Plucky Rescue of Imperilled Bathers at Atlan tic City. Eight persons were rescued from drowning while bathing near the foot of Massachusetts avenue, Atlantic City, on Wednesday. The party consisted of the Misses Hance, daughters of B. A. Hance, who occupies a cottage on Rhode Island avenue. Mr. H. S. Hefeman, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. A. A. Moore, of the Phoenix Iron company, Phoenixville, Pa.; Mr. James Leroy and two ladies whose names were refused.

adies whose names were refused. The Misses Hance ventured too far out and were carried into deep water by the tide, which is very strong at this point on account of the inlet current. The ladies account of the inlet current. The ladies became exhausted one after the other.

Mr. Hofeman, of .Wilmington, Delaware, who was near at the time, attempted to assist one of them and while struggling in the water, their perilous position was noticed by A. A. Moore, of the Phomix Bridge company, and George W. Sherman, who were standing near the pier. Mr. Moore thought at first that they were merely sporting in the waves, but he watched them carsfully and saw that they were in danger. He hastily procured a long plank from the new iron pier and floated out towards them. Meanwhile a large crowd had gathered on the beach, and plank after plank was floated out towards the imperilled persons. It was noticed that Mr. Hofeman was exhausted, whereupon Mr. Sherman went to his rescue, and after considerable effort brought him safely to the shore. Mr. Moore's son seeing that his father was nearly exhausted, rushed into the surf and brought him ashore.

A boy, who had witnessed the excitement from the beginning, ran to the patrol boat of Rutter brothers, life guards, and gave the alarm. James Heffy, who is a member of the crew, ran up the beach, and, hastily removing his clothes, at once plunged into the water and assisted in bringing Mr. Hofeman to shore. The ladies in the meantime were clinging to planks or rather floating around them. Heffy managed to get several of the planks together and lifted the girls upon them. Charles Tyndal seized a rope and with much difficulty swam out to the planks and heroically labored among the unconscious ladies until he had bound the planks and heroically his laborious task. The ladies were laid on the sand, and the usual methods of resuscitation used. One of the ladies was breeding at the nose and mouth. Mr. Sherman devoted his time to bringing Mr. Moore to consciousness, and others gathered about Mr. Hofeman. Shortly after, fresh shrieks were made by the crowd, and two ladies fainted in the water and be-gan floating out with the tide. They were and two ladies fainted in the water and began floating out with the tide. They were rescued by Mr. Charles Tyndal and another gentleman. James Leroy, during the excitement, attempted to swim out to the ladies and assist Messrs. Holeman and Moore, but he became cramped and exhausted, and would have gone down had it not been for the assistance he received.

The scene on the beach following the rescues was one of great confusion and excitement. Those who were attending to the unconscious people were embarrassed by the numerous suggestions made by others. At the critical period one of the owners of a bath house came out and accosting one of the Rutter brothers accused him of getting up the excitement to injure his bathing business. The Misses Hance are now attended by Dr. W. M. Pollard, and one of them is reported seriously ill. Both Mr. Holeman and Mr. Moore are suffering from nervous exhaustion Moore are suffering from nervous exhaustio and are attended by a physician.

He threw up his hands and cried for help, but he was so far away that his comrades were unable to reach him before he sank. His body has not yet been re

THE NEXT CREMATION. Its Subject a Scientist and Medical Author of Elmira, N. Y.

The late Dr. Thaddens T. Up de Graff, whose body is expected here for cremation, was a citizen of note in Elmira, N. Y. He died there on Monday about noon of Bright's disease. He had been in poor health for several months. On April 2d he grew so poorly that he was forced to take a respite rom his trying labors to seek improved health. He, in company with other gentle-men, visited the Island of Cuba. The doctor seemed to grow better in health and returned after a stay of three weeks. For a few days after his return he seemed greatly improved and looked forward to good health again. But suddenly be was taken worse and was confined to his bed. He rallied somewhat from this decline but for the past month at least it had been the opinion of his family and physicians that he could not recover. Notwithstanding this the immediate coming of his death was unexpected and was received of his death was unexpected and was received with a great shock by his family.

Dr. Up de Graff was born in Harrisburg, Pa, in 1839, hence he was but 46 years of age. When the war began he organized the 26th Illinois volunteers and was made captain of the company. He served as captain and surgeon of the organization during the war and when it closed, went to Elmira where he since made his residence. He made a speciality of eye and ear difficulties and surgical operations. His skill as an oculist and aurist became extended and his patients increased in number, until in 1872.

and surgical operations. His skill as an oculist and aurist became extended and his patients increased in number, until in 1872, he founded the surgical institute on Hudson street in the Fifth ward. Dr. Up de Graff built up a reputation for the institute and it has been the home of many who have had difficulties of seeing and hearing.

Dr. Up de Graff took a deep interest in microscopical studies and was instrumental in founding the Microscopical society of Elmira, of which he was secretary at the time of his death. He was thoroughly conversant with the studies of the miscroscope and had the honor of being made a fellow of the Royal Microscopical society of England. Dr. Up de Graff was the surgeon of the Northern Central railway, medical director of the Southern Tier Masonic Relief association as well as past eminent commander of the Masonic order. He was the inventor of a mikro-photo camera which enabled the artist to take 25 pictures instantaneously, and was editor and publisher of the Bistowry, a medical publication, since its establishment twenty years ago.

artist to take 25 pictures instantaneously, and was editor and publisher of the Bistowry, a medical publication, since its establishment twenty years ago.

Deceased leaves a widow and five children —Thad, Way, Fritz, Kate and Alice. In his home life he was very pleasant and genial. He took great interest in his children, and spent many haypy hours with them. During the doctor's absence in Cuba and during his long illness, the care of the institute devolved upon the eldest son Thad, who was specially educated to succeed his father, and who has for the past two years performed a greater share of the work of the institute. It will be continued as before by Dr. Thad Up de Graff, jr.

The Gazette says: "The death of Dr. Up de Graff takes away one of Elmira's best known citizens. He was public spirited and more or less identified with all public enterprises, especially if they were in any way scientific or would tend to bring fame to our city. He possessed the triendship of numberless citizens not alone of Elmira, but of other places. All these as well as the community at large, will deplore the fact that so prominent a citizen should be taken so early in his career of u schulness."

At 5 p. m. to-day the Masons of Elmira proceed to the late institute of deceased and take charge of his remains. They will be taken to the auditorium of Park church where the Masonic funeral service will be observed and where the friends of deceased may gather. The body will then be brought to Lancaster accompanied here by Rev. Dr. Beecher; Dr. Gleason, the medical reformer; E. L. Adams, of the Elmira Advertiser; J. H. Burney and probably other friends. After the cremation the ashes will be taken back to Elmira and deposited in Woodlawn, a cometery there. Dr. Up de Graff destred to have his remains disposed of in one of two ways, either to be; consumed by lime or by cremation. He rather inclined toward the former and left full directions as to how it should be done, but his family think cremation more satisfactory.
