ANOTHER DISASTROUS FIRE.

ORORZINGER'S TANNERY CONSUMED WITH $14,000 OF PROPERTY.

A Florce Blaze Balleved to He the Work of at Incendiary-Graybill's Planing Mill Hurned. Insurance Covering Only Half of the Estimated Total Losses.

Thursday night the large tannery Gustavus Groszinger, on South Water street, between German and Conestogs streets, was almost entirely destroyed by fire. A son of Mr. Groezinger discovered the fire about nine o'clock, when flames were seen shooting from the large bark on Water street. An alarm was struck, but it was some time before the firemen arrived. When they did come, but two ongines Nos. 3 and 4 were put into service They played upon the Water street side of the building and the fire made its way back through Mr. Groezinger's property and into the planing mill occupied by Philip Grayotti. The fire burned very fiercely and after a delay of almost an hour it was decided to bring engine No. I to the fire. This was done, and the stream from this engine was turned upon the rear of the fire which was gotten under courted in a short time. The firemen under control in a short time. The firemen remained on the grounds for some time and a plug stream was at work on the burning bark this morning.

THE BURNED BUILDINGS. The buildings owned by Mr. Groezinger which were destroyed, were a large trame bark house on Water street, a two-story brick currying shop, size 20x40, and a three-story brick currying shop, size 30x40. Mr. Groez inger had about $11,000 worth of material in the buildings, consisting of hides leading the buildings, consisting of hides, leather, tan, bark, oil, tailow, &c. In the large, house on Water street there were 20 car loads of bark. A smaller bark house to the south of this one was saved as was a large amount of

Among the first people to arrive at the fire was Charles F. Miller, the soap manufacturer, who, upon seeing the progress the fire was making, went to work with a force of men to rescue some of the property. In an almost incredibly short space of time a very large quantity of leather in the smaller currying shop was cut down and saved. All the hides on the third floor of the large currying shop were burned, but those in the vats were saved. Several hundred dollars worth of raw hides were thrown into the creek in the rear of the building and made safe. It has been but a short time since Mr.

borhood of $14,000.

Mr. Groezinger has no doubt that the fire was started by an incendiary. He does not know that he has any enemies. One day this week a drunken tramp, who had but one arm, came to his house begging money. When Mr. Groezinger saw that he was drunk he refused to give him anything. The tramp went away muttering revenge, and it may be that he had something to do with the fire. ing, where the fire was first discovered, that

These were on fire several times, but was As soon as the fire broke out at the latter building, Superintendent Spencer with a force of men took their positions on the roof of the cotton mill. They threw water all over the top of the building from two lines of their own hose and it was kept damp, had there been any wind from the west the mill would probably have been burned.

During the fire there were tremendous crowds of people in the vicinity of the tannery. The lots on the hill towards St. Joseph's church were filled with people. The light from the fire shone brightly upon their faces and the scene from Water street was weird. The house tops in the vicinity were also covered with people.

Sparks from the burning building were carried all over the southern part of the city, and some even found as high up as the post-

Vine streets, and many believed that the fire which was then pretty well over, had again broken out. Such was not the case, but it was learned that the alarm had been struck by a man who when passing the box saw that the door was open and wanted to do something to distinguish himself.

The firemen did pretty good work after getting started last night, but they received valuable assistance from outsiders. Among these was John H. Baumgardner and A. J. Auxer, two members of councils, who worked hard. It was evident to all who were at the fire that the department is in a bad condition, however, as it lacks men and machines, as the INTELLIGENCER stated several weeks ago.

Sullivan jumped up and struck Johns a terrible blow in the face, cutting an ugly gash and knocking him over. The train dispatcher offered to hold the train if Johns would send for the chief of poince to arrest Sullivan. Johns was afraid to incur Sullivan's wrath and refused to take such action. Barkeepers in the principal saloons there provided themselves with revolvers to give Sullivan a warm reception if he attempted to buily them. A strong posse of police attended his exhibition to arrest him if he attempted to act disorderly and the newspapers applied such epithes as "international nuisance" in referring to him. There was quite an excitement in the vicinity of the almhouse last night at eight o'clock, caused by the vigorous ringing of the bell in the cupols of the almshou Many persons supposed there was a fire and hastened to the scene. There was no fire and the bell was rung in compliance with a new rule adopted by the poor directors, requiring all immates of the almshouse to retire to their quarters at 8 o'clock. Those who are outside when the bell ceases to ring are locked out for the night.

Henry Bauman, residing in Gordonville Lancaster county, Pa., was arrested yesterday and given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Bell, in Philadelphia on the charge of making a false claim for a pension against the government, and a false and fraudulent affidavit in "support of 'the claim, whereby he received $4,-554. United States Assistant District Attorney H. W. Brown stated that the claim was that Bauman originally made application for pension on account of an alleged guna pension on account of an alleged gun-shot wound of the right arm; that the monthly pension was increased from time to time; that on March 25th, 1885, he applied for a further increase and obtained it, and had received the amount stated; that the government would show that he never was wounded in the arm at all, but the injury was received while he was at work on the Reading & Columbia railroad. THE LECTURE OF DR. STARR IN THE CHAPEL LAST EVENING.

The Earth as the Abode of Lite"-The Sente Orations in the Chapel To Day-Eloquent Speeches on Subjects of Popular Inerest-Fifteen Addresses To Day.

AT THE COLLEGE.

Quite a large audience greeted Dr. Stahl last evening in the college chapel. He delivered a fine lecture on the subject of "The Earth as the Abode of Life." The lecturer introduced his subject by giving a vivid description of the different kinds of life surrounding the careful ob erver of nature on all sides. He pictured a man seated in a grove where he will soon see the squirrels overhead, the different birds having their places of abode in the trees, the insects flitting to and tro in the air, the beautiful and fragrant wild flowers under his ket, and the moles with many other animals having their homes in the ground. No wonder that Mephistopheles said he could not oppose all this life energy. But, said the speaker, it was not always

hus. Then he took up the geological his-lory of the earth, and proved that there was a time when life would have been impossible upon the earth; then tracing minutely the different stages of development and preparation to make the earth a fit abode of ilfe.

He then took up some of the different theories as advanced by scientists to account for the introductions of life into the world. Huxley, for instance, wants to account for this fact by means of the different physical forces coming in contact with one another, while Mr. Thomson holds that it was intro-duced to our world from some other system where it had been flourishing before. other theory was that after our world had the lecturer then showed that life is almost continually changing. This he did by means of geology, where the different types of life may be traced very distinctly. This same process is still going on, always developom a lower to a higher. The distribu tion of these various life energies the speaker compared to the scattering of languages at Rabel. The lecture throughout was good and

A Reference to Mr. Blaine

A little incident occurred in the closing speech made by Senator Edmunds in the enate on Friday night last which was quite significant, but which, in the hurry and bustle of the occasion, was not observed except by the senators in his immediate vicinity.
Mr. Kenna, of West Virginia, in his remarks, read extracts from Mr. Blaine's book convicting Mr. Edmunds of gross inconsistency on the subject of the rights of the executive as to removals and appointments. Mr. Ed-munds, in the course of his remarks, replied seriatim to criticisms passed upon his course by various senators, and when he came to Mr. Kenna he—with that air of disdain, which he by various senators, and when he came to Mr. Kenna he—with that air of disdain which he can assume so well, curling his lip and waving his hands as if contemptuously brushing it out of his way—premised this section of his speech with the words, "I shall not allude to bookmakers," and then went on confining himself entirely to answering what Mr. Kenna had said on his own rewhat Mr. Kenna had said on his own re-sponsibility. The few senators who caught the words and saw his actions were very forcibly impressed with the belief that the distinguished senator from Vermont has to-day no better opinion of Mr. Blaine than he had in 1884, when he refused three conse-cutive appeals of the national republican com-mittee to make a speech to help save New Verk for that continuous

AN EXCITING SCENE. Conflict Between Strikers and Law Officers at

rafuse to settle."

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 2-Citizen were astir early yesterday morning and all felt that a momentous day had dawned. Squads of strikers went up the road early to stop any train which might get away. By 9 o'clock not less than three thousand people were gathered in the yards. In the crowd were 50 armed officers. The citizen's posse, with few exceptions, were also armed, and many of the crowd were desperate and ready for bloodshed. At 10 o'clock a train was made up, and as a Missouri Pacific locomotive left the Texas & Pacific round-house, the strikers yelled "here she comes." The engine with dozen or more officers upon it, pulled up to the track and coupled to the train. The strikers surged about the train, while the engine was surrounded by officers with pistols flashing in the sunlight. "Kill the engine," yelled hundreds of strikers. "Back; I'll kill the man who tries to touch this engine!" cried the chief deputy. The officers stationed along the train lett their posts, threw the strikers right and left and grouped themselves around the engine. The strikers, seeing their opportunity, rushed between the cars, pulled the pins, and even took the nuts off the drawheads. The sheriff ordered the engineer to pull ahead, but not a car followed the engine and the strikers shouted with derision. Sheriff Maddox for the first time drew his revolver and ordered the trainmen to couple the cars. D. P. Blakeley threw his hand to his hip pocket and yelled: "Walter Maddox, don't use that pistol," and the hands of twenty Knights around Blakeley flew to their pistol pockets. Four deputies jumped upon Blakeley, overpowered and placed him under arrest. The railroad authorities finally abandoned the attempt to run the train out. The mayor afterward addressed the strikers, and told them it was not Jay Gould who was suffering by these actions, but the people, and he urged them to respect the law. "Why don't the people settle this trouble?" answered a striker. "The people can't move in a day, man,

"Rats"; no Peter Smith for mayor again,' etc., were the responses on every side. The excitement was great all day, and many such scenes as these were witnessed. The sheriff has summoned an additional armed posse, and declares that he will keep order to-day at all hazards.
