A Proper Inquiry.
The House has passed a resolution, med-by Mr. Morrison, raising a comof seven "to investigate the causes ent of the disturbed condition now ng in the relations between railroad ons engaged in inter-state comerce and their employes." Mr. Reagan, Texas, thought that it was no more of he business of Congress to intervene in the ests between railroads and their employes than between any other classes of the people. He seemed to think that the ter was one for state adjudication, and that a question of state rights was involved it. Mr. Randall protested that while he was strongly in favor of onfining national legislation within stitutional limits, he was satisfied that it was the government's interest to see that peace and order instead of discontent revailed in the land. Mr. Curtin deed it was the duty of Congress to inquire into the unrest of the land, and to earken to the appeal of the humblest citzen praying protection against wrongs inflicted upon him. Reed, of Maine, Springer of Illinois, and Hiscock, of New York, greed that there could be no reasonable stion as to the duty of Congress to lisen to such grievances as those now brought to its notice; Mr. Reed inquiring how many representatives of the people would turn away from their petitions and refuse to listen to their wrongs. Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, apparently was the only member to side with Mr. Reagan : and they did not appear in the vote, the resolution being agreed to without

The sentiment of the House in this matter is that of the country. If any doctrine of state rights interferes with an appeal for redress of wrongs inflicted by railroad corporations running across the state lines, then that doctrine is not one for the times. It might have been well enough in the stage coach days to remit the drivers and hostlers to state jurisdiction, but it will not do in these days when railroads stretch across all the tate lines of the continent and defy the local control of each state. The hand that controls them must evidently be one whose urisdiction is co-extensive with their

Mr. Morrison, in offering this resolution. said that the arbitration act just passed by the House was "inadequate in its provisions;" which is very manifest upon its face. Why it was passed we cannot imagine, as it does not meet the evil which it presumably was designed to reach. It provides nothing more than a method of arbitration of grievances, both parties being willing; which was a privilege both parties had before its passage. It puts the arbitration under the auspices of the government, through officials designated, but provides no efficient means of securing the arbitration results. The measure is like, in its essence, to the one placed by the last legislature in the statute book of Pennsylvania, at Senator Wallace's instance, and which has amounted, as we declared it would, to nothing at all.

The Congress of the United States must take cognizance of the relations of the railroads to the people; which no state alone is able to handle, because of the obvious fact that the railroads, running through the different states and being largely competitors with each other for business, must be put under the law, that their competition may be upon equal terms under the law. Arbitration, as a means to accommodate employe to employer, is undoubtedly a thing to be established; but, it must be an arbitration enforced; else there will be no arbitration, when one party finds advantage in refusing the accommodation which the public good demands. Enforced arbitration is nothing but enforced law; and we therefore return to the proposition that laws must be passed by the national authority, that is alone capable of enforcing them. which require railroads and railroad employes, common carriers and the people, to ect the right of each other as the laws define them to be.

He May Be Right. The Williamsport Sun and Banner publishes an interview with General Beaver in which the latter says : "If I am nominated I will be opposed by the corporations and liquor interests. I do not think that this will amount to much, although it is hard to say at this time what votes they will or will not control. Politics in Pennsylvania are in a muddle. The labor vote will be a great lever in this campaign."

In his Bellefonte speech last year, Gen. Seaver, after two years of silence, repudiated the attitude of his own party on the uestion of enforcing the state constitution on the railroads as well as other people His speech was unequivocal and entirely ble to him as a man and a citizen. at he was never guilty of such a thing sione and has never repeated it since. ed the corporations, it was supposed it ht be forgiven, and when he was slated overnor by the boss, it was fully de-

Judge Jackson.

Senator Jackson, of Tennessee, has been eminated and confirmed as circuit judge of the United States for the district comprising Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky; and his choice is received with great favor, as he is recognized as an able man and a lawyer of a judicial cast of mind. He has been on the supreme bench of Tennessee. He was one of the small minority of the Democratic party of Tennessee, who ineffectively contended with their party against its repudiation of the state debt ; which is a sufficient indication of Judge Jackson's honesty and judgment, and faithful adherence to his convictions. He will have the great telephone suit to decide, which has been brought in the Ohio district; and may be relied upon to determine it intelligently and without preju-

Lanon is proving faithful to its own volunary contributions to the amount of about 6,000 a week are being received at St. Louis from all over the country to aid in the main enance of the railroad strikers.

BUTLER county is reported to favor Beaver, Greer and Grow. It is not certain that Greer is slated, and it is certain that Grow is not. Mr. Quay will be the senator him-self, if the senator is to be Republican.

Hon A. WILSON NORBIS appears to be slated for auditor general quite as securely as Beaver is for governor. He is always one of the two or three select spirits closeted with Quay in Philadelphia, and is his chosen companion in the Atlantic City trips.

New Jersey stands firm. The Democrats have carried Trenton with a clean sweep, as it were.

DEMOCRATIC administration does not seem to have utterly ruined the country. The increase in the revenue of the postoflice department, excluding postage on second class mat-ter, for the nine months ended March 31, as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, at thirty of the larger post-offices, amounts to $924,445, of which $80,936 was at Philadelphia and $15,941 at Pittsburg. at both of which places the Republican post masters had to walk the plank.

THE supreme court of the state keeps up the line of rulings upon which the Lancaster county salary bill was declared unconstitu-tional. In a case decided yesterday that judicatory decided that the act of the legislature of June, 1878, which regulates the fees to be received by sheriffs, coroners, registers of wills and recorders of deeds in counties containing more than 150,000 or less than 10,000 inhabitants is unconstitutional because of its local or special character.

Dr. Andrew Neglinger, who died in Philadelphia on Monday, was a most estimable man. His life was devoted to good works. He gave much time to charity and to educational matters. He was a Democrat of Democrats and in 1873 served as chairman of the state committee. In local affairs he stood for good government and honest methods.

H. W. TRACEY, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Bradford county, died at his resi-dence in Standing Stone on Sunday, aged seventy-nine years. He was two years a member of the state legislature, a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress and later first deputy collector of the port of Philadelphia. Thomas MacReynolds, who has died at Chalfont, Bucks county, was one of the lead-ing Democratic members of the legislature 1881 St. He was also prominent as a candidate for the nomination of state treasures when Mr. Powell was named. He was fit years of age, of marked intelligence and much respected.

SCHOOL BOYS ON A STRIKE

The Young Idea Begins to Shoot in the Same Direction as the Knights.

About half the boys in the Eleventh ward school at Troy, New York, struck on Monday afternoon for shorter hours, "and refused to continue their studies." They demanded only one session a day, and that to be from eight o'clock until noon, "The boys held eight o'clock until noon. "The boys heid an open-air mass meeting, and then procur-ing laths and sticks swarmed through the neighboring streets threatening violence to pupils who did not join them. The reserve from one police station was sent to the scene to give whatever protection was necessary. The strikers tried to induce the boys in another school to follow their example.

About one hundred boys, pupils of a pub-lic school in Greenpoint, Long Island, made a demand on the principal "that the usual morning and afternoon recesses be extended morning and afternoon recesses be extended from 15 to 30 minutes, and that on Friday the afternoon session close half an hour earlier than at present." Their demands not being granted, the boys refused to return to the school after the morning recess and picketed the entrance to pre-the school after the morning recess and picketed the entrance to prevent others from entering. The trouble assumed such threatening proportions that the principal sent for the police, and a sergeant and several officers were sent to the school. Finally the mother of the chief ringlesder strived and succeeded in forcing her son into the school. After he had gone in the other boys quietly marched in and no further trouble was experienced.

JOHN WELSH, CITIZEN.

GANIZED THE CENTENNIAL'S FINANCES

John Welsh, ex-minister to England, who died on April 10th, after a week's illness, at Philadelphia, is best known to the country at large through his connection with the Centennial board of finance. He was born in Philadelphia in 1805 and was one of the three sons of the late John Welsh, sr., who came from New Castle, Delaware, in 1786, The elder Welsh brought up his sons for a mercantile career and gradually relin-quished his business to them. John Welsh became a member of the firm upon the death of his father, in 1854. The house is the largest one in the West India trade in Philadelphia They import solely on commission. For some time Mr. Welsh was a member of councils and was a member of the sinking fund for twenty years. He was also president of the Philadelphia board of trade. In June, 1864, Philadelphia board of trade, 18 June, 1804, he was chalman of the executive committee of the sanitary fair, from which $1,000,000 were realized for sanitary purposes. In 1872 Congress chartered the Centennial board of finance, a body corporate, organized to raise the necessary funds for the Centennial Exposition. John Welsh was unanimously elected presisary funds for the Centennial Exposition. John Welsh was unanimously elected president of the board, and no one man is entitled dent of the board, and no one man is entitled to a greater share of the credit for the success of the World's fair of 1876. In 1877 a subscription of $50,000 was tendered him in recognition of his services, and at his request the "John Weish Professorship" of the University of Pennsylvania, was endowed therewith. In October, 1877, President Hayes appointed Mr. Welsh to the position as minister to England, which he filled with great credit in this recognition recognition. until his voluntary retirement in 1879. His retirement was caused by the death of his brother William, so universally known as a philanthropist, and of his two sisters. Upon his return he was given a rousing reception in Philadelphia, and one hundred of New York's most prominent business men ten-dered him a complimentary dinner at Del-monico's which he was forced to decline. In 1881 an effort was made to place him in the United States Senate, but the politicians would not allow this. Since then he has taken little interest in public affairs. In 1878 the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the degree of I.L. D., and the same honor was bestowed by the Washington and Lee University in 1880, Mr. Welsh was twice married, and was the father of eight

DRAGGED FROM MID-RIVER.

Officer Philip Bliel's Courageous Rescue of a Would-Be Suicide, An elderly and shabbily clad man loitered for nearly an hour Sunday morning about the dock at the foot of Bogart street, New York. The stranger was contemplating suicide. Nerving himself at last to the desperate act he deliberately walked over to the stringpiece and leaped into the North river. The splash attracted attention and the ery "Man overboard!" was raised along the river front. Patrolmen Philip C. Bliel, of the Third precinct, who has on many occasions distinguished himself as a life saver, heard the alarm and started to the rescue. From the dock he saw that there was not a moment to spare for the form of the man, bobbing up and down, was being carried out rapidly by the tide. In full uniform, with his hat still on his head and his club dangling in the socket of his belt, Bilel plunged into the chilly water. The stranger was at least fitty yards away, but the policeman swam like a duck and in a very short time he laid his hand on the would-be suicide.

Then occurred a scene that horrified the scople that had gathered along the string-dece to witness the rescue. The man wanted o die, and when the policeman caught hold of him he struggled and fought to free him-self. Although loaded down with his heavy overcoat and tils uniform trappings, and chilled by his bath. Blief was thwarted and he battled back. It was an exiting situation and the policeman realized

Freeing himself, Bliel swam away for a few feet and allowed his adversary to sink below the surface. Just as he was coming up again the policeman struck the man a blow on the side of the head with his fist had the effect of stunning him. Then he clutched the stranger by the clothing and with one hand towed him back to the dock. As Bilel, panting for breath dragged the man alongside one of the slimy spiles he was cheered lustily by those gathered above.

Here occurred another seene similar in many respects to the one that had taken place a few minutes before away out in the water. The man had by that time recovered from the blow and renewed his structure to

He tought desperately and gasped, "Let me go or I'll drown you, too. I want to die."

Biel backed away a second time and there was another hard blow dealt. That settled the contention, and when the captain of an ice barge moored near by lowered a long boat hook it was stuck in the clothing of the would-be suicide and he was hoisted upon the dock.

A second later the shivering and heroic member of the "finest" was landed on dry land. An ambulance was sent for, but be-fore it arrived the rescued man and his rescuer were treated with a heating drink.

The policeman remained alongside the man until the ambulance arrived and took the latter, who was suffering from the immersion, to St. Vincent's hospital. Then

Bliel, with the salt water dripping from his uniform, hurried to the police central office to report the facts of the case to Sergeant Taylor and also to obtain permission to go home and change his clothing. While awaiting the arrival of the ambu-lance Bilel questioned the man, but he doggedly refused to tell his name or where he lived. He said, however, that he was forty years of age and was married. He is of low stature and of sandy complexion, and wears a full beard. His clothing, which was seedy looking, was dark. He is an intelligent man, and admitted that he had seen better days.
