The body of Orson S. Murray, the agitator and reformer, arrived in this city at 4:45 o'clock Friday afternoon, from Cincinnati. The remains came on the first section of the Day Express; but Mr. Charles B. Murray, of the Price Current, Cincinnati, son of doceased, and three triends and cremationists accompanying did not reach the city until the second section came along three quarters of an hour later. It was nearly six o'clock when the party arrived at the crematorium, and as it had been announced that the incineration would not be private company of probably a hundred in number including quite a number of ladies, bad assembled to witness it. In a few moments the body was prepared for the the body was prepared for the furnace; the bier was wheeled out into the chapel, the black pall removed, and in the twinkling of an eye the remains were placed in the furnace, the door closed and the spectators, who had watched the proceedings with the proceedi the proceedings with respectful interest, slowly dispersed. The cremation was speedily accomplished.

The ashes remained in the retort all night and were removed this morning. They weighed four pounds, one ounce, The ashes of deceased were taken in charge y his son and will be placed along side those of his wife, who died twenty-five years ago.

THE CINCINNATI CREMATION COMPANY. Mr. Murray was accompanied to Lancaster by three members of the "Cincinnati Cremation company," namely: Henry Oliver, treas-urer; A. Meininger, secretary, and C. M. Lotze, attorney. We learn from them that the company was organized last November, with a capital of $25,000; that $12,000 of the stock has been taken; and a beautiful site selected for the crematorium, which will soon be erected.

The gentlemen above named left Landto-day at noon and went to New York to inspect the crematorium at that place. They seem themselves much pleased with the The gentlemen above named left Lancaster express themselves much pleased with the Lancaster crematorium, which is far superior to that at Washington.

Mr. Meininger is a son of the late Mr. Charles Meininger, of Cincinnati, Ohio, whose body was cremated at Washington, Pa., about four years ago, he being the first Ohioan whose remains were disposed of by

SKETCH OF THE DECEASED. From a copy of the Cincinnati Price following sketch of Orson S. Murray: He was born at Orwell, Vermont, Sept. 23, 1806, and died at his residence near Fosters, Warand died at his residence near Fosters, War-ren county, Ohio, on June 14, 1885. He was educated as a Roger Williams Baptist, re-ceiving a common school education, the distinguished statesman Silas Wright being one of his teachers. He was baptised in the Baptist faith when fifteen years old, became a preacher soon after reaching his majority, purchased the Casteton Statesman and the Permont Telegraph. In his newspapers he took strong grounds against slavery, intemperance, tobacco and even meat eating, and during his life refrained from using them. He framed for passage by the Vermont legislature the first resolution by state legislature instructing senators and requesting representatives in Congress to use their endeavors for the abolition of slavery and the slave trade in the District of Colum-bia and the suppression of the inter-state slave traffic. He was the only delegate from Vermont at the formation of the American anti-slavery society in 1833, and in the following year organized the first anti-slavery society in Vermont, He co-operated with John R. McDowal in his operated with John R. McDowal in his endeavors "to expose and do away with libertinism and prostitution in general and in the church in particular." After publishing the Vermont Telegraph six years as a religious paper he parted with his religious brethren "for want of agreemet in faith and practice." He removed to New York in 1843 and in 1844 he started The Re-"ignorance the Evil—Knowledge the Rem-edy." During the same year he removed to Warren county, Ohio, and continued the pub-lication until 1856. For many years past he lived retired at his home in Warren county, but was a frequent contributor to the newspapers. His anti-religious convic-tions were continued to the close of his life. Realizing that death was near he conversed freely and maintained to the fullest extent that there could be no future existence for living beings. Death had no existence for living beings. Death had no dread for him. He was conscious almost to the last hour of his life and died as peacefully dread for him. He was

A Remarkable Funeral Sermon

Herman Marckworth, jr., read what may b called the funeral sermon, which was writ-ten by Mr. Murray himself during his last illness. The paper was entitled, Bed Thoughts of Orson S. Murray." We make the following extracts:

On these occasions of disposing of the dead, it is the practice of Christendom to have speaking—done exclusively by those who claim to be superhumanly appointed and qualified. They claim to be "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood."

On this occasion no such assumption will be tolerated. The speaking will be of death-

be tolerated. The speaking will be of death-bed thoughts of him who now lies before you;

and whose thinking is at an end.

The chief efforts made by the adverse speakers are to impress the living with fear. Fear is a demoralizing force. It comes of ignorance, and undevelopment. The in culcation of it is not worthy of thinking, reasoning belong.

culcation of it is not worthy of thinking, reasoning beings.

The philosophy which assures me of peace and rest includes the thought, the full and abiding conviction, in the perpetual motion and universal, ceaseless change of all things; that in the relation of things this is inevitable. That in these processes all forms have their beginnings, their periods, terms and terminations of existence; that no torm is or can be the same thing two moments of time, during its existence; and never again the same existence. That this pertains to all forms which ever have been, are, or can be. Any system of things built on the thoughtless assumption that any form can have a beginning and an endless existence, is erroneous, and fallacious. All forms as such under whatever designation, of whatever powers, or forces, in whatever relations to whatever space, whatever existence, are whatever space, whatever existence, are ephermeral—evanescent. Herein is bed-rock on which to rest material philosphy, refuting and overthrowing the doctrine, the dog-ma, of the existence of the "Moral Gover-nor" of the universe, working with a design — with personal control of all things—a doc-trine utterly irreconcilable with things with-in our knowledge.

The moral government of our world, it trine utterly irreconcilable with things within our knowledge.

The moral government of our world, it seems to me, has hitherto gone irregularly. I have seen no evidence of superhuman power equal to having had it any better than it is. It is incompatible with the existence of a "Moral Governor" of the universe, controlling all things with design. Only an immoral governor could do with design such things as are done. Only unthinking, unreasoning beings, living in fear and trembling, can stultify themselves with the acceptance of the thought of such existence.

To me, nothing is plainer than the contradictory, conflicting doings of religion have been in the way—lave been preventive—making things worse.

Religion is of tendency, to effect, to cause the demonstration of the emotional, the sensational, over the rational, in beings otherwise the demonstration of the emotional, the sensational, over the rational, in beings otherwise possessing reasoning brains. It does not prevent the wrong, nor promote the right. The Christian religion is as genuinely a superstition as any other religion. Its devotees know not what they do. They worship an "Unknown God," and its worship pers persecute each unto death, for diagreeing as to the character of the "God" and the manner of the worship. Christianity does not make peace on earth nor good will among human kind.

The philosophy which, during more than forty years, in all my life's struggles—in prosperity and in adversity, in sickness and in health, in sunshine and in storm—does not now in the least for a moment forsake me nor fall me. The philosophy which has fully and constantly sustained me, in my faith and practice, I now rely upon unwaveringly. It consides me to approach the end before me in enables me to approach the end before me in peace and content. It enables me to feel that this perpetual end is rest from toil and trouble -is an entrance upon sleep which knows no about it pertains to my connection with the present. Many times during this my last sickness, death would have been a relief to me, only for the desire to further prosecute my unfinished work.

My accountability is to myself first, then to as many as I have had relations with in life. I recognize no accountability to any superhuman powers or forces. Where the power is, there is the responsibility. Here is the only ground for charity.

The work of this heart and these lungs, of this head and these hands, is cut short and is this head and these hands, is cut short and is ended. They have done what little they could, with their limited capacity and oppor-tunities, to humanize and moralize the human race.

I go to my perpetual rest, and to my sleep from which no power exists to awake me.

YOUNG JACOB ZULLINGER LOSES HIS LIFE IN THE SUSQUEHANNA.

The River Dragged in the Presence of His Widowed Mother Whose Only Support the Dead Boy Was-Change in Son Sunday Services-Church Picnics.

Regular Correspondence of the INTELLIGENCER COLUMBIA, June 20.-Jacob Zullinger, a lad aged about sixteen years, and who is employed in the Susquehanna rolling mill, was drowned in the Susquehanna river, near the mill this morning, between six and seven o'clock, while in bathing. He was waiting to take his "turn" at one of the mills, and having some time to spare, undressed and later John Sheetz happening to pass the place where the lad was bathing, saw him rise and sink several times. The last time he sank he did not rise again. An alarm was given and scores of persons hurried to the spot.

The river was dragged from the point where Zullinger sank in front of the mill's sand wharf, to the mouth of the raft shute, 150 feet below, but without success, the body h been probably, drawn to the shute I swift undercurrent. The lad met his either through cramp or he gave out, being but a weak swimmer.

The river was dragged in the presence of the widowed mother, whose grief was affecting, and more than one of those present shed tears. Zullinger, who was the sole support of his mother, resided with her on Manor street.

AID TO MANUFACTURERS. ecretary Bayard's Plan for Securing Desire

LANCASTER, PA., SATURDAY, JUNE 20, 1885.

Secretary Bayard has formulated a plan by which he proposes to obtain for American manufacturers, through the medium of the United States consuls in Europe, all the information they desire regarding manufac-turers abroad. He has written to large number of manufacturers of all kinds of articles throughout the country, asking them to submit to him any questions cover ing subjects upon which they desire infor-mation regarding the manufacture of their mation regarding the manufacture of their respective classes of goods in foreign countries, and these questions will be sent to the United States consuls abroad with instructions to obtain the information sought. Mr. Bayard hopes by this plan to procure for our manufacturers such information as will show conclusively whether in the price of the raw material, the cost of labor, improved machinery, etc., the American or the Europe show conclusively whether in the price of the raw material, the cost of labor, improved machinery, etc., the American or the European manufacturers have the advantage in the protection of manufactured articles. He believes that the possession of such information regarding the cost of manufacture and the price of raw materials abroad will also be of great advantage to the United States government as to the collection of duty on imported articles of manufacture. From the New York Times. In the latest issue of the Christian Union the Rev. Washington Gladden gives his opinion of the secular press in an article three columns long. "This, then," he concludes, "is the infirmity of the newspaper; It assumes to be an ethical teacher, but its object is to make money for its owner. It is constantly crippled in its teaching function by the main purpose of its publisher."

But some sneering secular journalist having observed that clergymen bave been known to desert their duty for an increase of salary, Mr. Gladden replies that "the minister of the gospel hopes for a livelihood no doubt: but he professes that his supreme loyalty is to truth, and that he is ready to make any sacrifice that truth may require of him." Money making is certainly a secondary consideration with clergymen. We do not think there can be any doubt about that. But is it to truth or to creeds, often to worn out creeds, that ministers of the gospel pro-ess and practice supreme loyalty?

If the light of noonday could be suddenly let in upon the secrets of newspaper management and upon the workings of the clerical mind, we are confident that for every editor who suppresses the truth and for the sake of gain writes what he does not believe, there would be found two ministers of the Gospel who have continued to preach the doctrine of eternal punishment years after they were in-wardly convinced that it was a monstrous

A Well Known Man in Tears. For several days there has been on trial in the circuit court at Indianapolis, Ind., an important suit against John C. New, involving the business affairs of the old First National bank, and it was elicited in the evidence that J. L. Slaughter, who was dismissed from the position of cashier in 1877, had embezzled about $40,000, but the matter was kept quiet during the taking of the testimony. On Friday W. H. English, Democratic candidate for vice president in 1880, who was president of the bank at the time of the cashler's peculations, was on the witness-stand, and when asked what he had known about the embezzlement what he had known about the embezehent he hesitated in answering and scemed to be deeply affected. "I knew Slaughter from earliest boyhood. I had known his father for many years," said Mr. English. Tears came into his eyes when he spoke and he gave way entirely to his emotion. He could say nothing more for several minutes. The silence was broken by a proposition from the attorneys to adjourn court for a few hours. but Mr. English said it would not be neces sary on his account. He explained that the father of the young man had died from grief over the discovery of his son's wrong-doing,

Clever Capture of Thieves When a Chicago & Alton freight train was stopping at the town of Normal, Illinois, on Thursday, William Dean, the conductor, saw a gang of young men break into one of his cars that was loaded with valuable merchandise. LINCOLN, Nebraska, June 20.-The folowing circular has just been issued and is being widely circulated: Urgent. | IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE

(Urgent.) IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA, EXECUTIVE OFFICE, LINCOLN, Neb., June 19.

DEAR SIR: In view of the momentous events of the last few days we deem it a duty to address you for the purpose of pointing out the urgency that exists for at once calling your branch together and taking steps to push the collection for the Parliamentary funds. Mr. Parnell with his band of 39 followers (and not even all of those reliable) has succeeded in defeating and driving from power the strongest government that ruled in England, banishing from Ireland in disgrace Earl Spencer and his brutal, loathsome minions, and causing such an awakening in public opinion at home and abroad loathsome minions, and causing such an awak-ening in public opinion at home and abroad on the subject of English misrule in Ireland that the attainment of self-government is now brought almost within our grass. The new ministry in England representing a new ministry in England representing minority in the House of Commons can only govern on sufferance during the balance of the sessions, and a general election in September or. October is now assured. With a moderate amount of the "sinews of war" at his command Mr. Parnell can secure at the general election the return of 89 reliable followers, and with that number and the labore of rower in the hands of an experi lowers, and with that humber and the balance of power in the hands of an honest Irish national party, the next two or three years will, we believe, bring forth results which few of us hoped to see accomplished in our time. We are at to see accomplished in our time. We are at present in communication with Mr. Parnell on the subject of fixing a time for our annua convention and hope to be able to lay his views before you at an early date. Meantime we urgently appeal to you to do all that lies in your power to push on the organiza-tion, and particularly to aid in raising for the Parliamentary fund such a sum as will enable Mr. Parnell to take advantage of the all-important opportunity now so near at hand. Relying on your prompt and vigor ous response to this appeal,
We remain, yours very truly.
