A FAMILY FIGHT.

Chairman Lutz, of the Philadelphia Street Car Men's Committee, Being lovestigated. It seems there is some difficulty between the members of an assembly of Knights of Labor in Philadelphia, composed of men employed by the street railway companies. Notably Hiram Lutz, chairman of the arbitration board of Assembly No. 5,356, and his associates in the board are dissatisfied with the patched-up settlement of the troubles on the Traction company's lines. Lutz says he is disgusted with the actions of the members of the executive board of District Assembly No. I, and declares that they do not know how to handle the troubles of the street car how to handle the troubles of the street car men. They are making a counter attack on Lutz, who was originally from Petersburg, this county, later of this city, and is well known in Laucaster. The element which is opposed to him has been looking up his "record" in this city and claims to have de-veloped discreditable facts; while Lutz de-fies his enemies to prove anything damaging even "if they go back to his school days."

Going to Tennessee, Quite a number of Amish Mennonites were on the streets this morning, and attracted considerable attention by reason of their long hair, full beards and peculiar dress-broad-brimmed, low-crowned hats, shad-bellied coats and straight vests with books and eyes instead of buttons and wide-legged trousers made with a "fall" instead of the more fashionable "fly." On making inquiry as to the cause of the unusual influx of these to the cause of the unusual influx of these plain, honest people, we learned that the following named of them were about leaving for Knoxville, Tenn., S. These people go to Knox county, Tennessee, to visit a colony of the "peculiar people" there established, and prospering as these people always do. The visitors will be gone about two weeks.
