Book-Keeping in the Navy Department. It would have been a genuine surprise if Mr. Calhoun, the expert who has had the book-keeping methods of the navy department under investigation, had found them porrect or intelligent. Everything else being quite as bad as it could well be, there was every reason why the accounts should be in perfect harmony. And Mr. Calhoun has so discovered.

He finds that each of the eight bureaus keeps its own set of books, which show only the particular operations pertaining to it, and in no one are the methods the same as in any other. He finds it impossible to get immediate information about any one thing. If he wanted to know how much money has been expended upon any one of thecruisers now under construction, he says, it will take him days to get the information. If he wanted to know how much money was in the hands of the paymasters at different points, it would require weeks, If not months.

He simply finds that there is no system, and that as a result, almost any sort of fraud might be perpetrated with little chance of finding out when, where and how it had been done, or who was responsible for it. This was shown practically a year or two ago when a systematic and loug continued series of defalcations was found to have been in operation in the bureau of medicine and surgery. But that anybody should expect to find any other condition than this, is more than can be believed. As everything has been going at loose ends in the navy department for full twenty years, it would not have been possible to make the accounts do other than represent this chaptic condition.

So much for the merely technical side of the question from the accountant's point of view. When the dishonesty and the mismanagement of the department are taken into consideration, it is plain that blind account books would be the natural and necessary allies of such rogues as Robeson and Chandler, and of such incompetents as Thompson and Goff and Hunt. If the final investigation which Secretary Whitney will order does not show that these blind accounts have concealed the waste and the theft of millions hitherto unknown or unaspected, careful and intelligent men who have for many years watched the course of things will have good reason to be sur-

Scarcely Constitutional. A very fine specimen of the crudity which characterizes much current legislation is furnished in the text of the so-called law passed by the last legislature against "gambling and lotteries." The Philadelphia Times, which has been a fervent crusader in this field, congratulates the publie that this law is a deadly blow at the last surviving form of gambling allowed by aw; but it fails to point out wherein the new law relates particularly to anything that is of even the form of gamb ling The new statute has no reference whatever to schemes of chance, but seems to forbid the giving of any prize or token of a premium with merchandise sold. H d it been directed against tickets or memoranda, entitling the holder to a "chance" at something of value, or to lot or part in some drawing for premiums and prizes, it might perhaps have been counted as against gambling or lotteries. But if the ten store chooses to present a piece of glassware to every purchaser of a certain amount; or the dry-goods merchant to give the thread and buttons with the dress, or the tobacco seller to give a chromo with every plug, it is doubtful if the legislature has any power to prohibit it. Time out of mind newspaper publishers have given premiums to subscribers.

industry and conscientious care Mr. Hay applied himself to the discharge of his official duties will regret that the government and the administration lose the services of so conspicuously fit and faithful an official.

His successor is spoken of by those who know him best as a man of clear head and rigorous body, highly capable for the re-sponsible office upon which he enters.

Out With It. The Philadelphia Press intimates that "something worse" can be urged against Mr. Quay "than his part in the apportionment defeat." It declares that that something,

"when it comes to be discussed, as it inevi-tably must be, will be much more difficult to deal with. Men familiar with the affairs of the state know that this candidacy involves much more serious matters, and that such a campaign cannot pass without their discussion. Republicans should understand what they are about." But how are they to understand what they are about when the Press speaks in such mysterious language. If it knows of "serious matters" affecting Col. Quay's candidacy and conceals them pending his nomination, it does injustice to its party; if it proposes to keep on concealing them after his nomination it does injustice to the

In either case it does injustice to itself by an evasive policy. The Press may as well out with it. The Republican state convention wil meet on next Wednesday.

THE Prohibition cloud in Ohio is growing much larger than a man's hand.

The preservative effects of cold have not been well known until recently. Before 1874 or 1875 New York butter men lost much by reason of that commodity becoming too soft for use. One day an enterprising firm built a butter vault, which they kept at the temperature of 40° or 50°, and they could sell butter in July as hard as that in January. Then followed the discovery that eggs kept. Then followed the discovery that eggs kept in a cold place largely retained their freshness, and the storage of eggs became a big business, the stored eggs rating only about two cents below the price in the fresh egg market. Game and fruit were found to be susceptible to the same treatment. But one of the most useful ends effected by cold is the protection it affords to furs in summer time. Furriers once had great trouble with them, it being necessary to knock the worms out of their goods twice a week, or the hair would come off. Now a cold storage warehous does the work. These many uses of cold cheapen the products which they affect, and thus frigidity becomes the handmaid to economy in ministering to the wants of mankind.

THE pocket borough of Woodstock, which Lord Randolph Churchill has succeeded in carrying in his contest for re-election to Parliament, recalls the pocket borough of Nevads in the United States, the only one regarding which the government of this country is called upon to feel ashamed. Though it has never had 70,000 people, including Chinamen and Indians not taxed, it has had since its admission into the Union, two senators and one representative in Congress. In 1872 Nevada cast 14,649 votes ; in 1876, 19,691 in 1880, 18,345 votes; and in 1884, the number dwindled down to 12,797, or about twice the number polled the same year in the city of Lancaster. The men who represent this state are moneyed San Franciscans of the type of Fair, Jones, Sharon and Mackey, silver kings claiming a nominal residence therein. With half of the population of Lancaster county, Nevada has two voices in the federal Senate and one in the House. Let us hope that when another territory knocks at the doors of Congress for entrance as a state, there will be displayed more discretion than was exhibited in the admission of Neyada.

THERE seems to be something wrong with the fire alarm system under the management of the new chief engineer. It did not work well during the Fourth of July season when of all times it should have been in good working order. An alarm that misleads is worse than no alarm. Under Chief Howell the system was kept in efficient condition by his own supervision; Chief Vondersmith, with the aid of an electrician, whom the city is expected to pay, does not seem to be able to keep the thing working reliably. A discipline, too, that permits the engine horses to walk out of the stable and canter over the is loose and inadequate. Chief Vondersmith

THE Philadelphia Press is moved to won der that a church up in Providence, R. I. having a spire 191 feet high, decorated with a gilded ball which has grown shabby, should send a painter up to that "perilous position" to regild it. The Press has probably no heard that all over Europe for long ages there have been built and building noble architectural piles, dedicated to religious worship, which abound in "perilous positions" for the workmen who erect and maintain them. And yet the common judgment of mankind, of history and of art, of religion and humanity approves it. Even here in old Lancaster the painter goes up the 197 feet of Old Trinity's spire periodically to regild the ball; and no body is horrified at it.

CAMP BEATRICE, RESTIGOUCHE RIVER Canada, June 29.—Twenty-four hours from Montreal found me a guest of the Salmon Club at Metapedia. Of course, I was hos-pitably entertained. The club has forty members, mostly New Yorkers. The original price of shares was $1,000 each. Now $4,000 is their face value. Ex-President Chester A. Arthur is president of the club. He is ably assisted by a committee which includes many New York club men. The club has splendid houses, offices and grounds, and it owns scores of miles of the best salmon river in the world.

After an excellent breakfast our party took cances and with four Indians began to ascend the river. When about six miles from the club house we saw the stars and stripes floating from a flagstaff planted on the right bank of the river. Feeling assured that we should find protection under "our flag," we headed our cances for shore. A gentleman in a Norfolk jacket and knickerbockers appeared on the bank, and very politicly invited us to come into camp. Judge of my surprise to find in the person of our bost the vertiable Bardwell Slote, alias William J. Florence, the actor. He led us to his tent, where, spread out in regal magnificence on a bed of hemlock boughs, reposed the manly figure of the Hon. Lawrence R. Jerome. After handshaking all around, cocktails were unbibed and pipes of tobacco filled. "Why, Jerome," I asked, "what, in the name of nature, brought you so far away from Wall street?"

He was the genuine Jerome of the last quarter of a century. He straightened himself up, and between vigorous puffs of a meerschaum replied: "Last winter I spent three months in Washington, looking for an office for my son. I got the office and—um—um—malaria at the same time. On my return Jno. Chamberlin's doctor recommended iresh air and a change of scene for me. CLIPPING A TIGERS CLAW.

A Difficult Sargical Operation Performed One of the Bengal tigers out at the Zoologi cal garden, in Cincinnati, Ohio, known to the keepers as "Dickie," has been suffering for some time with a malformed claw, and on Friday it was determined to cut it out. "Dickie" is a powerful specimen of the most ferocious of beasts, and it was a problem for some time how she was to be handled. It was determined that the operation should be witnessed only by the directors and the employes of the garden and Dr. Zipperlein. In one of the small compartments of the inner tiger cage a low, strong temporary ceiling had been built. Sevtemporary ceiling had been built. Several pieces of timber nailed together firmly, very like a cellar door in appearance, were placed on end in the compartment, and to these were attached four ropes reaching outside of the cage. The tiger was driven into the compartment, the sliding door closed, and six stronger men began to pull on the ropes. This drew the "cellar door" close to the iron bars of the cage, with the tiger, now howling with rage, wedged between. She fought terribly, and with an enormous effort once broke the timbers. Superintendent Stephan, at the risk of losing an arm, reached into the cage over the writing, snarling beast, and refastened the ropes. Finally her right leg was caught in a noose and pulled straight out, while she was held in position by iron bars above, braced in the timbers back of her. All this time one of the men held a board in her jaws which she crunched as if it were a cracker. For a time it looked as if she would overpower the men and the operation would prove a failure; but the keen-eyed superintendent watched his chance and finally succeeded in extracting with a knife and heavy pair of pincers the offending claw, and the fighting, growling beast was released. Director Harper carried the claw away as a relic.;

The young woman was laid out on a row of chairs and no effort was made to revive her. This occurred at 9 o'clock in the morning and when a reporter called at 3 in the alternoon the woman was still in a stupor and surrounded by a throng of men and women, singing, shouting and praying. When the reporter offered to summon a physician he was threatened with personal violence if he should do so. The woman remained unconscious until 7 o'clock when she revived.

Should Bachelor Presidents Marry?

Those who know President Cleveland well, assert that he has no intention of marrying during his term of office. He is said to be wedded to his duties, and is the hardest worker the White House has yet seen. He has a constitution able to stand a vast amount of labor, and Duffy's Purk Malt Whishey will prevent any bad effects from overwork or insomnia, and keep his system in a state of perfect health. A dollar will secure a bottle from any leading druggist or grocer, which is free from adulteration, and safely adapted to the most delicate system.
