From the New York Herald.

From Battery point, where are congregated the "starters" of half a dozen surface railroad cars and omnibus lines; up Broadway to Canal street, between which points are scores of florists, great and small; at all the chief stations of the several "L" roads; on the wide payements of Fourteenth, Twenty third, Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets: in a hundred pretentious stores, where floral stocks valued at thousands of dollars are displayed; far up Broadway and Madison and Fifth avenues, flowers rich, rare, expensive, cheap, fresh, stale, bright and blooming, tired and faded, may be seen, admired, passed by or purchased any day in any week for nine months in the year. This is not a long known fact. Ten years ago street selling of flowers was rarely There were no distribution points then. There were as now great bazaars where out of town florists displayed many varieties, and with clerks and salesmen conducted a large and profitable business; but that was the regular trade, lasting all the year round, requiring cash capital, taste and experience Now-a-days one of the most flourishing of the subordinate traffics of New York is that of the florist. All seasons pay him tribute, All ages go to him for comfort. Friendship, courtship, marriage, birth and death alike utilize the language of his wares and contribute to his profit. The passing decade has witnessed a marvellous change and growth in this direction Many hundreds of thousands of dollar are invested in floriculture, and millions are invested in floriculture, and millions are annually spent for decorative and pleas ure-giving growths. It is and has long been the custom here to utilize flowers as an expensive but delicate medium for the expression of regard. Men who would not pressume to send a lady a metal token need not hesitate to load her with roses or garland her with illies. To such an extent has this become the fashion that some of the theatres resemble flower shows and all the ladies look semble flower shows and all the ladies look like blossoming shrubs. Fashions vary in flowers as they do in bonnets. A year ago huge bouquets were all the go. This year bouquets are still in favor, but the corsage reigns supreme.

Driving parties, dinner parties, dancing parties and theatre parties spends tens of thousands in rose corsages. A few evenings since a theatre party of thirty-six occupied all the boxes in Wallack's. The front rail of each box was adorned with massive each box was adorned with massive bouquets and eighteen ladies wore tremen-dous corsages of baron, tea and French pink roses. A more beautiful picture has rarely been seen. A leading Broadway florist said in reference to a question, "The 'no flower' business at funerals has not hurt the trade a bit. The furt is New York grows too fast for any one branch to seriously affect any good trade. We used to do a very large business at funerals, and do yet for that matter, but nothing like the old times. The custom of providing flowers at home will never be given up. Those people who request no flowers will be sent simply mean that they don't care to be bothered with an endless procession of messenger boys with flowers in every conceivable shape and variety. They provide flowers themselves—plenty of them—and don't need any other.

"Does that apply to funerals of public per-sons—actors, for instance?"

"Oh no. We sold over $500 worth of emblems to be sent to a Catholic church for an actor's funeral, and there were not less than $1,500 worth grouped about the altar and coffin. It was obviously absurd. No I can't say that there is any marked difference in that part of the trade, but the ordinary funeral business is knocked higher than Beecher's

"Do you do much theatre trade?" "Well, personally, I do more in the opera season, although I have my share, I suppose. I have sold fifty twenty-five dollar bouquets and fifty twenty-five dollar corsages night after night for the opera. When the manage-ment goes into it the prices are figured low, but even then the cost is enormous. A florist in this city sold to the old Nilsson managethat ran the bill up to $500. One night, when Mrs. Florence Rice-Knox sang with Patti, some of Knox's friends sent her a lot of flowers which quite filled up the lobby, so the manager went to a florist and bought twenty bouquets and pieces that cost over $100—he had to do it—and sent them in to betti. Patti as from different sources. THEATBICAL CUSTOM.

And how with the regular theatres ?" "They bring us a great deal of custom, but chiefly on first nights. Theatrical managers do not lay out for their company. I never knew one to send a dollar for an actor or an actress. Their friends, however, send very beautiful and expensive flowers, sometimes bouquets, very rarely cut flowers and often baskets and different styles of fancy pieces, all of which cost from $15 to $100 each. One baskets and different styles of fancy pieces, all of which cost from $15 to $100 each. One leading artiste always buys flowers to be sent to herself when she has a new part. That's business, however. Wallack's and the Union Square theatres used to bring us more high priced custom than all the others combined. Very often ladies who are to occupy boxes purchase magnificent bouquets which they display during the evening and later throw to the star or any favorite they may have on the star or any favorite they may have on the stage."

"How high are your best flowers?"

"These barons are selling readily at $2.50 each. Lillies and violets are in great favor just now, and the supply is plentiful. They come from Long Island hot houses in great abundance. Camelias, too, are once more in demand. I have sold scores of bouquets of camelias this month. A feature of the flower trade this past season was the mammoth size of the bouquets and corsages. A little bouquet is ready called for and a corsage that doesn't cover half the waist is no good. At all our great balls the floral display is something extraordinary. The expense, too, thing extraordinary. The expense, too, reaches a point which would appear incredi-ble if we didn't have the pleasure of handling the dollars."

THE BUSINESS BOOMING EVERYWHERE. Other florists tell the same story. Although one of the leading men in the trade failed last week the business, in prudent hands, was never better. In all the better grades of stores can be found most ingenious frames, buskets, boxes, cages, and vases, which are sold at big profit to purchasers who desire to send them filled with rare and costly flowers so the maidens of the choice, temporary or permanent, as the case may be. A very pretty dish, an exquisite Parian vase, or a stately column may be greatly enhanced in beauty and cost by the addition of a beautiful display of cut flowers, and fre-quently is. In some theatres managers won't permit flowers to be handed over the footpermit flowers to be handed over the footlights because it interferes with the business of the scene, and besides kindles unnecessary jealousies. The artists manage to show their presents, however, by dressing the stage with them in any scene which is peculiarly their own. The business, once very small and meagre, has grown tremendously.
Scores of large depots are making money and others smaller in size do equally well in profits. At all the chief "L" stations men or boys sell hundreds of boutonnieres every night, and in concert halls, at the terries and in many public places humble peddlers gain in many public places humble peddlers gain their honest pence. Taken in a lump, the flower trade is quite a metropolitan feature. And what a story might be written of the motives inducing purchase, and the direc-tions in which the the flowers are sent!

WRAT WAS HIS CREED ? He left a ton of anthracite
In front of a poor widow's door, When the deep snow, frozen and white, Wrapped street and square, mountain and moor. That was his deed ;

He did it wall.
What was his creed ?" Blest "in his basket and his store." liest "in his basket and his store,"
In sitting down and rising up,
When more he got, he gave the more,
Withholding not the crust and cup.
He took the lend
In each good task—
"What was his creed?"
I did not ask,

His charity was like the snow Soft, white and silken in its fall; Not like the noisy winds that blow From shivering trees the leaves, a pall For flower and weed Prooping below.
"What was his creed?"

He had great faith in loaves of bread For hungry people, young and old : And hope-inspiring words he said To him he sheltered from the cold : For men must feed
As well as pray.
"What was his creed ?"

I cannot say. In words he did not put his trust : In faith his words were never writ : He loved to share his cup and crust With any one who needed it, In time of need
A triend was he—
"What was his creed ?"

He told not me. He put his trust in beaven, and worked Ever along with hand and head ; And what he gave in charity

And what he gave in charity
Sweetened his sleep and daily bread.
By word and deed
To help the poor—
That was his creed;
