

DAILY INTELLIGENCER.

Published Every Evening in the Year. (Sundays Excepted) BY STEPHEN B. HERRMAN.

INTELLIGENCER BUILDING. A. W. CONNOR, CAREY BUILDING. LANCASTER, PA.

WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER. (Eight Pages.) Published Every Wednesday Morning, Two Dollars a Year in Advance.

Address all Letters and Telegrams to THE INTELLIGENCER, LANCASTER, PA.

The Lancaster Intelligencer.

LANCASTER, MAY 19, 1886.

Everhart's Exhaustive Effort. It is respectfully submitted that when a member of Congress makes but one speech in three years, he should at least have the tribute of respectful attention and freedom from interruption.

An Idle Tale. Maxwell, the Englishman who is now on trial for the murder of Preller at St. Louis, gives an awkward account of the way in which his friend came to his death and one that is not likely to save his neck.

There is no trouble about getting Irish voices to speak for Ireland in the English Parliament. Sixty-eight of the eighty-five Irish Nationalists are clamoring to talk for home rule, and a selection must be made from among them.

It is not always advantageous to be a millionaire. Those who are seeking the pardon of Milton Weston, the penitentiary for manslaughter, committed in Westmoreland county, are presenting a letter from the cashier of a Chicago bank saying that, instead of being a millionaire, Weston could not effect the loan of $1,000 at that bank.

When doctors disagree there is usually some very stern fighting. This has been seen in Philadelphia where the delegates to delegates to the American Medical Association, recently in convention in St. Louis, is said to have caused the retirement of these leaders from the staff of Jefferson medical college.

The trade unions are not easy under the overshadowing growth of the Knights of Labor. They have met in convention and determined to ask the larger order not to tread on their toes. It is doubtful whether a fraternal union can prevail in the contest.

Whether or not Maxwell's story of how Preller met his death is true, his confession makes very interesting reading.

There are honeydew and honeydewers. Here is one that is to be enjoyed by Mr. Colt of Clinton, Mo., who is to marry Miss Sallie Douglass in June next.

A harrowing story of famine and desolation is reported by the Irish World as having taken place in the west of Ireland.

Must Depend on His Veto. We are unanimous for once with our esteemed contemporary the Louisville Courier-Journal in its belief that if the Democratic party is to have a practical policy upon which to go into the pending fall campaign, so far as they have any defined by presidential vetoes rather than by congressional legislation, for which the Democracy holding a majority in one House may be fairly counted in part responsible.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

It is plain to a melancholy degree that there is division of leadership or lack of responsible and trusted leadership among the dominant party in the House.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

EVERHART'S GREAT EFFORT.

In the House of Representatives, Thursday May 18, 1886, the House being in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7,580) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes—Hon. James Rowen Everhart, of Chester county, Pa., member said:

Mr. Chairman. It is proper to commend the liberal conduct of the committee in the House; but, without disparaging their merits of their labors, we may be said to differ from the objects of the measure they have introduced. The report is but a syllabus, with brief statement and scant argument, alludes to a few points, and some local demands only to say they were not complied with—admits some errors, deprecates others, and in several instances. But the appropriations are remarkable for their number, diversity, and amount.

It appears that no spot or object is too grand or too insignificant to be ignored. The salt water and the fresh, the seaweed and the sea-path, the banks and the lakes, the beds of little streams, levees cities and secure ports, shoals where the currents hurry, and through the peninsulas, and the oceanic bays, where armies whole have sunk, receive in various degrees the care and bounty of the bill. It is a bill that the distribution is not always equitably averaged and applied.

Fifteen millions of dollars is a good round sum to be laid from the public purse; and yet this committee.

The Gordian knot of it will untangle, familiar as their party.

They pour it out with the exuberance and generosity of some high power, and it falls upon the favored places as freely as the golden shower of Jupiter or Danae. Nor is the sun in every instance direct, but is qualified by obliquity of necessity. It is restricted by unpronounceable names, by obscurity of situation, by the distance, by mass of obstruction, by difficulty of distance or by lack of people.

Bayous are to be improved where the alligator wallows, and the pelican feeds; and mists where King Frost holds his carnival in palaces of ice and stores which sensual as exotic and fabulous as those of Calypso or Atlantis.

There is nothing, Mr. Chairman, which so strongly attracts the eye as the bill. The Chairman. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. Bennett. If the chair will recognize me I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stone, of Missouri. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. I move, Mr. Chairman, the committee rise.

Mr. Williams. I have moved that the committee rise. I will give the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.

Mr. Williams. My object is to give the gentleman time in the way prescribed by the rules.