Chapel to He Yorn Down and the mi Uses—Death of the Last of the No Hotes Around the Town of ore Then Passing Interest.

COLUMNIA, May IS.—Some time ago the members of the United Brethren church decided to creet a new house of worship on hear let of ground on Fifth street, between Located Walnut, as their present church have inadequate for their increasing harens. The membership of the frame were divided on the plans of the process being built, side by side, for church ad Sunday school purposes while the other part of the congregation wanted a two story forces.

It has at last been decided, by the help of an arbitration committee composed of ministers for other towns, that the new church will be of the two-story plan. The members have purchased from Col. Samuel Shock, the Salome chapel, used at one time for the Mission Sunday school of the Presbyterian church, and will tear the same down and use the materials in the building of their church. Work will be commenced at once on the erection of the new place of worship.

A LONG DRIFE IN A GIG. A Story or President Buchanan and a Kindly Young Irishman. From the Chambersburg Valley Spirit.

Dr. Charles N. Hickok, of Bedford, in a lecture recently delivered there, introduced the following, told him as he said by ex-President Buchanan. The two persons President Buchanan. The two persons spoken of, the ex-president and the ex-archishop, both lived in this county in the earlier portions of their lives. Buchanan told the story in this manner: "On my third visit to Bedford Springs, in 1819, for I was here first in 1816, I drove from Lancaster in a gig—I was a young man then. The turnpike was then in the case. drove from Lancaster in a gig—I was a young man then. The turnpike was then in pr gress of making, but in some places was not yet passable. I stopped over night at the old Reamer stand, at the foot of Sideling Hill, and as I was starting up the mountain, I asked whether I had better keep the old road up the hill or try the new one. I was told that I might possibly get up the turnpike, as it was nearly finished, so I concluded to try it. When I had got up two or three miles or more perhaps, I found a tew hundred yards of the way that was impassable to wheels. There were stumps and rocks not yet removed. I taked awhile with the laborers, of whom there were several, and was about turning my horse's head, to retrace my way, to where I could take the old road sgain when a young Irishman, whose apparent intelligence I had observed, kindly proposed that if I could walk over the rough intervening distance, to where the road was again passable, they could manage to get my horse and gig over. I gratefully accepted the offer. Accordingly they unharted my horse and while one of them carefully led him, four others carried my gig, and, when again on the finished road, they put me on my way grateful and rejoicing, for they had saved me not less than six milestravel. Now, who do you suppose that bright, kindly young Irishman was? It was he who is Archbishop Hughes, of New York, one of nature's noblemen." e turnpike was then in progre

THE JUMBO EGG.

Hens That Astonished Themselves by the Magnitude of Their Productions. Mr. P. MR. PILDEN'S VIEWS OF MATRIMONY

As Expressed to His Neighbors, Clara Merris and Rose Coghlan. Samuel J. Tilden's next neighbor at Greystone, up the Hudson, is Clifton Edgerly, by profession a lawyer, and almost as close by lives Frederick Harriott, a retired flour mer-chant. The wife of Edgerly is Rose Coghlan, the actress, and Mrs. Harriott is the Clara Morris of the stage. In his days of health Mr. Tilden was a frequenter of the theatres, and he was fond, in a perfectly decorous way, of he was fond, in a perfectly decorous way, of the society of those players who were edu-cated and bright personally. Clara Morris has been familiarly welcome in his house-hold during the years of her residence in the neighborhood. She is an invalid, like him, and their ailments are similarly of the nervous system. When she lately played in the city and Brooklyn she, with much difficulty, got through the two weeks' ordeal and returned home completely pros-trated.

Since then the Harriotts and Tilden have driven out together frequently. "Mr. Tilden and I," says the actress, "have jointly made just about the most thorough study of nerves and their disorders that can be immade just about the most informing study of nerves and their disorders that can be imagined. We have learned everything concerning our diseases except how to cure them." Being asked if Tilden discussed politics with her, she reptied: "Oh, no—unless President Cleveland's marriage is political. He has said to me that he believed a bachelor president in the White House was an incomplete president, and he was glad to know that Cleveland was going to wed. Oh, he was quite serious in that view of the matter, and wouldn't deny it when I declared that he would have taken a wife if he himself had gone to Washington. 'Did you make a choice of a bride, provisionally?' I asked him, and he answered, 'that's a profound and awtul state secret.'

Rose Coghian-Edgerly is a more recent dweller near Greystone, but she and her husband are on neighborly terms with the dweller near Greystone, but she and her husband are on neighborly terms with the retired statesman. She is a witty Irish woman, entertaining in conversation, and Tilden has spent several afternoons in calling on the Edgerlys. "Did he talk of President Cleveland's forthcoming marriage?" she was asked. "It was spoken of two or three times," was the reply, "and he expressed himself emphatically as pleased by the report. We rallied him on being a bachelor himself, and he declared that even the best ministers did not always practice the soundest of the doctrines that they preached. soundest of the doctrines that they preached. soundest of the doctrines that they preached, Of course, the conversation was mainly jocose, and yet he seemed in earnest in asserting his idea that the president ought to have a wite for mistress of the White House. When I told him that I was personally acquainted with Agnes Folsom, the professional singer, who is a cousin of Cieveland's intended bride, and had talked about the girl, he made me repeat all I heard."

THE KLUGH FORGERIES.

His Sister Testilles That Her Name Was Forged to a $1,200 Note.

James H. Marshall, Israel Carpenter and C. A. Gast, the arbitrators chosen to determine the suit of William F. Miller against George P. Klugh and Cath-arine B. Gabel, met this morning at 10 o'clock. The suit is to recover $1,200, the face value of a promissory note given to Miller, by Klugh, for money he borrowed from him. The testimony taken showed that Kiugh absconded from the city some weeks ago, and after his flight it was as-certained that he had forged a large number certained that he had forged a large number of notes and raised money on them. Mrs. Gabel, whose name appears on the above note, is a sister of Klugh's.

Mr. Miller was represented by B. C. Kready and Mrs. Gabel by J. W. B. Bausman and A. H. Hershey. The note was submitted to Mrs. Gabel and she positively swore that she did not sign the note held by Mr. Miller. On that note her name is smalled. Mr. Mitter. On that note her name is spelled Gable and she said she never spelled her name that way. A large number of notes and other papers were submitted to her and she picked out those she signed. In the lot were his other notes to which she said he Gabel, thus deciding that the note was forged. The case will be appealed to court.

Sent to the Harrisburg Asylum Frederick Miller, one of the men con-victed at the August sessions, 1884, of being "a tramp" and who was sentenced by Judge Patterson to undergo an imprisonment of Patterson to undergo an imprisonment of three years, has become violently insane. On the petition of Keeper Burkholder, the court appointed A. H. Hershey, Dr. F. G. Albright and John B. Müler as the commission to inquire into his sanity. They met last evening, heard testimony and signed their report, setting forth that he is insane and has been for a year. He imagines that he owns a great portion of Lancaster county. Miller was one of a number who were arrested in the woods near Lititz, and whose long sentence for so trifling au offense has been often discussed. Sherill Tomlinson took him to the insane asylum at Harrisburg to-day.
