The Concaster Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, AUGUST 8, 1885.

The Great Grant Funeral. Eulogy has exhausted itself in praise of the character and services of Gen. Grant. Preacher, poet, historian and friend have sung and declaimed his merits and the bitterest opponents have conceded his good qualities and praised his strong points. Much that has been true has been fitly said; much that is new has been called out for the enrichment of history and biography, and some things that are false and in ill taste have marred the solemn ceremony.

But the heart of the whole people is stirred to profound sympathy with the event of to-day. The spectacle in the metropolis of the country is one that all its many millions of citizens view with interest, and the accounts of the ceremonies will be read with eager attention by the people of all the civilized world. There may have been intelligent desire and reasonable expectation that less pomp and simplicity would have marked the interment of the citizen soldier and president, but to the popular mind and to the foreign view Gen. Grant embodied the successful completion of a bitter struggle for the government's existence and the conquest of peace after prolonged and horrid war.

It is well for trade and business to some times stop their manifold activities and contemplate the transitoriness of earthly things. It is wholesome for fifty millions of people to be inspired at seasons by a common sentiment. It is patriotic for the representative men of all sections and parties to gather by the bier of one who, dead, represents unity and reconciliation, the n'whty power of a free people, the far-reaching possibilities of a great re-

Marriage in New York and England, The case before the English House of Lords, sitting as a committee of privileges, in which Minister Phelps was summoned to testify on one side, and Senator Edmunds on the other, seems to have been decided, or evade, rather, by that judicatory t than that upon which Americans were called. in issue was the right to the dignities of the Landerdale Scottish peerage. This controversy between the claimants is one over which the House of Lords has exclusive jurisdiction, though the title to the realty situate in Scotland is triable in the Scotch courts; thus it happens that these tribunals differ sometimes, and the title goes to one litigant and the estates to the other. The case hinged on the question of whether the petitioner's great-grandfather. Col. Richard Maitland, and Mary M'Adam, the mother of his son, had been lawfully married in New York in 1772. It was admitted that their son, the grandfather of the claimant, was born before this marriage, but the law then as now seems to have been that the subsequent marriage legitimatized the issue. The counter claimant's case was that the law of that day required publication of the banns, that no such publication had been made in this case, and that therefore the marriage was invalid and the descent therefrom could not inherit.

Minister Phelps was called to testify as to whether the "Duke's laws" of 1662 and 1684, in which the requirement of banns had its origin, were in force in New York in 1772, and be gave as his opinion that they had had no force since 1691. At the same time he testified that it had been held by the highest court in America that it was not necessary that banns should be published, or a license obtained to constitute a valid marriage in New York; there had been no alteration in the law of marriage in New York between 1772 and the pres-

Upon the continuing force of the "Duke's laws" in 1772, Senator Edmunds squarely joined issue with Minister Phelps: but upon this point, though there was an intimation by Lord Selborne against Mr. Phelps' position, there was no direct decision. The whole case was decided for the aimant on a technical rule of evidence as burden of proof. The counter-claimant did not prove that banns or license had not been published or obtained, nor did the claimant prove that they had been. All the evidence showed that a clergyman solemnized a marriage according to the forms prescribed by the Anglican prayer book, and that, shortly afterward, the husband died. Whereupon the House of Lords took the charitable view, in the absence of any proof to the contrary, that it was to be presumed what should have been done was done, and the validity of the marriage was sustained. After this question had been disposed of, the next was whether or not the marriage made legitimate the sons already born; that was promptly decided in the affirmative.

The case is one of large interest, not only because of the eminent witnesses called and the high authority of the testimony given, and for the exhaustive inquiries into the colonial laws of New York, Dutch and English, that have been made both in London and New York; but because from so high a judicatory has again been affirmed the disposition of the courts to sustain the validity of marriage and legitimatize the issue thereof, wherever possible to discover the matrimonial intent of the parties.

This is Business.

Secretary Whitney has given John Roach and his bondsmen notice that as the agree ment to build the cruisers in a certain time and according to certain specifications has not been complied with, the United States will take possession of them, credit the builder with the work actually done, and complete them. This will require Mr. Roach to pay only the difference between what he claims and what he has really paid out, and may be considered quite as liberal terms as he or anybody else could fairly

Even by doing this the government will be cheated, in that it will be compelled to take something it does not want and which does not come up to its own specifications. But as Mr. Roach, after receiving the bounty of the government to the extent of more than ten millions of dollars, has thought proper to make an assignment, which many well-informed persons believe to be bogus, it is the part of good policy for the government to take what it can get. If Mr. Roach's definitive gratitude had included favors received as well as favors expected, there would have been no difficulty in making an arrangement by which neither he nor the government would have suffered.

But Mr. Roach and his attorney, William E. Chandler, had a point to make against the changed methods of the navy department, and an assignment was considered a good way of making it. Even if the government does not get the worth of its money out of the new cruisers, if will be no new thing. It has seldom done this when dealing with Mr. Roach during the past twenty years. It will, however, get rid of the contractor himself for good and all. And this will be much. Whether it shall build the vessels of the future in its own yards or let them out to other contractors, it may be able to get a pretty good proportion of its money's worth. It is certain to rid itself of the Old Man of the Sea who has been hanging on so long.

Secretary Endicott's Good Work.

Secretary Endicott has been rather slow getting down to effective work, but his first positive and far-reaching order will bring consternation to the army favorites who have long been luxuriating in fat and pleasant places. The new army regulation which the secretary has promulgated provides that an officer must serve at least three years with his company before he can be detached for staff or other service, and that no officer shall remain detached for a longer time than four years, unless as signed to duty at the war department. This ought to break up the worst abuses which can find lodgment in the army in times of peace. Service with his company on the frontier is not exactly a life of pleasure. It is remote from cultivated society, with few of the advantages which life in Washington or the larger cities afford. But it is positively all we have for our soldiers to do. It is in this work that all military training is secured. If by favoritism or any other cause or excuse the officer misses this while he is still a young man, he is practically without use to the government which has borne the expense of his education. If Secretary Endicott can send out the idlers and the drones he will do a good work, even if he drives a goodly number out of the army.

The preliminary report of the new com-nissioner of internal revenue. Hon. Joseph S. Miller, on the general condition of the service, exhibits the gratifying fact that, largely through the consolidation of the 126 districts into eighty-five districts, and the reduction of the revenue agents from thirty-five to twenty, a saving of $600,000 in cost of collection was effected in the fiscal year ended July 30, 1885, as compared with the previous year. The total collections were about $112, 420,111, and the cost of collection was 3.9 per cent, of that sum. Illicit manufacturing is not sufficiently engaged in to materially decrease the revenue receipts.

"The suspensions in the foregoing cases were, with two exceptions, made for partisanship. The two were made upon reports of inspectors showing bad management of the offices by the incumbents.

No fitter, manlier and more creditable tribute is paid to Grant than by Horatio Seymour, one of the first citizens of the republic and one of the few surviving, honored men for whose elevation to the presidency millions of his countrymen have voted. No more fragrant flower is cast upon the coffin than this from the Sage of Deerfield.

PROPESSOR HILGARD has resigned as the superintendent of the coast and geoditic survey which, it must be conceded, is a very good way of getting out of a very bad But the acceptance of his resignation while his case is still under investigation will not strike the public as good policy. The charges against him and his bureau are of the most serious order, including drunkenness and general demoralization, embezzle ment, forgery and conspiracy. If these are true, and his resignation must go far to establish them, he deserves the severest punishment known to the law, and no sentiment of leniency or pity or consideration for age, attainments or service should save him from the penalty. So long as there are plenty of penitentiaries, such offenders should be sent to them without mercy, just as if they were the ordinary kind of felons.

BAD as some of the Grant poetry is, the pictures of the funeral incidents, prepared by "our special artist on the spot"—three weeks ago—are unspeakably insufferable.

"How To Die Well." The New York Churchman, referring to Dr. Freeman's estimates of the "great examples" in history, cites the special notices of Altred of England, St. Louis of France, and Washington. The Englishman and the Frenchman are claimed by the eulogists as saints and scholars." Statesman and patriot as he was the American lived too near our own times for his apotheosis. But the Churchman observes: "There was in Washington, however, no absence of saint ship or scholarship which essentially mars his fame or makes him to have been other than one of the noblest characters in history." Dr. E. A. Freeman, it will be remembered, visited this country recently and lectured to American audiences on "The English People in its Three Homes."

The Churchman goes on to say of Grant in opposition with Alfred: "With all his saintship, the great English prince and law-giver did not, and could not better, show to the world how to die well. This of itself has consecrated General Grant's memory and has made his example to be a heritage forever. As for scholarship, it is neither recorded of Alfred nor Saint Louis, nor any other historic character, that he deliberately set himself to write a book when, as he knew, the shadows of the grave were slowly but surely gathering about him. Cresar—and what reflections are started up at the bare mention of the name of that heartless conqueror—writes his cold-blooded commentaries in the fullness of health. But General Grant, with nothing to be shaped of as 'a warrior and the started of the star nothing to be ashamed of as 'a warrior, and nothing, we may be sure, which the world will be ashamed of either, summons to the task his remaining and ever-falling strength, gives to the world his book and—dies. It is a story so touching and sublime in its simplicity that the generations to come will fondly dwell upon it as one of the most re-markable things in history."

MEDICAL.

A QUESTION ABOUT Brown's Iron Bitters

ANSWERED.

The question has probably been asked thous ands of times, "How can Brown's Iron Bitters cure everything?" Well, it doesn't. But it does cure any disease for which a reputable physician would prescribe IRON. Physicians recognize Iron as the best restorative—gent kown to the profession, and inquiry of any leading chemical firm will substantiate the assertion that there are more preparations of iron than of any other substance used in medicine. This shows conclusively that iron is acknowledged to be the most important factor in successful medical practice. It is, however, a remarkable fact, that prior to the discovery of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS no perfectly satisfactory from combination Brown's Iron Bitters does not injure the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—all Brown's Iron Bitters does not injure the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—all other from Bitters do. Brown's Iron Bitters do. Brown's Iron Bitters cures Indigestion, Billousness, Weakness, Dyspepela, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, Tired Feeling, General Debility, Pain in the Side, Back or Limbs, Headache and Neuralgia—for all these aliments Brown's Iron Bitters aron is prescribed daily. Brown's Iron of benefit is renewed energy. The muscles then become firmer, the digestion improves, the bowels are active. In nomen the effect is generally more rapid and marked. The eyes begin at once to brighten; the skin clears up; healthy color comes to the cheek; nervousness disappears; functional derangements become regular and if a nursing mother, abundant sustenance is supplied for the child. Remember, Brown's Iron Bitters is the ONLY iron medicine that is not injurious. Physicians and Druggists recommend it. The Genuine has Trade Mark and crossed red lines on wrapper, TARE NO OTHER.
