THE WORM WILL TURN.

Jim Thought He Knew Mary, But She Cor vinced Him That He Didn't,

We were winding down one of the moun tain roads of Tennessee in a cart drawn by a mule. The land was barren, the cabins no better than hovels, and it were a query how people made a bare living or was content to stay. By and by we came to a turn in the road where there was a trough to water horses, and the cabin of a settler. This cabin wa the poorest of all, and nothing around it indicated that the owner made any attempt to cultivate the soil. We reached the place just in time to witness a tableau. A woman, poorly dressed, and her face bearing the look poorly dressed, and her face bearing the look of one who had seen much worry and suffer-ing stood near the trough, and a satchel filled with clothing sat on the ground beside her. Five feet away stood her husband, a burly, tough-faced mountaineer, and he held a switch in his hand. Neither minded us as we drove up, and it was a full minute before the husband said :

he husband said:
"Mary, I'll wollop ye!"
"Jim, ye dasn't!" she replied.
"Mary, ye can't leave me, nohow."
"Jim, I'm gwine ter do it! I've starved an' suffered till I'm clean gone! I'm going

"Mary, if ye don't take up that satchel and march in I'll wollop ye good and stout!"

There were two of us besides the driver There were two is a scanned our faces, as if to judge how far she might count on our help, and the driver said:
""Tain't rulable for strangers to mix in,

Mary, and Jim's got a knife and would kill somebody. Better go in." "Never!" she hissed.

"If you don't," said the husband as he came a step near, "I'll make the fur fly. Take that!" With a swish he brought the switch down across her shoulders and raised it again She stood stock still for a minute and looked him in the eye, and then walked into Rayther peart, but the gad will cure her!" grinned the husband as he drew the switch through his tingers. His triumph was short lived. In sixty seconds Mary reappeared. She had the mountaineer's heavy rifle in her hands, and as she came out she raised it on a line with the man's heart:

"Jim, I want ye to git!"
"N-o!"

Sartin!" "Shoo! Can't do it!"

Click! Click.
"Mary, what ye gwine ter do?" "Kill ye like a wolf in yer tracks if ye don't walk away." "Whar to ?"

"Nobody keers! Go sumwhar'-keep going -don't never come back! Hurry up, fur I'm going down on the stage!" He looked into her eyes and saw the change. Poverty and brutality had come to an end. Love had turned to disgust, and in place of fear was such bravery as he would not have looked for in a man on the road. He saw "shoot" in her eyes, but he still hesi-

"Mary, drop that rifle," he whispered.
"Jim, git! If you are here when I've finished counting twenty I'll kill you as sure as there is a God in heaven!"

He began backing away. When he had gone twenty feet he turned and walked. When he twenty feet he turned and walked. When he had gone a hundred he halted, wheeled about, and after a long look muttered:

"Wall, by gosh! Mary, let's make up!"

"Keep a-gittin', Jim," she replied, as she still covered him with the rifle.

In five minutes he was out of sight up the road. The woman placed the gun and satchel in the cart, walked into the hovel to be gone two minutes, and when she came back to the eart and took a seat with us, flames were seen creeping through a hundred crevices be-tween the dry logs. Without a word she climbed in, and only once during the fivemile ride did she utter a word. At a bend in the road she looked back at the pyramid of smoke and flame wrought by her hands, and said, as if to herselt:

"Jim didn't know Mary, Jim didn't."

Ingersol's Idea of George Eliot's Poetry. "I've not read Miss Cleveland's book," said Colonel Ingersoll to a reporter, "but if the author condemns the poetry of George Eliot she has made a mistake. There is no poem in our language more beautiful than 'The Lovers,' and none loftier or purer than 'The Choir Invincible,' There is no poetry in the 'beyond.' The poetry is here—here in this world where love is—in the heart. The poetry of the "beyond" is too far away —little too general. Shelly's 'Sky Lark' was in our sky—the 'Daisy,' of Burns grew on our ground, and between that lark and that day is groundy and the real poetry of that daisy is room for all the real poetry of Every Meal is a Trial To the dyspeptic. Flatulence, heartburn, op-pressive fullness of the stomach, are the inevipressive fullness of the stomach, are the inevitable sequences of his use of the knife and fork. To say of him that he gratifies the cravings of appetite would be genuine satire. He only appeases them. Is relief attainable? Certainly, and by the use of a pleasant as well as thorough remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Will it cure immediately? Certainly not—it does not effect miracles. But it does give prompt and unspeakable relief, and will, if persisted in, produce an ultimate cure. Not only does it impart duce an ultimate cure. Not only does it impart relish to the food, but promotes its conversion by the stomach into rich, health and strength ustaining blood. Super-sensitiveness of nerves, mental depression, and unquiet slum-ber, produced by interruption of the digestive functions, are also remedied by it. It is the finest preventive and curative of malarial disci ders, and relieves constipation, rheumatism kidney and bladder ailments, and liver com

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and iver complaint and rheumatism. Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water. All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure ms. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limb and it has worked a miracle in my case ; other wise I would have been now in my grave J. W. MOREY. BUPPALO, Oct. 1, 1881.

Poverty and Suffering. " I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick a day since, well, and none of us have been sick a uny and and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it.'
