The recent death of a relative of Mise Folsom has changed the original plans for the wedding, and the invitations will now be limited to a few of the near relative and the members of the cabinet and ives and the members of the cabinet and tions will now be limited to a few of the near relatives and the members of the cabinet and their wives.

Rev. Dr. Sunderland, of the First Presbyterian church of Washington, will officiate. The escentiony will be followed by a collation, and the wedding is all of its details will be plain and undestriations.

Miss Folsom arrived at New York on Thursday on the steamer Noordland. She was med flown the bay by a revenue cutter and was escorted by Colonel Lamont up the North river to Twenty-third atreet, where she was conveyed to the house of a friend, where she is staying for the present in retirement. Those who saw the bride-elect on the sieamship describe her as tail, handsome, and in complexion a light brunette. Her blue eyes are large and beautiful, with long black lashes. Her complexion is very clear.

The Noordland left Antwerp on the lith instant. The Belgian newspapers, about the 10th instant, said that the lady's modesty would not permit her to engage passage on one of the Liverpool steamers. Miss Folsom, her mother and uncle, Benjamin, left Paris for Liverpool punctually to sail on the Servia. But the excitement over the receipt of the various cablegrams was so intense that the programme was altered, and after going half the Journey towards Liverpool, Muss Folsom considered it prudent to turn back. This she did, reaching Antwerp a few days before the departure of the Noordland. The railway train which carried the majority of the personal effects of the bride left Paris before Miss Folsom endeavored to stop their delivery at Liverpool, he found it was impossible. These trunks contain all the bride's trousseau. They were sent out by another steamer. The baggage which accompanied the pariy over on the Noordland consisted of six trunks. Upon reaching Antwerp the United States Consul presented himself to Miss Folsom and mother and bade them. the party over on the Noordland consisted of six trunks. Upon reaching Antwerp the United States Consul presented himself to Miss Folsom and mother and bade them welcome to his residence. Mr. Folsom went to a hotel. They accepted his invitation and remained his guests uptil the steamer left. While awaiting this the Folsoms were lattroduced to Mrs. F. Marsily, the sister-in-law of the Belgium agent for the Red Star tine. It was the latter individual who made all the necessary preparations for the homeward necessary preparations for the homeward trip. He insisted that they should have a grood guide to-secont them across the Atlantic, and the result of this was that Mrs. Marsily and the result of this was that Mrs. Marsily accompanied the Folsoms to these shores.

About five hours after leaving the Light of Flushing astern, the Noordland rushed headirst into a violent gale. The wind came up with frightful vehemence from the west, created a very high and dangerous cross sea. The Noordland is a grand sea vessel, but this storm was too much for her. Time after time the hugo waves would strike her side, causing her to pitch and roll like a log. Missing her to pitch and roll like a log. Missing her to pitch and roll like a log. line hingo waves would strike her mide, causling her to pitch and roll like a log. Miss Folsom was the first one to be attacked by sea sickness. It was very slight at first, but by noontime of the 16th she had to give way and went to her cabin. The ship's surgeon paid her more than usual attention, but it was the night of the 20th before she had sufficiently recovered to leave her betth. The ficiently recovered to leave her berth. The weather for the most part of the voyage was very unfavorable for deck promenades, and at the advice of Mrs. Marsily Miss Foisom and mother confined themselves either to the saloon or their cabins. The remainder of the pissage was uneventful. The baggage, which was taken on by the chandler, consisted of six pieces—three trunks, two boxes and a willow basket. Two trunks, two boxes and a willow basket. Two of the former were very large. One was about lour feet in length and three feet in height. It had a brown covering and brass fastenings. The other had a gray linen covering. There were two large red crosses painted on them—one on each end—and an English railway label. After the Noordland had been docked at the Red Star line pier in Jersey City, a number of persons went on board and begged Chief Steward Gough for the privilege of taking anything which Miss Folsom might have left in her cabin. They succeeded in getting a veil, which they cut into a hundred pieces.

To a reporter Mrs. Owens, the stewardess, in speaking of Miss Folsom, said: "She is a in speaking of Miss Folsom, said: "She is a beautiful woman. She treated me as if I beautiful woman. She treated me as if I were a traveling companion. At the concert, which was given on board Wednesday evening, she did not participate in the singing or reading, but sat alongside of her mother with a keen interest for everything that was going on. Captain J. Codman, a Boston sea captain, composed a poem about the sea for the steamship company's monthly paper, and she liked it so well that she requested Captain Nickais to present for the steamship company's monthly paper, and she liked it so well that she requested Captain Nickais to prove for her steamship company's monthly paper, and she liked it so well that she repaper, and she liked it so well that she requested Captain Nickels to procure for her a copy of the words. We have had some fine passengers on the Noordland, but for beauty and dignity none to equal Miss Folsom."

Second Officer Nelson, speaking on the same subject, grew quite eloquent and said:

"She is a tall, handsome woman with a commanding presence. We officers are not disposed to know who is on hourd the viscoli.

manding presence. We officers are not dis-posed to know who is on board the vessel. I myself did not learn of the presence of our distinguished tourists for some days after we left Antwerp. There were about seven tywe left Antwerp. There were about seven tyfive first-class passengers on board, but which was Miss Folsom I did not know.
But when they told me the president's intended bride was on board I picked her out on the instant. How? Why, by her fine stately bearing. I knew she was just such a woman whom the head of a great country like this would select for a partner."
One of the cabin passengers of the Noordland, who became acquainted with Miss Folsom during the voyage said:

"She is certainly a very charming and dignified girl, and cannot fail to be highly thought of and admired wherever she may

The reporter's informant was not in-clined to talk upon the subject further, but finally confirmed the truth of the description of Miss Folsom that she is tall, handsome, with a very clear complexion, slightly bru-netie; that she has blue eyes, large and beau-tiful, with long lashes, and that her manner is frank and winning, and remarkably free from affectation.

Robert of Lincoln is gally dressed,
Wearing a bright black wedding coat:

"feathered songsters."

And what if some appreciative girl fastens the saucy dandy, in his rich clothes, to her spring hat? "Alas, sias," weep her brothers, "how cruel of you to kill the poor bird, and before his honeymoon is over." Do the sympathetic brothers reflect that bobolinks degenerate into gready, fat rice bridge and it degenerate into greedy, fat rice birds, and if they adorn not a spring hat in New York they will become victims of gridirons in Charleston? What is sweeter than the whistle of a

What is sweeter than the whistle of a partridge to one wandering in the happy autumn fields and thinking of the days that are no more? Could any woman bring death and destruction in the shape of guns and dogs into the fragrant, peaceful haunts of gay and gailant Bob White? Look into the milliner's windows and then across at the restaurant door. What a pitiful display of roughened plumage, drawn-up feet and death glazed eyes. Birds intended to feast the eye on beautiful hats are trapped and carefully killed. A woman never kills anything from wanton crueity; but why do men shoot bats and aparrows and crows? They neither wear them nor eat them. No amount of sentiment or logic can ever convince me that teathers are crueier than fur as trimmings, nor that a man who eats dozens of quail every winter is more righteous than a woman who wears one dove on her Gainsborough hat.

Charles Brock was complained against several weeks ago before Alderman Barr for committing an assault and battery on his wife. He signed a bail bond for his appearance at a hearing and promised to send security to the alderman's office. That is the last the alderman saw of him until to-day. The case was returned to court and a true bill found at the April seasions. A bench warrant was placed in the hands of officest Leman and he captured Brock this morning. He wanted time to look for ball which the alderman declined to grant, because Brock had deceived him once and a commitment was made out. Arrest of a Fugitive.

LIBRE AND SURETY OF PRACE.

Former Lancaster Countian Accused Writing Vile Letters About a Woman. From the Harrisburg Telegraph.
This morning Detective Harry Hoopes arrested at Millerstown, Perry county, a man named J. C. Shaffer, charged with surety of the peace and libel. Shaffer was brought to Harrisburg and placed in jail, and will be given a hearing before Alder-man Maurer on Monday afternoon. Shaffer was originally from Lancaster county and removed from there to Millersburg, Dauphin county. He is a coach painter by trade, but at one time was a local prescher. In Millersburg he fell in love with Annie Ferree, a reputable young lady, the daughter of U. D. Ferree, esq., a prominent citizen. His attentions were not reciprocated, which seems to have aggravated him. For overa year Squire Ferree and his daughter have received the most scurrilons letters, containing the vitest and most awful language, making charges that were of a monstrous character. Shaffer was suspected of being the author of these letters, but the thing could not be fastened on him. Revently, Mr. Haines, who resides in Steelton, received letters of a scurrilous character against Miss Ferree, who was visiting his daughter at the Ferree, who was visiting his daughter at the time. The thing grew intolerable, and at last Mr. Ferree placed it in the hands of Detective Hoopes. When shown the letters. and others that contained the signature of Shafter, Detective Hoopes instantly fixed upon Shaffer as the author. He began work on the case, when an incident happened that brought the matter to a crisis. Last Sunday Shaffer dined at 'Squire Ferree's house in Millersburg and afterwards went to his home in Millerstown, Perry county, where he wrote a letter to a friend in which he said that while he sat at Mr. Ferree's table he had while he sat at Mr. Ferrec's table he had three revolvers in his pocket containing seventeen loads, and he was going to kill the old man at the time, but thought he would put it off for a while. This letter was given to Mr. Ferres, and on consultation with his attorney in Harrisburg, he brought suit before Aiderman Maurer for surety of the peace and libel. A letter written to Mr. Haines about Miss Ferree. It covers eight pages of yellow wrapping paper, is closely written, and its contents were simply awful. Shaffer does not admit nor deny that he wrote the letter, but said he had himself received letters. Elizabethtown Notes ELIZABETHTOWN, May 29.-Notwithstanding the rain on Thursday evening, the Reformed church of this borough was almost filled with an appreciative audience, on the occasion of the Sunday school anniversary. Services were conducted by the energetic Services were conducted by the energetic pastor, Rev. S. M. Roeder, consisting of responsive readings and singing and prayer. The report showed the successful condition of the school under Supt. Hoffman. The adverse of welcome delivered by a boy, and a vocal solo by Miss Keller, were attractive features of the programme. Prof. W. J. Johnson, of Manheim, delivered an interesting anniversary address, holding the attention of the children for a half hour. The church was decorated with flowers. The

Some days ago John Duffy and two friends visited a new building up town to take a look at a new tin roof being placed upon it. To get to the roof it was necessary to ascend a hod-carrier's ladder of the ordinary conhod-carrier's ladder of the ordinary con-struction, set almost perpendicular. Durly was the last of the party to ascend, and when he got well up to the top of the ladder, he looked down and saw that his dog "Dash," a large pointer, was following him. Fearing that the dog would fall and hurt himself, Mr. Duffy took hold of him and carried him down, after he had ascended fully sixteen teet. He would no doubt have gone to the top of the ladder had he been permitted to do so. Dash is a very intelligent dog—opens doors and gates, no matter how they are fastened, understands matter how they are fastened, understands all that is said to him, and on many matters seems to reason as well as some men and women do.

The Case of Dr. Roebuck From the Philadelphia Times,
If Dr. Roebuck had stated that he did no meet certain parties by agreement to confer about the transfer of his influence from Summy and Weaver to Stehman and Rein-chl; that he did not secure and consider or propose terms for the transfer of his influence for present or future compensation, and that he had no knowledge whatever of the named two thousand five hundred dollars, or of any other sum, to be employed in a combination with which he conferred and in which he considered the question of taking a secret or open part, his denial would be complete; but on these important points his denial is silent, and thereby his answer becomes a plea of and thereby his answer becomes a pies or confession and avoidance.

The accusations made sgainst Dr. Roe-buck which are covered by his denial, are grave enough; but the accusations which are not noted in his denial, go to the very marnot noted in his denial, go to the very mar-row of the issue of his political integrity. With his hopes of future political preferment dulled by these accusations, he owes much more to bimself, if they are intrue, than a mere newspaper challenge to his accusers "to produce evidence to sustain their state-ments." He should force them to to meet the issue before the courts—the only tribunal where he can be completely violated if the where he can be completely vindicated if he merits vindication. In short, his denial is studiedly imperfect and wholly unsatisfactory, and he must try again in some better way, or remain under the warranted imputation that he dare not seek a vindication beyond the Scotch verdict of "not proven,"

Kicked in the Pace by a Horse.

From the Mt. Joy Herald. Henry Hoffman, son of our townsman, Levi Hoffman, was found unconscious on Thursday morning in the stable on John H. Engle's place, near town, with whom he lives. Dr. Ziegler was sent for, and on examination he found his jaw tractured and a number of teeth broken out, the result of a kick from a colt. He did not become en-tirely conscious until evening, when he com-municated the manner in which the secident municated the manner in which the accident occurred by writing on a slate. He had stepped into the box stall where the colt was asleep or dozing, and laid his hand on him, which frightened the usually very gentle animal into kicking, with the result above stated. This is the second time he has been kicked in the face. His injuries are very painful, but not necessarily of a dangerous character.
