CHARLES SANTEE, chairman,

The report and the donation were for mally received; and a committee was appointed to fitty express to Mr. Santee the thanks of the board.

Various reports were read and acted upon There was an expression of disapprobation that a report had become current that the Wilhelm bequest of lands would yield the college millions of dollars; there is no warrant for such a statement at all, and it is calculated to retard the work of endowment. These lands have a value for farming purposes of probably $30,000 in excess of what was paid in settlement of the disputed will; their mineral wealth is undetermined $75 has not vet been 1/jened to "Niltroad communication, so that it may be a long time before the college will realize on them.

The degree of A. R. in course was conferred on the twenty-four graduates of this year; and that of A. M. in course on Rey. A. M. Viven, '81; Rev. H. G. Appenzeller, '82; D. N. Souders, '82; Rev. W. J. Johnson, '82, Calvin M. Smith, '82; W. H. Rauch, '82.

The contribution is characteristic of a noble heart. For the board itself, for all the friends of the college, for the church which is its guardian, and for the cause of liberal education everywhere, the board desires to make perpetual record of its grateful appreciation. The Lord lov-

THE NEW YORK LAW AGAINST IT DE-CLARED TO BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Decision From the Court of Appeals, ti, Highest Judicial Authority of the Stat-Condemns the Law-A Finger-Board for Pennsylvania Manufacturers.

The court of appeals on Tuesday reversed the decison of the general term of the supreme court in the test case of the people against Morris Marx, who was convicted in the court of general sessions last December of a misdemeanors in "selling an article manufictured out of an oleaginous substance other than that produced from milk or cream," and fined $100. Marx's counsel raised the question of the constitutionality of the section of the laws of 1884 under which his client was convicted. Recorder Smythe said be was convinced of the unconstitutionality of the law, but as the general term of the supreme court of the Second district had de-cided that it was constitutional in the case of the people against McGann, in Brooklyn, he thought it best to send the case up to the higher courts in order to obtain a decision from the court of appeals. The section at issue is as follows:

Section 6. No person shall manufacture SECTION 6. No person shall manufacture out of any oleaginous substance or substances, or any compound of the same, other than that produced from unadulterated milk, or of cream from the same, any article designed to take the place of nutter or cheese produced from pure, unadulterated milk or cream of the same, or shall sell or offer for sale the same as an article of food. This provision shall not apply to pure skim milk or sale the same as an article of food. This provision shall not apply to pure skim milk or cheese made from pure skim milk. Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a time of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or not less than six months' or more than $500, or not less than six months' or more than $500 are not less than six months' or more than $500 are not less than six months' or more than $500 are not less than six months' or more than $500 are not less than THE OFFENSE, Marx's offense was the selling in last Octo-ber of two tabs of oleomargarine to John a chemist, who swore upon the trial that he was composed of an oleaginous substance was composed of an oleaginous substance other than the product of milk or cream. The case was taken on appeal to the general term of the supreme court, before Judge Davis, Brady and Daniels. All three judges considered the law unconstitutional, but they affirmed the sentence of the lower court in order that the case might be decided finally by the court of appeals.

Acting District Attorney Parris said that the decision of the court of appeals made oleo margarine a merchantable article, the unconstitutionality of the law laying in the fact stitutionality of the law laying in the fact that while the sale of eleomargarine was for-bidden it was not claimed that it was deleter-ious to the health. "According to that law," said Mr. Parris, "a man might sell oleomar said Mr. Paris, "a man might sell oleomat-garine for wheel-grease to avoid the 'as an article of food' clause with impunity, but if the purebaser in a moment of forgetfulness should eat it, the seller would be liable to punishment. There have several similar cases to the Marx case been brought before Recorder Smythe since Marx's conviction, but they have all been put back to await the decision in this case. Of course under secuted.

Judge Rapallo wrote the opinion in the Marx case, in which the whole court concurs. In this opinion the judge says: "This prevents competion, and places a bar upon progress and invention. It invades rights, both of person and property, guaranteed by the constitution. The sale of a substitute for any article of reconstitutions. article of manufacture is a legitimate business, and if effected without deception cannot be arbitrarily suppressed. This act is not a med at deception, but goes further, and, in effect, creates a monopoly destructive of he state and the United States."

CONDEMNING AN ABSURD MEASURE New York's Court of Appeals Decides the Anti-

From the Philadelphia Times. The New York court of appeals, the high est judicial tribunal of that state, has pronounced unconstitutional the anti-pleomarga rine law, upon which the statute recently nacted at Harrisburg was modeled. The difficulty of enforcing the latter is thus materially increased.

There are two general grounds of opposi tion to such legislation, both of which are more likely to receive serious consideration now than they were when the agricultural constituencies of members, who wanted to be re-elected were clamoring for the measure in question. First, it is questionable whether the authorities of the state have a right to prohibit the manufacture of an article which is not necessarily injurious to public health, and for which there is a market full of buyers who are willing to take the risk, if there be any risk; second, it will occur to some people to ask what reason there was to expect that a law absolutely prohibiting the manu-facture of oleomargarine could be enforced, when the very occasion of its introduction was the failure of the law prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine as butter. This difficulty of enforcement might have been expected to prove greater, not only on account of the more radical nature of the newer law, but because the older one fell short of expecta-tions notwithstanding the general approba-tion which greeted its enactment.

Both in this state and in New York, how and powers, and whether they think of the abstract justice of a measure or not they rarely trouble themselves about the possi-bility of its enforcement. The anti-pleomarrespect for law and law-makers in general.

NEW YORK, June 17 .- The long-looked for French steamsbip, Isere, came to anchor in the horseshoe in the harbor this morning, having consumed 27 days in her voyage from Rouen, France. The vessel is anchored abreast of the United States steamer, Omaha which has been waiting her arrival for a week. The voyage was prolonged by the fact that the Isere had been used as a transport and had not accommodations for coal to last six days for steaming purposes. She took a southerly course and touched at the Azore Islands, where she recoaled. The most of the voyage was made under sail, her engine speed not exceeding over six knots per hour. The United States steamer, Omaha, received the visitors with full honors. When the Isere came to anchor, Captain De Saune sent a telegram to Ge Stone, the acting secretary of the Bartho' statue committee, notifying him of the vessel's arrival and asking for instructions, To this General Stone sent a reply welcoming Capt. MARRIED ON A BLEAK SPOT.

Wedding Party Land on a Wild Part of Lake Michigan.
CHICAGO, June 17.—A tug-boat of people went 214 miles out in the lake last evening to the Crib, a solid stone structure through which flows the water that serves the needs of Chicago's inhabitants. It is exposed at all seasons of the year to the angry elements. The winds whistle and howl around it, and the waves constantly beat upon and sometimes dash over it. In winter it is surrounded by immense fields of ice. Notwithstand-ing its isolated location and its apparent indescribableness as a place of residence, it has always been customary to have a man at the Crib to keep its port holes clean of ice and debris, in order that the water might flow freely. For nearly five years past, Captain Charles McKee, an old and well known fresh-faced mariner, has dwelt there with his family. Last evening it was the scene of the marriage of his youngest daughter, Miss Lucy A. McKee to George H. Brown. It was to witness the ceremony that the gay tugboat load went out to the bleak spot.
