Woman the Home-Maker,

T. W. Higginson, in Harper's Bazar, "Home," says the proverb, "is where the heart is," but, if so, no man seems to have heart enough to fit out a home without a woman to help him. A woman can do it for self; there lies her advantage. It may be harder for a woman to make money; un-doubtedly it is harder. She makes a dollar, perhaps where a man makes twenty; but when it comes to purchasing power her dol-lar goes the farthest toward the maintenance of a home. So long as she retains it the is strong and self-respecting, and even if she parts with it, so strong is the instinct of home that she can sometimes reconstruct it for her-self, even in a boarding house. If the home is combined with a little freedom in the use of money, it gives more comfort and more local prestige than a lone man can win by a fortune. What would be the social condition of any country village in our At-lantic states without a first-class maiden lady! She is the daughter of "old squire" somebody, or of "parson" somebody else; she lives in the great square house, with its elms and its white lilacs and its breezy hall; she has a maid or two who have lived with her so long that they seem like half sisters; she has in daily use the precious china and the old chairs that her envious city niece vainly tried to rival at auction rooms; she manages the book club and the church sociable; she is the confidante of all the love affairs; she calls upon the new-comers, if worthy—indeed the newcomers, if worthy, bring letters to her. To the older in-habitants of the town she always seems young and even elegant; she has a prolonged tradition of precedence that outlasts youths and beauty; if she has a sister they are spoken of to the end of their days as "the Parker girls." All this is the joint result of vomanhood which creates homes. It is not only potent for itself, but it extends its potency over all other homes. What compared to this is the social position given by wealth to the lonely old bachelor of the country village? Though he be a millionairs, he is simply "the old bach." The truth is that as people grow older it is the man who becomes dependent, and the woman the central and essential figure of the household, not a home. In youth it is easy to ignore, to say with Shakespeare in "Henry V": That men are merriest when away from home But the merriment is shallow, the laugh is forced, and the years and sorrow soon bring him back, a repentant prodigal, to his home and to woman, the only home-maker.

since she can do without him and he cannot without her. The proof of this lies in the fact that we see all around us self-sufficing and contented households of women, while house that contains men only is a barrack

From the Detroit Free Press. A watermelon and a cucumber which found themselves on the same stand at the central market vesterday began quarrelling : "You are all colic, to say the best of you," remarked the melon.

"And you are all seeds and rinds" retorted ome, now, what's all this row about?" queried the stand keeper as he finished seli-

"No such thing! old rind and seeds prides himself on being able to kill two men to my one, and you know that is all wind!"
"Hush, my children," whispered the stand keeper. "While I appreciate both of you for all you're worth, neither of you is justified in all you're worth, neither of you is justified in doing any bragging at this season of the year. The harvest apple is now knocking 'em out in one round." Why He Would Not Renew.

From the Texas Siftings.

"I wish you would renew this note. My father will indorse for me," said a Texas youth to Mose Schaumburg.

"Yen a fader has got no more sense than to indorse for such a son as you vas, vat segurity ish dot for me? Dot shows dot your fader vas a block of the young chip."

Finally my wife induced me to try a bottle of Dr. Kennedy, "Favorite Remedy," which abe die. Finally my wife induced me to try a cottage of Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy,' which she had somewhere heard of or seen advertised. Without the slightest faith in it, but solely to gratify her, I bought a bottle of a druggist in our village. I used that and two or three bottles more, and, to make a long story short, I am now as healthy a man as there is in the country.

"Since then I have recommended Favorite Remedy' to others whom I know to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints; and assure the public that the 'Favorite Romedy has done its work with a similar completeness in every single instance, and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of it and try the 'Favorite Remedy,' as I did."—Washington Monroe, Cutskill, N.
