THE NEW ENGLANDER SMILED SUPERBLY. "You talk about a speaker moving the masses. With me the masses move the speaker..."

My dear sir, said my New England acquaintance, "I have no constitution, I have such a judicial mind, as it were, that I cannot do the judging, simply upon the merits as a logical argument..."

"All right," I responded rather shortly, "I trust you will not be bored to-night."

We walked on for some time in silence. The New-England was silent. They are less fond of and gratified, they do not deal in facts and logic. Now, sir, no speaker living can move me."

"What is the matter?" he asked. "The crowd shouting for Tombs," I answered. "They are impatient."

"There is nothing to be done from us again," he said. "In my part of the country we are not demonstrative. We never lose our heads. It is a rare thing to hear boisterous applause at our public meetings. As for me, I never applaud."

I was disgusted with this icy egotist, and returned into silence. After a few minutes our house was surrounded by a crowd. Fortunately there was plenty of room, as the speaker held out of doors. I gave up the idea of the enjoyment of the occasion, and did not even take the trouble to look at my companion, who sat a seat or two back of me.

Tombs was at his best. His words were high and with each flight of eloquence, he looked the very genius of revolution. The speech was literally thunder and flame. The wild cheering of the audience did not annoy me. It was music to my ears, but toward the close of the speech I came to the conclusion that the man who had just behind me. Such delicious yells I never heard in my life. Finally I shifted my position and managed to get back at my lady admirer. Could I believe my eyes? Standing on a wooden bench, pounding with his cane and shouting at the top of his voice, stood my New England friend.

I stared at him in paralyzed amazement. This was the man who could be moved, could care for no one else, who never applauded? Knowing what I did of the spectacle was ludicrous. In his excitement the poor fellow had broken his cane. His glossy locks were the worse for the part. It had taken in the applause. The man's face was red with excitement and his eyes fairly danced. Just then the yelling broke up and I drifted off in the crowd.

But I saw my man again that night. From the New York Herald I had been told, and in the very front rank rushed a bareheaded man, waving his pitch pine torch and roaring at every step. "Hail for Bob Tombs!" he cried, and then, in an administrative gentleman from New England. The next morning I called at the hotel where the stranger stopped and inquired after him.

"A sleep," said the clerk. "You see he got quite full of himself. He spoke, and then looked around with that thoughtful expression until he stooped all his hair off and got all messed up with hot pitch until he was a sight to see. Now he is settling up for the boys, and I reckon he'll want white seltzer when he wakes."

I felt and saw the man again. But I always wanted to get a chance to ask him what he thought of Tombs's speech.

As to "Contraband Dresser." From the Lutheran. No, fair worshipper, we have no objection to seeing your wardrobe at large, to admire your costly trappings—but, please do not lend the proprietors of the sanctuary by making morbid the occasion for display. Your extravagant and striking presence will throw the weak Christian out of the track, and break the saint's prayer right in two. It is shocking to see you wear the most dazzling jewels in quiet in the blue plush coats—they are glad for a Sunday. Take a fine Brown Boys' Cuckoo new suit, and the most unobtrusive evening. Leave the clustered ring and the ruby at home—the poor worshipper at your side may take notice, and divide his thoughts. We come to the House of God to worship and not to be admired. "God be merciful to me the sinner!"

H. Z. RHOADS, JEWELER. JEWELRY AND ART! In calling attention to our offerings in this line, the public are invited to a close and critical examination of the goods which we believe we can fairly claim are of a standard equal to any ever offered in the largest cities of our land, and we ask comparison of prices, knowing that ours are lower for the fine goods offered than the ruling of prices elsewhere.
