While in some of the states adjoining the oyster is prescribed by law during the months that lack an "r" in their orthography, as an article of merchaudise and consumpt Delaware is more fortunate and traffic in the delicious bivalves is continued the year around. A popular impression to the effect that the cyster is unfit for food during May, June, July and August has been entirely disproved, and in this state the trade is quite considerable one during the summe months. A heavy dealer this morning said, months. A heavy dealer this morning said, the law in neighboring states prohibiting the sale of oysters is becoming a dead letter, and the disregard of its provisions is more general every year. During the summer season certain trands of oysters, especially the safes, are just as good as at any other time and the demand is of such importance that dealers are catering to it. Just at this season and in the fall oysters are better than during the cold winter months. When the freeze up comes the oysters are affected by freeze up comes the cysters are affected by the cold weather and greatly weakened. After the thaw out they recover their strength fatten up, and the consumer really gets more toothsome delicacies during April and May tation up, and the consumer reality gets more toothsome delicacies during April and May and part of June than during the mid-winter when they are erroneously supposed to be at their best. The quantities taken at this time are much less than during the winter as only sishing with tongs is permitted in many of the beds after April 15. This kind of fishing is held to be beneficial to the cyster beds imasmuch as it breaks asunder the hard surface, scatters the cysters and giving them better opportunity for proper development. The planting season is now under way and immense quantities of the young bivalves are being taken from the Chesapeake and laid out in the Delaware bay. The product of the latter are much the finer of the two and the transplanting imparts to the small fry the desirable qualities of a native spawn. In this city during the height of the season about 30,000 bushels of cysters are used every week, and the consumption increases largely yearly.

The Common Sense of It, From the New York Times.

"The common sense of the problem is that no labor should be paid by the day. should be paid by the hour. So says the Sun. The principle thus set forth is entirely wrong and victous, and is at the bottom of a large part of the labor troubles. Labor should be paid, whenever possible, neither by the day nor by the hour, but, according to its results. To pay a workman according to the time spent upon the work is the worst for him. It puts a premium on tardiness and incom-petence and brings the most skilled and ex-pert mechanic down to the level of the level pert mechanic down to the level of the least it. The true theory is to pay the workman pert mechanic down to the level of the least fit. The true theory is to pay the workman for what he does, not for the time occupied in doing it. In this way skill will be stimulated and industry rewarded. This method, too, will have the effect of removing from the trades unions a stigma that has long clung to them—that, by putting all the laborers in any given trade on the same scale of wages, they offer no inducement to special excellence.
