 shares of mining stock that were rated as
