Let Erin remember the days of old.

Ere her faithless soms betray'd her;
When Malachi wore the collar of gold
Which he won from her proud invader;
When her kings with standard of green unfurl'd
Led the Med diranch knights to danger;
Ere the emerald gem of the Western world
Was set in the crown of a stranger.

On Lough Neagh's bank as the fisherman strays, when the clear cold eve's declining. He sees the round towers of other days in the wave beneath him shining! Thus shell memory often, in dreams sublime, Catch a glimpee of the days that are ever, Thus, sighing, look through the waves of time For the long-faded glories they cover!

—Thomas Moore.

HOW HE KNOCKED OUT COX. Hibernian Joker Who Got the Hetter of the Congressional Wit. N. Megargee in Philadelphia News.

Hon, "Sunset" Cox, United States minis ter at the court of the Ottoman cuplre, is ter at the court of the Ottoman empire, is a smart man, but not a bit smarter than he credits himself with being. His only regret at leaving his congressional district in New York was caused by the fear, which came to pass, that he would be succeeded in Congress by that inimitable Hibernian joker, Tim Campbell. He did all in his power, in a quiet way, to beat the Honorable Timothy, but not being on the ground his afforts wars but not being on the ground his efforts were futile, and Mr. Campbell now daily amuses the House that Cox was wot to set at will in a roar. "Tim" is not as erudite as Samuel Sullivan, and that may be one of the causes of objection that the present minister had against him, but I heard not long ago that his main reason for disliking him was that against him, but I heard not long ago that his main reason for disliking him was that he had made him the victim of a practical joke several years ago. At the time Mr. Cox was a candidate for reelection in his district and one day he received an invitation to lecture before a Polish Hebrew society for the benefit of one of its funds. He accepted the invitation and on the night announced for the lecture he was called for by representatives of the society, who took him to the hall, which was at the top of a tenement house in a narrow street on the East Side. The room was very dimly lighted by half a dozen candles stuck here and there about the room. The audience numbered about a hundred and was composed wholly of men who wore heavy dark boards and kept their hats on theirheads.

On being presented to his audience Mr. Cox, in his usual folicitous manner, thanked the society for the compilment it had paid him in asking him to address it. He had always been, he said, a warm admirer of "the chosen people." When a student he learned to reverence the wonderinl genius of their great law-giver, Moses. As a literary man he regarded the "Songs of Solomon" as the most perfect composition of their kind in the world. Who could read David and not feel ennobled by his grand sentiments? Every reference of the elequent speaker was greeted by the heartiest of hand-clapping and stamping of feet. He feit that he had every vote in the hall, but to clinch them the took early opportunity to announce: "Genthemen: It has ever been a source of pride to me that my pious parents, from whom I legitimately inherit my love of your race, named me after your great prophet Samuel." He expected that this would produce a marked effect, but his most sanguine expectations were exceeded.

At a signal from a rabbinical-looking gen-were exceeded.

At a signal from a rabbinical-looking gentleman who arose in the middle of the room, every man present got up and in response to the query, in a decided Milesian broque, "Who was the greatest mea in Ameriky?" spelled out, after the manner of college students, "G-e-o-r-g-e W-a-s-h-i-n-g-t-o-n." Then all united in a song and dance "break," and then followed, in harmonious answer.

dents, "G-e-o-r-g-e W-a-s-h-i-n-g-t-o-n."
Then all united in a song and dance "break," and then followed, in harmonious answer: "He wuz furst in worr, furst in pace and furst in the harts of his countrymin." Instantly every hat was pulled off, and with them came the beards, and Mr. Cox found himself in the presence of the "Timothy J. Campbell Irish Democratic Club." To say that the distinguished orator was surprised would but faintly describe his condition. He was completely "knocked out." The "byes" roared and danced with delight.

At first Mr. Cox was disposed to be angry, but when Tim began introducing the members the ludicrousness of the thing became so apparent that he could not help joining in the glee. It was: "Misther Cox, allow me to present to you my particular frind, Misther Patrick Murphystein." "Let me call your attintion to Misther Dennis Kelleyheimer."

"Av coorse yeh know my old friend Barney Gradymeir," etc., etc. For ten minutes the introductions and handshaking continued: then Mr. Cox said: "Gentlement, there is no one who likes a joke better than I. The best joke I ever heard of is one that fills the stomach. I proposed that you all go with me and take something. All in favor of that motion heard of is one that fills the stomach. I proposed that you all go with me and take something. All in favor of that motion will signify that same by saying 'aye.' Those of a contrary opinion will have no vote." Under this ruling, of course, the motion was carried unanimously. Orator and audience adjourned to a neighboring saloon, where Nam speedily made himself "stout" by ordering the "best in the house and all you have of it. If you haven't got enough, send out and got it." Many a bumper was drank that night to the namesake of the prophet Samuel, and though at the ensuing election Mr. Cox got every vote in the club he has never lorgiven the man from whom it took its name for the joke he played upon him.

A Bulgarian Amazon, From the Pall Mail Gazetie. The Widdin correspondent of the St. Peters-burg Novosti sends to that newspaper the following account of a young Bulgarian girl who took an active part in the late war against Servia, distinguished herself at Slivnitza and at Pirot and received two crosses for bravery. Previous to the outbreak of hostilities she at Pirot and received two crosses for bravery. Previous to the outbreak of hostilities she joined a company of militia—such companies were then forming in various parts of Bulgaria—and accompanied it to the southern frontier in the hope of there meeting with the enemy. During some time she managed to conceal her sex, for her comrades took her to be a youth with an effeminate face, of which there were many such to be met with among the militia. Only the commander of her company knew her secret; she was obliged to disclose it to him when the company set out upon its march, and he appears to have loyally kept it to himself. In all exercises, parades and reviews she took part jointly with her male comrades. At last when Servia declared war against Bulgaris, the heroine took part in the forced march into Servia, fought in the battle of Silvnitzs, and joined in the attack upon Pirot. During the fight she did all she could to encourage her comrades and they, in return, unanimously voted to her the company's medal for bravery. When, in consequence of the war coming to an end, the militia was dispersed, she went to Sophia, and was there presented to Prince Alexander, who awarded to her a second decolation for bravery. She then turned to Widdin, her place of domicile before the war, where he acts as servant to an old lady. She says that should the Servians begin another war she will again fight against them, but in her woman's attire, for it is not worth while to change one's dress for such an enemy.

J. J. LANR, Messenger Baltimore and Ohio Express, writes: I have been troubled with Diarrhosa for the past five years, caused I believe, by drinking so many different kinds of water between New York and Ohio Kiver. I could get no relief until I tried "Dr. Petzold's German Bitters." I have been using 't for the last six months and have had not a return to my old trouble. No traveling man should be without this valuable medicine.

Not Symptoms, But The Disease.

It would seem to be a truth appreciable by all, and especially by professors of the healing art, that to remove the disease, not to alleviate its symptoms, should be the chief aim of medication. Yet in how many instances do we see this truth admitted in theory, ignored in practice. The reason that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is successful in so many cases, with which remodies previously tried were luadequate to cope, is attributable to the fact that it is a medicine which reaches and removes the causes of the various maladies to which it is adapted. In digestion, sever and ague, liver complaint, gont, rhoumatism, disorder of the bowels, urinary affections and other maladies are not pallisted merely, but rooted out by it. It goes to the fountain head. It is really, not nominally, a radical remody, and it endows the system with an amount of vigor which is best protection marily in the content of the content in the content of the content

J. P. Monne, cashier of the Girard House, Phiadelphia, Pa., writes, November 77, 1884; "For the past twelve years I have been a sufferer with what is known to the medical profession as tumbago. Having been recommended, about five years ago, to try Alleock's Forous Plasters, I did so, and was more than astonished at the result. I found almost instant relief on their application. I wen one constantly stow, and would not be without them. I consider them invaluable."

Curious to think that desks and chairs kill people, but they do. Taken in large quantities office furniture is fatal as yellow fever. We sit and write ourselves away. Sedentary habits produce constipation; that begets dyspepala; rheumatism and kidney trouble follow in their train and death ends the chapter. You whose lives passed over desks and in the confined air of office sought to keep Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Reumdy "always on hand for the stomach and brain.

In calling attention to our offerings in this line, the public are invited to a close and critical examination of the goods which we believe we can fairly claim are of a standard equal to any ever offered in the largest cities of our land, and we ask comparison of prices, knowing that ours are lower for the fine goods offered than the ruling of prices elsewhere.
