verous, and was suffering from an aimost perpetual pain in the stomach. At times he would be seized with frightful convulsions, and nothing seemed to allay his sufferings but food. He had a rav-enous appetite, and could est a hearty meal a dozen times a day. The doctors, after a long course of treatment, succeeded in taking from the man a tape worm and also a snake 13 inches long, resembling a monstrous angle worm. The physicians were some-what astonished at finding so strange a resident as the snake in the man's stomach, but they were quite dumb-founded by the startling phenomenon that presented itself soon after. While exam-ining the reptile, the physicians found that it was actually giving birth to an-other claimant for the vast quantity of food devoured by the uniortunate Jack tar. They could account for the appearance of the snake in the man's stomach, but that a reptile, which when quite small had found its way there should increase to its present size, and also have young was a problem which they were unable to yolve. The tape worm, to-gether with the snake and its progeny, were carefully placed in a bottle, and are now on exhibition at the dispensing department in the custom house. yesterday afternoon Michael Hendricks, who owns a horse and wagon and does hauling around town, was employed by Maulfair & Co. to haul flour from their mill to a car on the Reading siding to be shipped away. About half-past four o'clock he had unloaded a wagon of flour and was going to the mill for another load, when in cross-ing the Pennsylvania railroad at the Mill street crossing, met with an acci-dent that was very near fatal in its results. The attention of Hendricks was called to some other direction while he was on the rather fast the horse was struck in the left side and hurled violently from the track. The horse was considerably bruised and had a shoe torn from one of its front feet. Hen-dricks was a badly frightened man over his narrow escape from Injury or death. Pleasure Clab.

A Considerate Kind of Town.

Over in Gettysburg, Miss Annie Lewis, who is playing in Fulton opera house, was not allowed to appear in the local opera house, a few evenings ago, because a lady next door was ill, and her husband asked the burgess to prohibit the performance. The burgess not wishing to take the responsibility upon himself, called a meeting of town council, who, after reading certificates from two phys-icians, declaring "that any performance in the opera house would be detrimental to the life of Mrs. Needy," and hearing other argu-ments, passed a resolution not to issue any icense to any troupe to give a performance in McClellan's opera house so long as Mrs. C. J. Neely was in a critical condition." Mr. J. D. Lee, manager of the company, became very indignant, but cooled down quietly and arranged to show in the skating rink, where a vory creditable performance was given. Miss Lewis is a big favorite in Gettysburg. to prohibit the performance. The burges
