AT SEA.

No moon the star-lit deeps to sound;
No shore to mar the perfect round;
With dark sails curved and prow a light,
The ship speeds onward through the night.

The parted wave glides swiftly back,
Forever closing on our track,
And crowding pearls, an endless tide,
Slip from the furrow's curling side.

Faint tropic winds, with ghostly feet,
The shadowy deck unchallenged beat,
Flit through the dusky sails, and speak
With soft, sweet lips, against my cheek.

Deep unto deep, with listening soul
I hear a solemn cadence roll;
Soft rhythmic pulses, throbbing slow,
From depths above to depths below.

One full, mysterious life, whose sound
Sweeps through creation's utmost bound,
Thrills to each sobbing breath, and hears
In rippling waves the swing of spheres.

No far-off isle of being hides
Beyond the circling of its tides;
No barren shore but sometimes glows
With dashed bloom of summer rose.

O watchful helmsman! If we go
To reef or port what heart can know,
Save that eternal currents keep
Their steady course through every deep.

So, lapped in happy dreams I lie,
The world, a bubble, floating by;
The silent sky, the whispering sea,
But hollowed hands to shelter me.

FARM AND ORCHARD.

The Feeding and Care of Chickens and Other Poultry in the Yard.

From the Germantown Telegraph.

If the good farmers wives and daughters, who frequently, and perhaps usually, assume the care of the poultry and the rearing of the chicks, were to be governed strictly by the formula laid down by those who are considered professional poultry raisers, they would be very likely to become discouraged. It is very probable that a careful investigation of facts would prove that farmers wives and daughters are fully as successful in the raising of chicks as the professional poulterer, who would recommend that the chicks have no feed for forty-eight hours after being hatched, a rule that farmers' wives would disregard entirely.

They would watch carefully the embryo hens and roosters, and when they begin to pick at straws, etc., showing signs of a desire to eat they will be fed, whether four hours or forty eight have elapsed, and their chicks will not die either. Nor do they follow any arbitrary rule regarding the character of the feed, but give very largely, when the chicks are young, of ground corn meal wet up into dough.

No special feeding might be required for special purposes, but as a rule ladies, who take the care of poultry, exercise a good degree of judgment and at the same time produce a system of economy that in these days is necessary upon the farm. For the purpose of the farm it is not as necessary to adopt systematic rule for treatment, as where breeding is carried on and some established standard desired.

Use plenty of whitewash in the poultry-house now. As the warm weather approaches the lice will appear unless precautions are taken to avoid their vermin. Clean up the poultry house and yards, dust insect powder into all the cracks and crevices, put tobacco refuse in the nests, coal-oil the roosts, and whitewash the walls of the poultry house, first adding a tablespoonful of carbolic acid to each bucket of whitewash used.

The Peach Crop Prospect in Delaware.

The Chesterfield (Md.) Transcript recently devoted considerable space to letters from various parts of the peninsula concerning the prospects for a peach crop, from which we collate the following facts:

In Kent county reports all agree upon the prospect of a full crop. In Queen Anne county the crop is much less promising. The reports say: "From Sudlerville, out of thirty orchards twelve are a total failure. Yellow peaches are more injured than white." From Centerville, "orchards on rivers and bays will have three-fourths of a crop; inland orchards one-half. Many young trees have died."

The editor of Smyrna Record gives a hopeful account of prospects, and predicts a crop twice as large as last year, but with few yellow peaches.

Editor Salisbury, of Dover, presents for that section a darkened view in reporting that there will be no more than one-fourth of a crop. The same is said to be true of the tender varieties in Talbot county, although Smocks promise well. Editors Hynsen, of the Milford News and Advertiser, and Clark, of the Sussex Journal, report unfavorable prospects. Wicomico and Worcester counties report full crops.

But with all these varying conditions the Transcript editors, by way of summary, give expression to the following view of the situation: "Prospect good, probatably four times as good as last year; estimated crop 150,000 baskets." We hope it may be realized.

A Famous Woman-Farmer.

Mrs. Barney Newell, who is nearly seventy years old, resides in Springfield, Franklin county, Mass. Her husband died twenty years since and left her with a farm of 140 acres, a part of it under mortgage. She is entirely alone, never having had children to assist her. She has kept the farm, paid up the mortgage, made repairs on her building, and at the present time is hale and hearty. For the past ten years she has had her house filled with summer boarders, and all who once enjoy her hospitality are anxious to come again and bring their friends with them. At the present time she employs four servants, two on the farm and the same in doors, except in the summer when more help is needed in the house. Her farm is well stocked with nice cows, from which she makes and sells for the highest price her gilt-edged butter. She also keeps poultry, having kept through the past winter 140 fowls, which she herself never failed to feed every morning. Last autumn in October a hen stole her nest and brought off sixteen chicks. She raised them all and now they pay her in nice fresh eggs. She has 200 hens and chickens all hatched the natural way. She keeps two horses and any number of all kinds of pet animals, who follow her around as she walks over her farm.

In cooking there is no equal and that is one great attraction which more than fills her ample house every summer, for she is obliged to refuse a great number who apply.

INDESTRUCTIBLE GRAINING.

NO CRACKING, NO PEELING, NO BLISTERING.

We have a system of graining NEW WOOD that must, in the near future, take the place of the old system on all new work, its merits being as follows: Total abolition of a painted ground-work, speed and cleanliness in working it, beauty and transparency of finish, smoothness and durability, and the capability of receiving as high finish as hard wood by the same methods. This process is the nearest approach to natural wood that has yet been discovered. Call and see samples. GUTHRIE & SON,

BUSINESS EDUCATION PAYS.

No young man should enter into business while he is ignorant of the manner of regulating books. Natural ability will not supply the deficiency, or prevent affairs from getting into confusion. The course of instruction as adopted at the LANCASTER BUSINESS COLLEGE will be of advantage to every man whatever his future occupation may be.

It will teach business habits and attention to accounts, which will give increased interest and success. Essential to the success of the Farmer, Mechanic and the Professional man.
