THE BALVATION ARMY. Hill Without a Barracks, But Holding Nightly

Services in Centre Square, The Salvation Army is still without bar racks, although the captain has been trying very hard to procure a hall. He had an idea of renting Temperance hall on Orange street, out had not been successful as yet. Last night the captain and wife were absent from the city and the meeting, which was held at the soldiers' monument, seemed to be in charge of their son, who is a little boy with an awful pair of lungs. He sang all the songs he knew and at times received valuable assistance from the times received valuable assistance from the converts. Several of the latter told their experiences, most of which were very short. All said they were on the straight road to heaven and they advised everybody to come into the fold. The crowd which listened to the service was composed largely of boys and many of them were the roughest in the town. While the members of the army were speakwhile the members of the army were speaking the boys kept making remarks and many joined in the singing. After the services the salvationists walked across the Square and down West King street; they were followed by the mob who kept yelling and hooting.
The crowd was a nuisance.

The city of Liverpool is remarkable for the literary nomenclature of her streets. They have been named not only after authors but after various characters in their books. There is Shakespeare street, and there are Falstaff street and Viola street Rosalind street and Olivia street; Hotspur street and Macbeth street. Then there are Wordsworth street and Longfellow street Tennyson street, Enid street and Elaine street, and a street named after the Lady of Shaliott. Dickens street heads a list of such amilia: names as Pickwick street, Winkle street, Tupman street, Dombey street, Dor-rit street, Nickleby street, Copperfield street, Micawber street, Pecksniff street, and last, though not least, a street named after Doing a Good Work.

From the West Chester Republican. The teachers of the public schools of Lan caster are doing a good work in introducing lecturers into the regular school work. The plan is confined to the high school and is of course in its infancy, but it does seem reasonable that pupils should receive a certain amount of instruction in this manner, even while in the public schools, as they are receiving the foundation for future work and the majority of teaching in colleges and universities is by lectures. Many students complain of a lack of this training.

Athough a great deal of water has been pumped from the cellars on East King street hey are by no means dry, as the water con tinues to run in. It is almost certain that the stream comes from an old well, which is situated on the line between the property of Hoar & McNabb and the Lancaster County bank. It is likely that the recent heavy rains have caused the well to overflow.

His Stomach is an Arsenal. James Houston, a well-known resident of Morgantown, W. Va., is dying from a most peculiar cause. He has forty-two rifle bulets in his stomach. These builets Houston Amusements. "Young Mrs. Winthrop."-To morrow evening "Young Mrs. Winthrop," by an excellent company from the Madison Square theatre, will be played in the opera house. The piece is very popular here, having been played several times.

Amusement goers have great confidence in the management of the Madison Square theatre, as all their attractions are first-class.

At Cheap Prices - On Thursday evening the People's Theatre company, of New York, will open a three night's engagement in this city. They will present three very popular pieces at prices just as popular, and will no doubt draw
