

THE SOLDIERS' ORPHANS.

A CREDITABLE EXAMINATION THAT WAS HELD AT MOUNT JOY.

The pupils do as well as in other schools of similar grade. Dr. Higbee points to their easy checks as a testimony of the charge that they are starvelings.

The annual examination of the Mount Joy soldiers' orphan school was held Monday morning and afternoon. The exercises took place in the chapel of the institution which was greatly crowded and unaccountably warm.

The pupils numbered 211, of whom 50 were girls. All were dressed well, looked well, and went through their examination in the different branches of study very creditably.

The exercises opened at 9:30 a. m. with a prayer by the school which was well rendered.

Rev. Dr. E. K. Higbee, state superintendent, followed with prayer, which the several teachers, all of whom were present, including Helen Booth and Minnie McConnell, examined their classes in the various branches.

The exercises were continued by vocal music by the girls with organ accompaniment, the girls singing "Let us sing to the Lord, for he is high above all earth."

At noon an afternoon took place and the little folks, together with school visitors, sat down to a good dinner.

After dinner the boys had a drill and dress parade which was very creditable.

At 2 o'clock p. m. the exercises were resumed in the chapel, which was again crowded with visitors.

LITTLE '85 LEAF UNPACKED.

THE SALES OF TOBACCO LESS THAN 250 CARS, ALL TOLD.

Philadelphia Goods in the Philadelphia and New York Markets—Enforcement of the Customs Law Shows that Checks the Importation of the Sumatra Leaf.

The local tobacco market is quiet; the packing of the '85 crop is about ended; the warehouses closed. The foreign packers are lying on their oars contemplating their prospective profits, and the farmers are preparing for the next crop.

The only sales of old tobacco reported are 200 cases of Havana and 100 cases of St. Louis.

The business of the week was unusually diversified, and a little better feeling was perceptible. A stimulus seemed to have been imparted to the trade by the large sales, as reported in last week's edition, of old tobacco, the price of which was unexpectedly low.

The buyers of the week were: J. M. Wilson, who sold the greatest portion of it at an advance, in parcels of from 25 to 100 cases.

THE CZAR NO COWARD.

HOW HE MET THE ATTACK OF A FIERCE Nihilist.

Alexander Ordovik, the Man to be Laid in His Presence, Whom He Flees Twice in the Emperor and in Both Times Quickly and Easily Thrown.

LONDON, May 18.—An occurrence is reported from Livonia which illustrates the coolness and physical courage of the czar. One morning recently he started out to hunt, and was leaving the palace by a rear staircase which he seldom used.

At the moment of the czar's appearance a number of soldiers of the guard were rushing up the stairs after a savage brutal looking monk, whose arms and hands were bound by straps of leather.

The prisoner was struggling furiously to escape, and his struggles became even more desperate when he saw the czar. The czar tried to take him away from the czar's sight but his majesty ordered them to halt and asked: "Who is the man?" They explained that he was a leader among the local Nihilists.

The czar was not prominent in his kindling the fire which had just occurred around Livadia. "Let him be unbound while he is in our presence," was the unexpected order given by the czar.

The moment the man's hands were freed he sprang at the czar, and he himself leaped at the czar and attacked him with his nails. Some of the officers of the czar's staff threw themselves between the Nihilist and the czar, but the latter motioned them aside, and without a word he sprang at the Nihilist, and he lay on the ground.

The Nihilist made a desperate spring towards the czar, but while he was still in the air his majesty caught him by the right arm above the elbow, and with a single stroke of his hand he threw him to the ground.

The Nihilist was not a coward, and he was not a coward. The Nihilist was not a coward, and he was not a coward.

THE REPUBLICAN SHINDY.

The Politicians Disperse to Sewer the Country Districts.

Every Republican politician who came to town Monday went home with his pocket stuffed full of copies of the INTELLIGENCER, which prints the news, and of which the extra edition of 100 copies scarcely suffices to supply the demand.

The number of the faithful who came to Lancaster was extraordinary, and some of them tarried late. At all the headquarters the leaders professed to feel satisfied with the way in which the shindy was carried out; but it was noticeable that the St. John's-Hempfield men had recovered from their coolness and physical courage of the czar.
