A Question About a Barber. The question is raised, in Philadelphia, as to whether a barber is an expert on wool. If this is not just the issue it is ething akin to it. It is very not easy to tell just what the matter in dispute is: the evident fact being that the disputants do not know this themselves, or are not willing, at least, to discover to others that they know it. The Philadelphia Record is strongly for free wool, and the Press is strongly contrariwise. It will be noted that this is a quarrel over the tariff. The Press has hired a high tariff professor to maintain the high tariff doctrine in that thick and thin way, which is so customary to professors. The Record seems to be loaded down to the gunwale with free trade enthusiasts who can see no good in any other doctrine, nor any evil in the wildest practice of their own.

Philadelphia happens to be a town where wool fabrics are largely manufactured; and the Record had a fair chance to see advocacy of free wool warmly sympathized with at a town meeting held the other day to consider the matter and to boost free wool.

And here is where the new issue came in : for one of the German band of barbers of the place, named Herwig, made a speech for free wool. The Press noted that Mr. Herwig was a barber discussing wool. The Record queried whether a barber had not as good a right as any other man to discuss wool. The Press replied that while the profession of the barber is an eminently responsible one, it does not particularly conduce to an expert knowledge of wool; refraining, we believe, with extraordinary self-control, from any intimation that there is a wool on which a barber is an expert, though ft is not a manufactured wool, nor imported, though the original plants were.

If we may be permitted to settle this controversy between our contemporaries, we will suggest that our own opinion is that while Mr. Herwig, as a barber, is not by his occupation entitled to be considered an expert in the wool weaving industry, or the effect of the duty on wool thereon, yet if Mr. Herwig so illustrated and emblazoned the question of free wool when he it at the Philadelphia meeting as to demonstrate the profundity of his information and the soundness of his logic on the question, Mr. Herwig justified his appearance. As to this, opinions will be apt to differ widely; and we presume that it will never be settled unanimously whether Herwig, the barber, did well or ill in undertaking to instruct the people of Philadelphia as to the effect of free wool upon their industry.

Disabled for Manual Labor.

There are no signs that Senator Ingalls has made anything for himself, his party or his country by his malicious, vituperative, coarse and mendacious attack upon Pension Commissioner Black. At the same time it is notable that many of the party organs which usually howl and shrick when an assault is made upon any Republican who happened to have been a soldier, have received this onslaught without a word of reproach for its author, or of defense for its object, if not with some quiet encouragement. Their course is due to the fact that Gen. Black is a Democrat, holding office by appointment of a Democratic administration, and not because Ingalls' reproaches were well founded.

Gen. J. C. Black was one of the best soldiers of the late war in every respect. He came back from its battle fields most terribly wounded and shattered in health. His hands are maimed and his body is literally bullet riddled. For years his life hung in the balance and it was only saved by operations of most extreme peril and excruciating pain. During this period upon a presentation of his case to Congress he was voted the largest pension on the ratings, $100 a month, based on his total disability for manual labor. That is the only standard by which pensions are granted. A man's mind may be never so clear; his tongue may be eloquent to stir the masses and his means of earning a livelihood by intellectual or professional work may be undiminished; but his decreased ability or utter incapacity for what is commonly called "manual labor," is the measure of his merit for a pension as our law stands and is construed. There are blind men, like the present chaplain of the United States House of Representatives, whose gift of language compensates for the absence of other facilities; his lecture on what a blind man saw in Europe draws audiences, and pays him better than any manual labor be could secure in full bodily health. The late Thaddeus Stevens was at the height of his public influence when weakest in body; Alexander H. Stephens was for many years a helpless invalid Calboun was ghostly in bodily appearance long before his star set in the gloom of death; Oliver P. Morton was paralyzed in his lower limbs when he was most intense in political activity.

There is no end of men conspicuous and ifluential in political, professional and literary life and active with intellectual work who are totally or partially disabled for manual labor. Had their condition resulted from military service, they would be entitled to pensions, notwithstanding their ability to make large fees and fortunes. So and equally faithful in promoting honest claims; he has turned out some of the humbugs in the bureau, and let in honest men and honest ways. Because he has been able to do this he is dedenounced by a violent partisan senator as an impostor, in drawing the pension of a man totally disabled. There is no apparent warrant for such denunciation. There seems to be no standard for granting pensions except disability for manual labor. Here, for instance, our esteemed fellow citizen, Comrade M. Brosius, draws a pension because a rifle ball shattered his shoulder and disabled his right arm, crippling at least one-half his ability to do physical work, though it does not impair nis qualifications as a lawyer, nor even lessen his graces as an orator : Major Ellwood Griest, of our esteemed contemporary, the Inquirer, writes with no less vigor because he draws a pension for wounds received in one of his wrists that lessened his fitness for mechanical work; Alderman J. K. Barr is borne on the pension rolls because of diminished capacity for manual labor, but it does not prevent him from exercising his aldermanic or clerical functions. It is only when the alleged disability for manual labor does not exist or was not contracted in the military service that the pensioner is an impostor.

Gen. Black has shown himself to be a efficient administrator of his departnt. He has been alert to check frauds this county.

Declining the Bishopric.

Phillips Brooks declines to be a bishop in Philadelphia. He declares that the present work "welcomes and demands his care," and that he will not leave it. Dr. Brooks has a very large and wealthy congregation in Boston with a great big church; and they say that if he should leave it, the congregation would go to pieces. The necessary conclusion is that if the congregation should be kept together, Dr. Brooks must stay with it; and he has decided that this should be done and that this is his work.

It is a two-sided question, however, as it may be very strongly maintained that a congregation which is only kept together by its devotion to its pastor is not composed of angelic material; to which, however, a pertinent reply would be that if they were fit for angels Dr. Brooks would have no useful work among them. So that it comes to this, that it is admitted that this is not a congregation of saints. but of worldlings who go to church to hear a good preacher, and among whom the preacher should stay, to draw them to church, in the hope that stray seed may fall and fructify in the big church garden. May-

Meanwhile it is most probable that Dr. Brooks' declination of the bishopric was wise upon the ground that he is better as a preacher and pastor than he would be as bishop, since he is not particularly noted for executive ability. The best bishops are not always found among the best preachers, from whom, however, they are generally chosen.

Odd and Even.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has handed down a decision upon which the six judges who heard the argument are evenly divided. It was a case of speculation in oil, and the defense was that it was a gambling transaction. The plaintiff obtained a verdict below, and as it requires a inajority of the supreme court to reverse the judgment of an inferior jurisdiction. this verdict is affirmed, though as many of the supreme judges disapprove it as there are in favor of sustaining it.

This is not what courts of last resort are for. Suitors are entitled to something different. The number of judges is made odd so as to secure the judgment of a majority, and when one judge has to be absent from an argument it either ought to be postponed or another member should go off, so as to have a final judgment of a majority.

They Will Resist. We are glad to see the retail tea and coffee dealers of Philadelphia are organizing to resist and test the constitutionality of the law which prohibits the issue of checks or gifts to purchasers with their purchases.

So long as no element of chance or lottery is introduced into this trade custom. we see no justification for legal inhibition of it, and we have grave doubts of the constitutionality of such a law.

In June the sun enters the sign of Cancer You cannot make a pun on the signs of the Zodiac," said a friend to Sheridan. By Jemmini I Cancer," was the quick reply. In June the young summer sun first tries his . strength on suffering humanity, and then devotes his attention to raising mosquitoes and grain. So many lives have been lost on the rail roads in New York that the railroad conmissioners introduced in the legislature of 1885 a bill, which was passed and became a law, to compel the railroads to adopt certain appliances to guard the lives of the employes. The roads under the law are required to have safety switches, to maintain suitable signals and to place flagmen at dangerous crossings. One provision of the law does not go into effect until July 1, 1886. This says that after that date none but automatic couplers shall be placed upon any new freight car used on the roads of the state. A test of car couplers is to be made in East Albany on June 16, and the company which succeeds in making the best impression on the railroad commissioners with its invention will get the pleasing contract of remodelling 146,000 freight cars running over 7,000 miles of railroad.

Ir has often been a source of wonder that the Romans never attained the art of printing, but now a German antiquarian has offered a satisfactory explanation. When Rome was at the height of its glory, the wealthy class owned vast numbers of slaves and labor was extremely cheap. Even freemen were willing to work for small compen sation, as they had the labor of educated slaves to compete with. Roman publishers instructed great numbers of men in the art of writing rapidly and the use of steno graphic contraction was general. If a publisher had a hundred men at his disposal who would write for ten hours a day, a document which took one hour to write would be multiplied in the course of a day to a thous-

THE plucky fight that Editor Missemer is making against the Mount Joy council is the most interesting event now transpiring in the announcement that Charles Waring, one of the best known railway contractors in England, has prepared a paper advocating the purchase of the English railways by the government, which will shortly be published. It is understood to represent the views of Mr. Chamberlain and of a strong section of the Liberal Radicals. Mr. Waring maintains that the profits of traders, as now determined by the rates of private companies, are in restraint of healthy exchange. He points out as an illustration of how trade is taxed, that of the present railway capital of England, £250,000,000 receives from 4 to 5 per cent. interest, £70,000,000 from 5 to 6 per cent, £60,000,000 from 6 to 7 per cent. and £7,000,000 over 7 per cent., when the normal interest rate has fallen in twenty years from 5 to 3 % per cent, and is still falling. He that to buy the rallways of the United Kingdom would cost a round $5,000,-000,000, but he maintains that the purchase would only be a conversion of railway stock into government stock, as there would be only a small number who would prefer money to government stock. Finally be says the compulsory expropriation of railway property presents no difficulties in principle, as a large portion of it consists of land which has been acquired under compulsory powers. The scheme is a very big one, and perhaps is not beyond the reach of such a imited monarchy as Great Britain. In the United States it would never do, as it would be a long stride in the direction of centralizazation of power in the national government, which would end in encroschments on the liberty of the states.

CORNELL University was in great luck when Surrogate Lyon, of Tompkins county, N. Y., decided the McGraw-Fiske will con test in its favor, but it will enjoy a greater measure of good fortune if no appeal is taken, or, if taken, it becomes of no effect. Most of the $1,500,000 of the bequest is for library purposes, which would give Cornell the largest endowment in the country for this purpose. The will of Jennie McGraw Fiske was made in July, 1880, just after her marriage to Professor Willard Fisks. She bequeathed nearly a million and a quarter of dollars to benevolent institutions, relatives and friends, including $300,000 to her husband : the remainder of her fortune was given to Cornell University. The will 000 to the maintenance of the McGraw building, $200,000 and all the residuary estate to the library. This latter, largely in Western lands, was deemed of small value at the time of the making of the will, but it is now estimated at $1,000,000. The point on which the contestants chiefly relied was that the charter of the university forbade it holding property to an amount exceeding $3,000,000 in value, and that as its property already exceeded that sum, it could not take under the will. Judge Lyon finds, however, that while Cornell University at the time of Mrs. Fiske's death was receiving the benefit of property amounting to more than $3,000,000 t was then actually the possessor and owner. within the meaning of the charter, of prop erty worth less than $600,000. If an appeal is taken, the real stress of the controversy will fall upon this question.

MR. TISDEL, the commissioner sent by the president to investigate the claims of African International association, relative to the wealth of the Congo basin, some time ago, returned an unfavorable report, for which he was taken to task by Mr. Stanley. He replies sharply in a letter to Secretary Bayard. urging a full investigation of the subject in order that it may be learned just why the United States became sponsor for the Congo He says " I have heard Henry Sanford, ex-United States minister to rielgium, declare time and again that he wrote the clause about the Congo in President Arthur's message, supplied all the information to the department of state, and passed the bill in Congress recognizing a state having no existence. When I arrived in Brussels I was invited to the residence of Mr. Sanford, where was unfolded the scheme of the trading company, with the intimation that a favorable report would assure my fortune. Mr. Stanley's writings are romantic, but what he says can hardly be taken as proof that I am wro since his works are openly denounced by African explorers as gross exaggerations. The country above Vivi is worthless and white men can not live there."

Upon report of viewers, popular vote of approval, and decree by the court, out of the old township of Drumore, this county, two new and separate townships, East Drumore West Drumore, have recently been created. At the spring election officers were chosen for the whole township and as these are somewhat divided between the different parts of the original township, three new school directors, one supervisor, an auditor, and clerk were elected in each district; an assessor in the east district and constable in the west. In the east end it was claimed by many that there was also to be elected a jus-tice of the peace, and the Democrats gener-ally and many Republicans voted for Robert W. Moore, of Buck. The officers, however, refused to return this vote. In the east end E. M. Stautter, Democratic candidate for school director, for three years, received in all 125 votes to 116 for Elias Aument, his Republican competitor for the place, but II of these were east for Stauffer for one year, and 2 for the two year term, reducing the vote to 110 and letting Aument in. It will be observed from the following complete returns that the Democrats elected one school director, constable, and clerk in the west township. DRUMORE WEST.

Congressman O'Donnell's Conversion

From the Washington Post. A good story is being told at the expense of Congressman O'Donnell, of Michigan. During the progress of the bill providing for scientific instruction in the public schools, under the control of the national government, upon the effect of alcohol upon the human system. Mr. O'Donnell, out of the pure chivalry of his nature, paid a great deal of attention to the ladies who were interested in the matter, so much so, indeed, that the ladies thought they had secured a convert in him. When the voting came, however, Mr. O'Don-nell was not in the House. A few days afterward he found on his desk a large afterward he found on his desk a large parcel of Western temperance papers, with a glowing article, marked with a blue pencil describing in triumphant terms his conversion to temperance principles. His tellow-members got hold of the story and have since been bandying goodnatured jokes at the expense of the "recialmed and converted" congressman to such an extent that he has been obliged to "set loop up," more than once just to show that he 'em up " more than once just to show that he was still " one of the boys."
